THESES.

I.

Erysipelas is a peculiar unhealthy form of inflammation, which may attack various tissues, but which, wherever situated, exhibits certain characters, that distinguish it from ordinary inflammation.

DRUITT.

II.

Unum tantum datur virus syphiliticum.

III.

Ulcus, quod dicitur chancker, non semper primum est syphilidis symptoma.

IV.

Recte SEITZ conjunctivitidem, a Doct. VON GRAEFE diphtheriticam dictam, blennorrhoeam ichoroso-purulentam appellat.

V.

Amputatio continuo post laesionem externam scrotinae praefenda.

VI.

Errant, qui putent vulnus a cane rabido inflictum semper esse exsecandum atque urendum, etiamsi longum jam tempus praeterlapsum sit.

VII.

Si dubites, num hernia incarcerata sit, operatio instituenda.

VIII.

Ulcera chronica sunt sananda.

IX.

De gastrotomia valet illud: "melius anceps remedium quam nullum."

X.

In fracturis complicatis fasciae e gypso paratae
rejiciendae sunt.

XI.

Cruribus incurvatis fulcimenta ferrea non sunt adhibenda.

XII.

Trepanatio tum solum in censum venit, ubi signa pressionis cerebri per fragmentum ossis ad-sunt.

XIII.

Minus recte DRUITT de operatione cataractae per depressionem: "It is a clumsy and violent operation."

XIV.

Compressio arteriae ad sanandum aneurysma optimum est artis praesidium.

XV.

Syphilisatio, quam vocant, reprobanda est.

XVI.

Minus recte BLACKBURN: "Excision is advisable
"in the shoulder and elbow; it is admissible, though
"of doubtful utility, in the ankle: and it is inad-
"missible, except under very peculiar circumstances,
"in the wrist, hip and knee."

XVII.

Minus recte VINCENT de fracturis claviculae: "Ban-
"dages do little good commonly, and are not re"quired, if the patient keeps his bed."
