PREFACE.

Most of the poems in this volume are now printed for the first time. The corresponding prose versions will be found in Stokes' edition of the Rennes Dindshenchas, in vols. xv and xvi of the Revue Celtique. I have followed in general the order of the Rennes manuscript, but have inserted some poems which do not occur in that codex. Some of these are late additions to the Dindshenchas, and are here printed as nearly as possible in the places which they occupy in the Book of Lecan and the other codices in which they are found. As no two copies of the Dindshenchas, among those which I have used, have exactly the same contents, an editor is obliged to use his own judgment to some extent. The arrangement here adopted seems to me preferable to that of Stokes, who relegates these later additions to an appendix, thereby obscuring the geographical order which the compilers of the Dindshenchas observed. That there is such an order was first noticed, so far as I know, by Mr. G. H. Orpen, in the Journal of the Society of Antiquaries (Ireland), March, 1906, p. 29.

In some cases a poem which is found only in the Book of Leinster or in some small group of manuscripts has been set beside a different poem on the same place which occurs in the Rennes codex and other copies. On the same principle the poem on Róiriu in Úi Failge is placed beside Róiriu in Úi Muiredaig, and those on Eó Mugna and Eó Rossa after Mag Mugna.

The problem of arrangement will become more complicated in my next volume, in which I hope to complete the text of the Metrical Dindshenchas. When I reach the final volume, which is intended to contain, among other matters, a description of the manuscripts, I hope to state fully the facts as to the order followed in the various copies.

In constructing the text of the poems I have attached rather less weight than in former volumes to the authority of the Book of Leinster, and rather more to that of R and B (which are very closely related), especially when they are supported by H and  $S_3$ . The Book of Lecan, the Book of Úi Maine, and the Stowe manuscript D  $\Pi$  2 are very untrustworthy guides in doubtful places.

In orthography I have as a rule tried to approximate to the general practice of the Book of Leinster; but no uniform standard can be fixed, especially as the spelling is constantly varied in order to mark the rhymes.

The poem on Eó Mugna (which is only preserved in S) and those on Carn Fráich, Ard na Ríag, Inber Múada, Carn Amalgaid, Mag Tibra, and Sliab Gam (only in Lc.) are reproduced as they stand in the manuscript, except as specified in the critical notes; but I have not thought it necessary to indicate expansions by italics, unless some shade of doubt were possible. On the other hand, in editing the poems which are only found in L (Maistiu II, Róiriu in Úi Failge, Eó Rossa, Sliab Mairge I, Mag Femin I), I have supplied marks of length and introduced some slight alterations of spelling. This applies also to that part of the poem on Carmun for which L is the only authority.

These and other inconsistencies are partly due to the long time which has elapsed since the earlier pages of this volume were put in type, and to the necessity of printing off each sheet as it was finished. The same cause is in part responsible for the long list of Corrigenda.

Mr. W. J. Purton has been good enough to read the proofs of the whole volume and suggest corrections. Dr. Bergin has kindly done the same for pp. 49-80. To the Rev. Charles Plummer I owe a collation of the Rawlinson text of Tond Clidna I.

Hearken, ye Leinstermen of the graves, O host that rule Raigne of hallowed rights, till ye get from me, gathered on every hand, the fair legend of Carmun high in fame!

Carmun, gathering place of a hospitable fair, with level sward for courses:— the hosts that used to come to its celebration conquered in its bright races.

A burial-ground of kings is its noble cemetery, even specially dear to hosts of high rank; under the mounds of assembly are many of its host of a stock ever-honoured.

To bewail queens and kings, to lament revenges and ill deeds, there came many a fair host at harvest-time across the noble smooth cheek of ancient Carmun.

Was it men, or a man of mighty prowess, or woman with passionate jealousy, that brought the market a title not unreputed, and gave its proper name to noble Carmun?

CARMUN.

Not men it was, nor wrathful man, but one fierce marauding womanbright was her precinct and her famefrom whom Carmun got its name at the first. 25 Carmun, wife of the son of fierce Dibad, son of right hospitable Doirche of the hosts, son of Ancgeis rich in substance, was a leader with experience in many battles. No supply of gain appeased them 30 in their ardent desire for noble Banba; because they were distressed perpetually in the East, the children of the son of Dibad and their mother. They fared westward for the second time -Dian and Dub and Dothur,-35 from the East out of distant Athens, they and Carmun their mother. In the borders of the Tuatha De the folk of a hostile wedlock ravaged the fruit of every land to the shore: 40 it was a dreadful lawless pillage. Carmun, by means of every spell of fame, destroyed all sap of swelling fruit, after strife waged with all arts unlawful, and the sons through battle and lawlessness. Then the Tuatha De perceived them; 45 horror and hideousness betrayed them: for every cruel deed they did, the Tuntha De inflicted the like number upon them.

Crichinbel—no deception this!
and Lug Laebach son of Cacher

Be Chuilli . . . above all battlefields and Ai son of Ollam,

The stern four, equal-strong,
said to them on overtaking them,
"A woman is here to match your mother, three men to the brothers three;

"Death to you—no choice ye would choose, no blessing, no lucky wish! or else leave with good grace a hostage; depart from Erin ye three only!"

Those men departed from us; stern means were found to expel them; though it seemed distant to them, they leave here Carmun—alive in her narrow cell.

Every pledge [was given] that is not transgressed with safety, the sea with its beasts, heaven, earth with its bright array, that the strong chiefs should not come southward so long as the sea should be round Erin.

Carmun, death and extinction carried her off, it came upon her in ungentle shape:

70 she found her fate, as was right, among the oaks of the strong graves.

Eight sons of Galam, with the number of their hosts, Donn, Hir, Eber, Heremon, Amairgen, unvexed Colptha, Herech, Febria, and Erennan:	100
These were the warranties of the Fair, loudly acclaimed at all seasons, at coming in and at going forth without any rude hostility.
From the Tuatha De to the children of Mil, it was a refuge for noble ladies and princely men; from the children of Mil ('twas a clear fact), till Patrick of Ard Macha, it was a refuge.	105
Heaven, earth, sun, moon, and sea, fruits of earth and sea-stuff, mouths, ears, eyes, possessions, feet, hands, warriors' tongues,	110
Horses, swords, chariots fair, spears, shields, and faces of men, dew, mast, sheen on leaf, day and night, ebb and flow:—	115
The hosts of Banba, free from enduring sorrow, gave all these completely [as pledges] that it should not lie under gloom of disputes to interrupt it, every third year.	120
The Gentiles of the Gaels held often time with great acclamation a Fair, without law, without sin, without deed of violence, without impurity.

By honoured princes there was held the fifth game in Carmun: the honourable companies of Erin, however, to them was firmly pledged the sixth.

Lastly by the Clann Condla [was held] the game of well-protected Carmun: noble was the compact beyond every host above every triumph and high fruition.

Seven games, as he granted to you, that is the charge Patrick left,
every day for a week set apart:
for the sake of your loved fame, steadily hearken!

The Leinstermen use to do on this wise by tribes and by households, from the days of Labraid Longsech, with number of hosts, 195 to powerful Cathair of the red spears.

save only to his mighty offspring:
at their head, with special wealth, behold the seed of Ros Failge!

The seat of the noble king of Argatros on the right of the pleasant, modest king of Carmun; at his left hand, with no beggarly inheritance, the seat of the king of bright-scioned Gaible.

The Laigsi are descendants of the seed 205 of mighty Lugaid son of Conall Cendmor; and the Fothairt, whom drought visits not, free from poverty to persecute them.

BOAND I.

Sid Nechtain is the name that is on the mountain here, the grave of the full-keen son of Labraid, from which flows the stainless river whose name is Boand ever-full.

Fifteen names, certainty of disputes, given to this stream we enumerate, from Sid Nechtain away till it reaches the paradise of Adam.

Segais was her name in the Sid to be sung by thee in every land:

River of Segais is her name from that point to the pool of Mochua the cleric.

From the well of righteous Mochua to the bounds of Meath's wide plain, the Arm of Nuadu's Wife and her Leg are the two noble and exalted names.

From the bounds of goodly Meath till she reaches the sea's green floor she is called the Great Silver Yoke and the White Marrow of Fedlimid.

Therefore none of them dared approach it save Nechtain and his cup-bearers:— these are their names, famed for brilliant deed, Flesc and Lam and Luam.	50
Hither came on a day white Boand (her noble pride uplifted her), to the never-failing well to make trial of its power.	55
As thrice she walked round about the well heedlessly, three waves burst from it, whence came the death of Boand.	60
They came each wave of them against a limb, they disfigured the soft-blooming woman; a wave against her foot, a wave against her perfect eye, the third wave shatters one hand.
She rushed to the sea (it was better for her) to escape her blemish, so that none might see her mutilation; on herself fell her reproach.	65
Every way the woman went the cold white water followed from the Sid to the sea (not weak it was), so that thence it is called Boand.	70
Boand from the bosom of our mighty river-bank, was mother of great and goodly Oengus, the son she bore to the Dagda—bright honour! in spite of the man of this Sid.	75

Dabilla, the name of the faithful dog who belonged to the wife of Nechtain, great and noble, the lap-dog of Boand the famous, which went after her when she perished.

The sea-current swept it away, as far as the stony crags; and they made two portions of it, so that they were named therefrom. 85

O Maelsechlainn son of Domnall of the family of Comgall's daughter! I will tell thee, O prince of Meath! the tale of white bright Boand.

Boand—a blessing on the stream did Christ fair of form ordain; so she from glen to glen is the river Jordan of Erin.

Find Life, Find of the fierce Gaileon, from the union of two names, from their meeting is Mag Find named:— swift Find Life and Mifind.

One of the two Finds, that wins victory, flows past Tara from the north-east: there at the Confluence it meets with white-bellied Boand.

Bo Guairi which flows eastward past Tailtiu through lough Munremair, Bo Guairi is the name of the river which is called great Banna.

As there is ordan and an from which the river Jordan is called, so Boand is bo and find from the meeting of the two royal waters.

Bua, daughter of Ruadri Ruad, wife of Lug mac Cein of the red spears, it is there her body was hidden; over her was a great hill built up.

A hill had Bua in the midst of Bregia, where the noble woman was laid, in that spot yonder:—
the name of that hill is Cnogba.

But though easiest to utter of its names be perfect Cnogba, yet its more proper style is Cnocc Bui down from Bua daughter of Ruadri.

Elemar's daughter dwelt there:

Mider was the woman's darling:
a darling of her own was the prince,
the man from great and noble Sid Midir.

Englec, noble Elemar's daughter, was the darling of perfect Oengus; Oengus, son of the loved Dagda, was not the maiden's darling.

The illustrious Mac in Oc came southward to Ceru Cermna on the blazing hurrying Samain to play with his fellow-warriors.

Mider came—alas the day! he came upon her after they had gone, he carries off with him Englec from her home thence to the Sid of the men of Femen.	25
When noble Oengus heard of the pursuit of his darling, he went in search of her (I say sooth) to the famous hill whence she was borne off.	30
This was the food of his band—bright feast—blood-red nuts of the wood: he casts the food from him on the ground; he makes lamentation around the hillock.	35
Though it be called the Hill of Bua of combats, this is the equal-valid counter-tale: we have found that hence from that 'nut-wailing' Cnogba is named.	40
By us is preserved together the memory of the lay, and whichever [of these tales] ye shall prefer from it is named the region of surpassing worth.
There is another tale—'tis known to me— of that hill, which Dubthach possesses: it was made, though great the exploit, by Bresal Bodibad.	45

NAS.

Ruadri, son of Cailte of the flocks, was no faint splendour swift-passing yonder; father-in-law of Lug with tale of ships, with prowess of feats in war and slaying of foreign foemen.

The two daughters of Ruadri, the king of Britain, of conquering white-clad forces [were] the two wives of Lug,—fruitfulness came to them—
Bui of the Brug and modest Nas.

Nas, mother of Ibic of the horses, claims of right the brow and the beauty [of the spot], since she is gone, with the noise of combat, how should ye know at all the spot where she died?

Nas took in hand a deed unwise:
(truth and not folly) death o'erwhelmed her;
'tis from her Nas was named, famous perpetually for stern law.

Nas of the Leinstermen, bright with splendid bounty, 'tis there the lady was buried; from her it is called with clear certitude: the lore of the ancient hides not this.

Her sister was at Cnogba free from ravage, after the havoc of her shelter and her precinct: not tardily came the death-dirge for the lady; 'tis there Bui abode, and was buried.

Cnogba is the Hill of Bui of the battles; 25
the pillaging violence of hosts does not wreck it;
but 'tis it that, for [repose from] fatigue of fierce deeds, is the lofty hold of the fiery kings.

The hosts of the pure Gaels came to bewail the women from the Brug; from Tailtiu where he raised a fire thence they came with Lug.

They lifted a cry of lamentation perpetually for the women free from guilt and guile; the game of wounds was waged by them 35 untimely, in no merry wise.

Thence grew the boasted gathering—(it is not an empty lamentation with the lips)
the assembly of Taltiu with mighty preparations, held by every hero moreover according to custom.

40

That was the gathering of accomplished Lug, happy satisfaction, no small pleasure, the lamentation of the fair-skinned vocal women of Fáil, the keening for the daughters of Ruadri the red.

CEILBE.

It is time for me to make verse on Ceilbe, it is a service due to Athairne; to commemorate thee—no paltry favour—a tale without verse is insecure.

A chapter without verse on Ceilbe— it was remiss of Fercheirtne: polish comes not without a dye of some sort, nor does a tale [last] without a lay to follow it.	5
Present with absent now, ye that adorn the code of law! since he put not Ceilbe in verse, his learning has not been lucky!	10
It has fallen to my lot to make requital therein unto you, O teachers of the Dindsenchas! soon shall I strip its obscurity from the cause why Ceilbe is sung of.	15
Daughter to Cairpre Niafer was she, Bé Gelchnes, spirited, fair and bright, pre-eminent for live stock and household gear; in this hill she was wont to dwell.	20

Olc leisi ger thriall tathaim cen urgnam 'ca hard-athair, cen scur oibre na haitrib a coigle gur críchnaiged.

40

Gaduis do druim a doirre cen saogal fri sentuinne d'ingin a derbráthar dil: a nemláthar donóisig. She held it wrong (though it was a fatal project) that her noble father should lack entertainment, or that work in her home should not cease till her purpose was accomplished.

Then Finn the poet bethought him the son of Ross Ruad of Rairiu, the keen poet used to war-cries to pay a visit at his fair sister's house. 25

His errand was an omen of reproach to the house of the valiant woman; neither love nor fear she felt in hiding her preparation.

30

There is brought to him—it was no seemly step—food that was only fit for slaves; there was festal preparation near by; Finn perceived that it was kept secret.

35

The stern poet repaid his wicked sister for her churlishness: her purpose was not brought to completion, wherein fame for feasts was sought.

40

On account of his wrath he prayed for his dear brother's daughter not to live to old age; he made notorious her mean spirit.

of the family of the good king of Dubthair.

It was Dubthach of Dubthair fierce of face, king of the Desi of Bregia of the undying bards, (his was all as far as the horse-rearing region of the estuaries,) whose four fair daughters they were.

The month over the bargain that all observe,— at the present time it is no novelty,— Dubthach was the first to add it, the rule is well known to the Ui Chuinn.

A year's wage (it was a judgment of the wise) from every king to every warrior, only Dubthach would not give it without additional work, (it was a long space).

Dubthach was son of Fergna noble and fair son of Muredach son of Sinell son of Bregon the famous for victory, son of Oengus, son of Eogan.

Eogan Brec is still spoken of, the son of well-born Fiachu Suidige, son of noble Fedlimid Rechtmar, son of Tuathal Techtmar great and strong.

That is the pedigree till now of Dubthach good king of the Desi, for my art-prompted tale to set forth among all the noted places of Leinster.

The gentle sons of Acher Cerr from the harbour, sprung of the Erainn of Munster of the cavaliers met their death, it was no mild visitation, it blasted their growth all at once.

An injunction of stern force was laid on the fair and lofty four; it was no pleasant tryst in the dark, it was an injunction in virtue of pagan love,	45
That they should not wed, in the land of the living, the four beloved sisters, or that they should meet their death;— the keeping of the injunction was no easy task for them.	50
Fomu and renowned Roimper, Fernocht, Ferdub the sagacious; the mention of their names together has gained from us, as was due, a noble stanza.	55
These youths from the Erainn far from us were fervent lovers, a noble band, the sons of Acher Cerr of the province son of Eochu Find the handless,	60
Son of Mug Lama the stainless son of fierce Lugaid of the encampments (and of Olldoitech, choice of fair women) son of shapely Cairpre Cromchend.
They came,—hard the toil— to earn their guerdon, the four thanes, winning [a name for] valour, at the house of Dubthach of Dubthair.	65

The wooing of the daughter of Goll Glas, son of noble mettlesome Fedlimid, by Lutur son of powerful Lurgnech, from the western side of Spain.

Thus was mighty Lutur, a man right tall and big, fourteen heads—no rash boast above his shaggy grey neck.

As for Gablach, big was the woman, daughter of fair quick Fedlimid; fifty cubits she was in height, and the half of that in breadth.

Four of them came from the east both Goll and his daughter, and Lutur, who came without ship, and Lurgnech son of Calatrom.

So they partook of their feast, a pleasant modest household the four of them; a hundred of every beast—great was the amount a hundred measures of every grain on earth.

A bed was made for them thereafter, all four in one couch; they gave a blessing to each other; happy they were and not replete.

BELACH DURGEIN.

Durgen found suffering on every side by the hand of Indech, who traversed the battle-field, she was daughter of Luath, bloody in combat, overcomer of a hundred warriors, one that knit strife.

Known to me is the mother who wrought her ruin; by her falseness the false woman destroyed her; 'tis she was the pole that [Indech] cleft here on the soil of Belach da Bend.

Hercad, the mother who wrought her ruin, excellent in disposition at all times, was daughter of Trescu, with floods of waves;— celebrated the deed that was done there!

She went to her slave—this is truth for you—(it was a madman's choice, when she had tasted him:)
in spite of Luath—daring was the desire—came the slave to the first original crime.

Sharply the daughter watched:
the alert hawk of the host revealed the secret:
to a tryst with Hercad was coming a slave without repute, into Luath's bed.

Bairend Chermain, whence is it named, with its good fame, and ready hospitality? it was a precinct that lasted not for a short span, where dwelt Cerman Cetharchend.

Cerman Caladchnes the valiant 5 went a-wooing for increase:
the daughter of Etarba of the battles was deceitful Digais.

Digais was alert and strong;
she bore a princely family to Cerman;
she bore him seven active sons, and five daughters.

The names of the sons—glorious work!—
were Fulach, Liath, and Cassan, Fledach, Dimain, and Dormna, and Scal of the mighty shield.

Digais (whom verses cherish) drove out her nurslings, even her own children; said Cerman—since . . . "May danger and destruction attend you!"

Each of them took his path; they scattered from home and land, till they found their abodes they were vagrant reprobates.

Scal fared to Scarb ind Eoin, Dimain settled at Drobel, Dornmar settled—stern his grip—at stately Ath Monadmaill.

Cassan went to Glenn Cuill, Fer Liath to Liathdruim, Fulach to Glend Smoil, Fledach to Dergmoin.

Cappach settled in Glend da Gruad, Bairend settled by Babluan, Cliach possessed the ancient cairn in her day; these are the own children of Digais.

Digais lived on her mountain, as was reported; there long after holds her tenure; at Babluan—it was populous once—is Bairend of the red weapons, victorious maid.

DUIBLIND.

The daughter of Rodub, curly-haired, brave son of Glas Gluar, son of Glas Gamain, was wife of Enna son of Nos the valiant who settled in the meadows of Etar.

She was a wizard, she was a noble poetess, Rodub's daughter, of starlike beauty, she was a prophetess to take count of every chieftain, till death by a single shot extinguished her.

Enna had a wife fair and lovely,
Aide daughter of Ochind:

10
the son of slender Cnucha, who loved combat, gave short span to Rodub's daughter.

The daughter of Rodub conceived jealousy:
it was a journey that brought not good fortune, when she sang a spell of the sea in the morning;
for slender Cnucha was no friend.

Margin bright and brisk marked her; the squire, by Ochind's high command cast in her path a cunning ball whereby the daughter of king Rodub was destroyed.

The foe who killed her met his death by her famous magnificent father: the noble warrior was slain before sunset after the destruction of Rodub's daughter.

Bare is thy keep, O Druim Den! bare and desolate thy rampart and thy site: I see it, of the bloom that bedecked thee from now till Doomsday shalt thou be bare.

Lovely are thy borders and thy outskirts, pleasant the calling of cuckoos that dwell with thee, radiant thy rampart, spacious and seemly, thy keep of the oak woods and the green leafage.

A shelter wast thou against need and sorrow;
thou wast a fence and a forest fortress, our desire is to set back and front against thy rampart and toward thy wide demesne.

I in the west of Inis Fail, thou in the east, a-blaze;
the pasturing herd grazes in the grass-meadow, the meal is ground and the miller away.

Seldom comes one that is [Find's] better; all renown shall be humbled; thou shalt be a lodging of tearful austere women, though thou art grassgrown and bare.

ÁTH CLÍATH.

Behold Ath Cliath before you awhile!
O tower that ever guardest the Gael, what warrior, what dame has plundered it, and given its name to the ford?

The sin of Adam's wife brought upon us the senseless rough-sporting beast: long since had the seer foretold the beast that was on Lecc Benn.

The beast that was on Lecc Benn had seven score feet, four heads; its shank and its toe reached [hither], it licked up Boyne till it became a valley.

The beast, when the narrow swelled—(if thou art skilled among the numbers of the young)— the strange beast, it found rest:

it was slain on Brug maic ind Oc.

Who was the wright that planted the palisade? in its great size he set it in the ford: what is this palisade, we wonder? it shall abide in the pool till Doomsday.

The frame of the beast's chest made a cast round Erin—a coast that everyone knew—and the restless sea tossed it: thereafter it befell that it reached the ford.

The King of the elements—noble motion—the Lord of each man's secret thoughts, the Prince of nature, the Son of my God, He it is that would protect every weakling.

Relate to me, O comely Mongan since thou art acquainted with every violent deed, 30 what number fell—'tis clear in Tulach na Segainne.

O pride of Erin across two seas, O bright diadem whom all men know, thou rememberest, O light from Iona, the thing that set it in the ford.

Etar, forehead to the flood, the hundred-strong barrier of northern Cualu, there is no attempt made on Erin the grey sea roars against his shoulder.

His right shoulder fronts the Dothra: the Ruirthech dashes wildly against his side, onset of the flood-tide, wave of the ebb, furious are the seas against the shore.

A number of the poets who were the first loved a commentary on every song in the legend that chanted to them the reason why the name of Etar was given.

The pool caused [the death] of the youth above the point of the deadly-foolish deed; the death of Bethi came by the violent folly of Aes son of Etair son of Etaith.

The son of Etbaith whose is the inheritance, a great chieftain, known as far as the shores of Alba, found a wife . . . . . . she was Mairg from Sliab Marga.

She was a fit mother of children for him; she used to cast a golden chain about him: the sea should not drown him while he wore it, nor should spear-points of battle be able to wound him.

Thence came [the name] (not in falsehood does every poet in succession relate it on this side and that about the sea) the pliant Chain of the modest wife of Etar.

His family were foolish at the first they were there he had a son that was not hers, she had a daughter that was not his.	30
They went over the sounding sea for a swimming match, the son who brought about sorrow there and the illustrious daughter.	35
Aes, a mighty wave drowned him, his folly betrayed him,—lasting frenzy— at the meeting under the wave's roof with the daughter of Crimthand of Cualu.	40
There came the beast, a pleasing combat, toward them through the level sea: the Point of Aes' Head, how should ye see it? Bethe's Ear is over the Liffey-Pool.
They left a son sound and lusty (did Aes and fair trusty Bethe)— Dond son of Aes, who loved forays, a man whose daughter was Elta.	45
Elta, fierce plain covered with warriors, the pure level with hundreds of men the grave of the nobles of the Greeks behold it in front of Etar!	50
When Athirne the cruel came he abode in the rich mountain: seven hundred kine, red-eared, pure white, he carried off as a gift to him from the Leinstermen.	55
Boldly came the Leinstermen to bring back the tribute; eastward to Sliab Etar by the shore to sack it over the poet.	60

Conor mac Nessa came, seven hundred with him in fierceness of might, to dispute the spoil of cattle, with the sons of Ruad Ross.

Mag Elta was filled with champions round Conchobar to help him, in the straits in which the Ulstermen were;

they took bright Etar against [the Leinstermen].

Messdia, in his boyish strength, gave the pledge—it was a chance shot struck him, so that the poet Find drowned him as he was drinking a draught from the well.

The Ulstermen shouted when was drowned

Messdia who was a white-fingered man;
the Ulstermen who were not subdued inflicted defeat on the four provinces of the Gaels.

They drank up the pool, a spot not narrow, in Mag Find after the great hardships; without water flowing in pure streams was Boyne on the morrow.

It was after the slaughter of the wounded hosts he carried off with him his white herd, prize of deeds; Athirne went his way and was not hurt through the protection of the Ulstermen, O Etar.

Though it be dark to me in my bed, though it be a tale of testing and difficult indeed, [yet] illustrious with profit of laudation is every famous plain, every famous fortress.

When I had to do with the most famous monuments, [ranked] not unjustly above every domain, the achievement of every host [was set] in order due, so that all are illuminated.

I see five strong fortresses of renown and splendour, no weak array among their peers, chief in honour and mighty for ever.

The Hill of Etar, forehead to wave,

The Dun of Brea son of Senboth Særoll,

The Stone of Cualu against assault of pillage,

The Ridge of Ing... son of Dorbglas,

Mount Lecga, the next spot prepared against ruses and pillage, is the fifth bright "knot of testing," though it be very high it is not very dark.

I will tell you in pleasant converse, without lamentation or sorrowful song, the history, free from secret of soft lust, of noble fort and noble hill alike.

Partholon detached in the East, that he might be over far-famed Elg, Brea son of Senboth of abiding valour, for exploits and armed vengeance.

The duel (not good the custom) was instituted by the noble gracious son of Senboth, the roofed hunting-booths of osier, and the all-black iron vessels.

30

Brea son of Senboth of the spears got a dun and a river-harbour and a noble sea; 'tis he truly (he was not wanton-foolish) who was the first man to inhabit them.

35

There died Brea, assuredly, and his whole family along with him; their graves, with deed of war and rapine, have I seen in the territory of Cualu.

the fifth famous woman was

BEND ETAIR II. 115 'Twas she died here, first of all 45 before the wife of any king ('tis well known), of grief for long-limbed radiant Gand, in Bend Etar, suddenly. In Etar (which found sadness from this cause without compare, without equal) 50 she died, the softly-bright active wife of the steadfast king of Fremu. Hence is named noble Etar the royal harbour, hundred-strong, complete : though there possessed it, in wealth and plenty. 55 Etar the famous, son of Etgaeth. Etar, murderous of mood in every strife, was allied to Manannan; he died here apart across the sea for love of radiant Aine. 60 Crimthand Shield-mouth, goodly in battle, by whom fell Cualu the hundred-strong, put his head, leader of the host, in this wise on Oe Cualand of the vast plundering. The unblemished stone whereon that head was set,the red mangled head of the kingly man,thence comes the name, above the abiding road. of the renowned, the ancient Oe. In the same well-matched battle of shields fell the son of heavy-handed Dorb-glas, 70 and was buried without litter at Druim Ing without contention.

Well I fared on a glorious adventure from Dal Uisnig of the cold . . .; much sea and much land were traversed by the king's son, on that gallant journey.

I went on a way, a track not rapid, through the deceitful wiles of women, into the land that ocean encloses, which has a white wall of pure silver.

I happened on a host over the cheek of glorious Mag Eolairg; thrice nine fifties, kings thrice nine, that was their number in their muster.

I brought away the pointed polished beaker of Tuathal across the salt of the ocean-road; thrice nine draughts, that was its content, were pressed from a single grain,—goodly its metal.

I brought the chess-board of white-skinned Guaire from the waves of ocean, with numbers of exploits; there was not found under heaven a treasure to surpass it, wherein are three hundred bright gems.

I brought the shirt of fierce Lug to my country from the water of the Irish sea; all of refined red gold, that reached from bridle to head.

I brought the fierce flashing sword of Congal, author of dreadful havec; it was a treasure of the kings of Inis Fail, a hundred golden snakes along its blade.

I brought a shield that was Daire Derg's from the field where spear-casts wounded men:— thrice nine arrows of pale silver round the rim through dint of hewing.

I brought the old spear of Mac Da Dend with his head—it was no bloody trophy; from sunrise to sunset is none would know of what wood is its shaft.

RATH CNAMROSSA.

I have for the Leinstermen day by day rich store of legend—no spurious wealth whence comes the title (mighty shouting) the noble name of the territory of Cnamros.

Hither came in suffering after the fight at the red-flaming hostel, with many a hurt and wound, Mac Cecht, son of Slaide Seched.

The giant soldier bore with him the kingly child of friendly Conaire

Le fri Flaith, truly named, for it was he that lifted him from the ground.

Into the hollow of his fair fringed shield he packed and bore the child; the boy that had not force for valour in arms was made like a heap of scattered bones.

The blood whelmed him and the heavy heat, he met tumult and oppression, when he kept a darkling tryst at sloping Corra Ednige.

Then said Mac Cecht, because the dreadful deed was perpetrated "woe betide him that starts on a journey from the heap of thy scattered bones!"

He cut the belly from his targe, and it was buried round the royal child; until that Judgment that awaits thee this is the rath where they abide.

Hiburni, son of Dedos the blind, came hither to the son of Cumall with love-nuts of Segais thereafter from the wife of Bernsa from Bernamu.

Then said Find, prince of the warriors, to the active, the nimble-handed Hiburni, that they were not nuts of the famous wood of meetings but nuts of doubt and uneasiness.

From these nuts, stronger than eager strength of chieftains, is named level Cnamros;
Find embedded them a foot under earth, the cause why they came was not known.

Strong Bresal Belach won against the clans of stout Cairpre with his clan (mighty shouting) a tough fight in the territory of Cnamros.

There was grief on the company of women here in the great plain at their fatal encounter, for the loss of Maistiu, goodly bride, who came on a heedless venture.

The son of Eochu Toebfota in the east bore off the noble charming radiant lady from Crich Comul—sun of valour from Oengus' hospitable seat.

According as Gris looked on the bright lady she perverted her mind month by month; she deprived of modesty and of might the goodly wife of Daire, by her wizardry.

Daire steadfast and strong hurled with his unerring battle-spear a cast that brought the waters of Snuad over her, over the fiery daughter of Richis.

The death of Maistiu came without glorious effort by Gris daughter of Richis; the death of Gris, skilled in bloody arts, came by the spear of Daire Derg fresh of face.

Alas! that the company of the women are gone; sad their death and their fatal encounter; it brought mourning silently on the host when grief fell on the company of women.

The gentle Maer was daughter to Oengus; 25 she was Conall's pleasant twin; the loss of his sisters, with their following, brought about the end of his life in mortal woe.

Here Oengus brought the form of a cross to Maistiu of lovely radiance; 30 the maiden fashioned it thus as a mutual secret, a potent secret of evil power.

It was a pleasant wood, obscure, full of nuts, the wild spot rich in mast and draughts of mead; after the loss of its gracious princes their folk were found in sorrow.

MAISTIU II.

Daire Derg, who made red rain, king of Nas strong in sanctity, won to wife, after feats of prowess and force, Maistiu daughter of Oengus.

Griss of the binding spell came from Boand, famed for beauty of women, (a devil's dam was she, without fair dealing,) to exact a demand from Maistiu.

Maistiu gained not what she sought for Griss of tuneful Leth Cuinn; the wife of the tall youth from the plain gained not the lump of gold she demanded.

ROIRIU in UI MUIREDAIG.

There is in truth a hiding-place above ground, where lies a generous hero with his wedded wife; the two Roirius, beautiful and slender, in the red Mound of Roiriu.

Roiriu was son of stout Senan, son of Setna and son of Branan; he was the generous hero whose is the grave whose royal sepulchre was Roiriu from of yore.

There famous Roiriu was buried, daughter of Ronan of kingly temper, their loss was early and sudden;
the hiding-place where they lie was never found.

Not luckily came from a strong land Roiriu mac Setna, the long-headed, from Niall's country, meeting-place of waters; he met the flight of a soldier's keen spear.

When the warriors met, the sons of Echaid and the martial Lagin, they pierced white-skinned troops with intrepid lances.

Roiriu perished—fierce onset by the hands of the Feine, at the first encounter, so that he was left without comeliness . . . on his enterprise not luckily he came.

Mugna, my sister's son of the glorious wood, God fashioned it long ago, a tree blest with various virtues, with three choice fruits.

The acorn, and the dark narrow nut, and the apple—it was a goodly wilding—the King sent by rule on it thrice a year.

The Tree of Mugna, great was the trunk, thirty cubits its girth, conspicuous in sight of all the place where it stood, three hundred cubits it is in height

Then was the bright plant laid low, when a blast broke Tortu's Bole;
He makes transient every combat, like the long-lived Tree of ancient Mugna.

Eo Mugna, great was the fair tree, high its top above the rest; thirty cubits—it was no trifle that was the measure of its girth.

Three hundred cubits was the height of the blameless tree, its shadow sheltered a thousand: in secrecy it remained in the north and east till the time of Conn of the Hundred Fights.

A hundred score of warriors—no empty tale—along with ten hundred and forty would that tree shelter—it was a fierce struggle—till it was overthrown by the poets.

BELACH CONGLAIS.

I have heard of a chase, with series of exploits free from oblivion and obscurity; he it was that was slain, the hunter Glass, grandson of the brigand Dond Des.

Alas for the venture they went on there, the pack of Conaire of Cualu! manfully they fought their fights, the enchanted swine of wizardry.

Evil the fate by which fell the son of Dond Des, leaving no prosperous seed among chieftains; the wild boars carried him mangled to Bri Leith—he uttered no boast.

The heroes of that hunt were in this shape—they were the red swine of Dreibrend:
they died in this combat without victory after this encounter, as I have heard.

Liath Lurgan, pilot of the sharp weapon, lived here from hill to hill, a mighty man from Offaly of the feasts; no ten men were a match for him.

The three daughters of the hero (no weakling he!)—

Doe, Caichni, and Fadat, suffered degradation of shape, because their lord forsook them.

They came to Lind na Tarb these three damsels (harsh is the tale) and they saw a man's male features beneath them—a lasting blemish!

Fadat turned her about (lasting the crime!)
to Ath Fadat to drown herself; Doe went (sad the way!)
to Lind Doe to her final death.

Caichni, Sinchell cured her whole, soundly and honourably; for her healing this was the payment, the meadow-land she had from Liath of Lurgan.

Dear to me is bright Gabran, who made his way hither on the trail of Lurgu: no quarry ever escaped him over the heather except a grey one-eyed pig.

He went on its track (bright spot), to the chilly territory of Almu, till it made a rush underground, the loathly long-lived pig.

He turned homeward after great fatigue, after pausing under the rampart a breathing space, in his rush swift as flame his heart burst like a nut for ever.

There was he buried underground, at the Pass high in renown, which is called after valiant Gabran, is he not dear to the red-weaponed host?

A band of bondmen followed Gabran's track, with a frenzied chant in their mouths; on the trail of Lurgu (fulness of valour) he was slain in the bog of Almu.

according as every calamity is related,
Marg of the bold deed died;

Margg, son of Giusca, fair of form, son of Lodan Liath from Luachair, came, in spite of fasting from food, to the house of Eochu Muniste.

The noble steward came from the powerful king of the hundred ears to demand tribute afar to the house of the valiant king of the Galian.

This was the tax that was expected of him, fifty oxen, excellent cattle; 10 hurtful to the chieftain's guest was his portion of meat on that same spot.

As the champion's drink did not arrive along with the warrior's food, thirst killed him thereafter by its violence, over against old Sliab Mairge.

There his parting from his people came to pass, when he was slain at Belach Edind, when great Marg met his death among the host of the high territories.

ARD LEMNACHT.

The story of Ard Lemnacht the bright is known to me for noble worshipful heroism: the means whereby a device was found for slaying the tribe of the Fidga.

Crimthand Sciath-bel, whose beauty shone, was king over the stock of the Galian; the tribes of the Fidga and Fochmand were to him as pointed tools.

No mischance dared touch them at all,
no clang of arms in conflict could hurt them;
whomsoever they wounded—lasting was the injury—he tasted neither food nor life [again].

Every man of them was match for hundreds; overwhelming was their stature and their numbers; they settled in their lands there eastward, till the Clann Cruthnig destroyed them.

Solen, Ulfa, noble Nechtan, Oengus, Lethend, and Drostan,
the six sons of Gelon, no niggards of deeds, they were found a stout support to Crimthand.

Then said Drostan the druid to the followers of princely Crimthand: "If ye desire their sudden destruction, here is the means to subdue and behead them:

LOCH GARMAN.

King of loughs is this lough in the south, Loch Garman of the famous poets, wide and winding haven of the ships, gathering-place of the buoyant boats.

A place that is a king's demesne, where sea and mainland meet, a stronghold, after the ejection of idols, merrily was spread its story.

Which of them was earlier in date, let it be asked of the learned of Erin the lough of the hosts wont to frequent it on the east, or the cold river that ran down to it? 5

'Tis long between one and the other,
if the truth be well tried,
from the outburst of the stainless stream to the outburst of the limpid lough.

The river first arose—
I am versed in their fortunes—the broad pure placid lake was not till long after the river.

In the time of Cathair of the bitter battles came the outburst of pure cold Loch Garman: in the time of the unblenching Fir Bolg came the outburst here of ancient Slane.

Cathair of the many kinsmen held the right pleasant feast of the kings of Temair; to keep the feast came—the better cheer!— the men of Erin to the same spot.	55
Three days before Samain, a standing custom, three days after it, it was a good custom, the gathering spent, and vast the blaze before them, carousing ever the length of the week.	60
No theft, no manslaying, among them at this season; no play of weapons nor wounds, no brooding over enmity.
Whoever should do any of these things was a culprit fated to evil doom; money in atonement would not be accepted from him, but his life was required straightway.	65
There was a champion there in the house at Cathair's back (we conceal it not): Garman, son of Bomma Licce of the people of dappled Berba,	70
When it came to pass there in the house, while the great host was in drink, that he stole the queen's golden coronet; it was no right deed for a friend to do.	75

After him, from the north, comes the household of Cathair of the pointed spears; they overtake him there by the well that was at the river's mouth. 85 When they took fierce Garman, the spring burst forth strong and high. from the rock to the lovely sea; since then it is a lough, green and broad. Garman is drowned in the brimming lough; the learned are continually making mention of it. 90 haven of knives and bright shields; from him the name Lough Garman clave to it. That is the right and true story of the lough so bright and broad, 95 and of the river,-lovely their splendour! whereby tarries every high king. Once on a time, clear-souled Cathair was in the prosperous prime of his life, when there appeared to him a vision that became known, which threw the host of Erin into deep distress. 100 The daughter of a goodly landowner, lord of hundreds, radiant of form, perfect in beauty, appeared (it was no sin) to the hero in his sleep. 105 Every fair hue man can see, blue, dappled, yellow, and purple—the sight was pleasant—were in the raiment the lady wore.

LOCH GARMAN.	177
In this wise was the white woman, great with child, and her womb ever full, to the end of eight hundred good years, though strange it be to relate:	110
Till she bore a son, brave was his bulk, who brought many a champion to sudden death; the day he was born (this was illusion) the son was stronger than his mother.	115
The mother, great above women, attempts to go from him, so as to avoid him; she found no way (they join strife) but through the midst of her great son.	120
A beautiful hill above the comely head of the woman and her son together; clear to view from its summit the enduring earth; not often was it without a great host.  A tree of gold on the hill free from battle, its crown reached the cloudy welkin; thence the music of the men of the world	125 was heard from the tree's crown.  Whenever the violent wind would beat on the soft fresh foliage of the tree there would be vast plenty, O men! of its fruits on the soil of earth.	130
Every fruit the hosts would choose, from east, from south, and from north, like the flood-tide of the lazy sea, would come from the top of that one tree.	185

This was the vision of the warrior of the combat, round whom the Leinstermen made rejoicing, Cathair, son of fair Fedilmid, the high king of Erin from Alend.

Thereupon the noble prince awakes from his slumber long and deep, the head of the people of Leinster generally, to relate his dream.

There is called to him the well-attended druid,—high in favour was he with the king, that he might solve for him, even for his chief, all the riddles the king had seen.

"I will solve them," said the keen druid,

"if I have a reward that shall be fully sufficient,

"with honour from thee all thy days as well," said Bri. son of Bairchid.

Firm covenants are given to him for receiving reward every day and for honour there in his house and for wealth, as he demanded.

Thereafter the druid gives them the interpretation of the vision faithfully; according as he gave of yore the famous interpretation it is fulfilled in later times, though long after.

LOCH DACHAECH.	187
Thus went she	25
over the sea—pregnant, to the noble harbour of famous Dachech, till her womb fell:
one daughter she bore.	30
Blemished her offspring, the blind misshapen daughter feeble of health; Dachæch was her name
at all times and places,	85 designation of suffering.
As she reached the ground
this was the strife, with peril, not of bloodshed,
she ran betimes,	40
she leapt into the lough to drown herself quite.
Hence is given,
from the woman's name,
this title	45
unto Loch Dachæch; an ill occasion had this noble nomenclature.
This was her motive,
to conquer in battle	50
against the Cland Miled; weary was the palm thereby,
with frequent smiting—alas!
upon the flesh of royal men.

There is here a limb from the body of a king: over the streaming currents the sea bore him towards the noble love, long-limbed, winsome, of hundred-wounding Cithang's only son.

From Inis Aine of the heroes Rot ever-fierce, won his goal, the chieftain renowned in every land: he was a gentle border-champion.

By land and fair sea alike fared the idle prince's son; his left hand to the pure Ictian Sea his right to the country of enduring Britons.

And there he heard the sound, it was a lure of baleful might, the chant of the mermaids of the sea over the pure-sided waves.

The loveliness of the sea-maids equalled any wealth: fairer than any human shape were their bodies above the waves of the tide, with their tresses yellow as gold.

The hosts of the world would fall asleep listening to their voice and their clear notes; Rot would not give up for woman's troth union with their bodies, with their pleasant bosoms.

As much of them as was under water—it was a secret with no kindly power—was big as a broad bright hill of shell-fish and heaps of weed.

The son of Cithaing gave strong fervent love:
no love was got in return;
Rot found, without persistence in beseeching them, the evil fate that was the custom of the women-folk.

Choked and killed was Rot and his noble body overcome, without being satisfied, as ye may guess, by his being dead and forn piecemeal.

There came from the east across the narrow sea, till it found a level shore of Erin, a thigh-bone, from the sole upward, as thou mayest guess, so that here rests his noble limb.

Therefore to be told of in every land is Port Lairge of the broad shields; men that are swift in the field if there be strife, it is likely that they are generous folk.

MAG RAIGNE.

I have heard of a brave man, leader of troops, whose name was Raigne the Roman, how he came with desired fame swiftly into the powerful territory of Narbonensis.

Three tasks they put on Raigne, the populace of Gaul splendid and vast: to pile clay on wains, to level a wood with tangled roots,

To release the mighty inlet of the sea that the pure impetuous Ligir visiteth, 10 so that it should be after the manner of an island by the stately side of Torinis.

Raigne of the noble spade completed the tasks—(he was free from poverty and misadventure, a man whom want did not visit—) in just three full days.

The warrior escaped from them, with his excellences ever-manifest, that he might not stay there under strict bondage;
he took with him hatchet, bill-hook, and spade.

He fared to the seat of Fotla without warning, without kingly proclamation; he settled, the noble fiery scion, in cheerful Imlech Mecconn.

MAG FEMIN, MAG FERA, MAG FEA.

Femen and fair-haired Fera, eager soldiers of the great strongholds, and Fea, famed for timber-havor in Inis Fail. sons of Inogach son of Dachar, With warlike bold Clann Miled 5 they pushed on to verdurous Banba; the tools of their hereditary calling were bill-hook and axe and heavy spade. The axe a-lopping in stout style 10 and the bill-hook . . were their tools, noble yet not proud,and the spade hard a-digging. They cleared three plains, after many a spell; through their piety they gained their titles: 15 Mag Fea, no . . . for a girl, Mag Fera and Mag Femin. Each in turn would make, without delay, without regret, without idle desire that lured him away, exchange of tools and weapons. 20 Fea, wife of Neit son of Indui, did not desert Mag Fea, though it was silent, the fair-haired woman,—she was a love beloved the right-generous daughter of Elemaire. 25 I have heard of the two oxen of Dil, radiant of beauty, conspicuous; Fe and Men are they called, whence Mag Femin gets its name.

TOND CLIDNA I.

Clidna Cendfind, lasting her calamity, at this wave came her death; cause for her mother to die was the matter whence arose the ancient name.

When the gathering was held yonder] by the people of the Land of Promise,
'twas he carried off the woman by deceit—Ciaban son of Eochu Imderg.

The queen of the gathering yonder in sooth,
the maiden whose name was Clidna, Ciaban the curly-haired bore with him, over the wide ship-ridden sea.

He left her on the wave,
he went from her on a giddy venture, to seek a chase,—fair deed!
he went forward under the tangled wood.

The wave came after he was gone:
to Ciaban it was no lucky sound:
a great event,—we grieved thereat—was the drowning of Clidna Cendfind.

The Wave of Dun Teite of the chiefs, that was its name before in your land, till there was drowned in the wave in sooth a woman whose name was Clidna.

TOND CHLIDNA II.

Genann son of Tren,—pleasant . . . .! he was chief of this land; since he got the kingly seat under him, the fairest of his children was Clidna.

Vigorous the dash, spirited the onset, wherewith came the curly-haired Ciaban, when he reached cheerful Mag Mell over the fierce concourse of ocean.

After coming to the land, with brave deeds in plenty, it is there he uttered thrice fifty cries, as staves declare, for Clidna daughter of Genann.

Thrice fifty tribes are there to the province; a hostage for every tribe in Genann's hands; hither comes a daughter of every king, to tend the tresses of the high-king's daughter.

"In the name of God, I will go thither, I will bear off with me this maiden: she it is that I have chosen, the faultless Clidna Cendfind, radiant of skin."

He stepped forward into his boat, he leaves the land of strong keeps, so that thereafter it was called Sid nEna; the maidens lamented.

TOND CHLIDNA II.	213
The lords and the folk of the plain were overwhelmed with noisy grief; they filled the tract by the shore to arrest the rape.	25
Said Genann—fierce his hate: Whoever reaves in reprisal,"— said he across the ship-ridden sea, they should carry off curly-haired Ciaban!	80
Said Genann, over the host: 'Tis well, O Clidna, with cheeks aflame! some time shall come thy day in such wise as I shall declare.	35
Keep watch for the day of my death! I tell thee—this shall be my message! there shall come a wave whose crest shall sparkle, and shall whelm thy home in thine island."	40
So thereupon—woe for the tryst! Clidna went her way with Ciaban; they hoisted sail—unstable the craft— round Erin from the south-west.	,
Roar of the rude wind and storm of the sea carried them on the sand—a mound of strength— in the estuary of Traig Tellat.	45

CARN HUI NEIT.

The grave of Bress, gifted with excellences, master of love-spells, the son of comely Elatha, the brave ancestor of our gathering,

The brave son of Neit, son of Indui, who was son of Allda, splendid in bounty, son of Tat, son of Taburn, high in courage, high in fame,

Son of Enda, son of Baa, who went rowing on his voyages,
son of Ibad the comely, who was the noble son of Bethach,

Son of Iarbonel the seer, with strife of dreadful lance, son of Nemed, armed with weapons, who came in swift ships.

This was their alliance—it was no counsel of weariness—between the Tuatha De for certain and the powerful Cland Nemid.

Bress, a kindly friend was he, noble he was and fortunate, ornament of the host, with visage never woeful, of the Tuath De he was the flower.

The drink of a hundred for each roof-tree 25 was brought to the chieftain without fail, of the milk of dun-hued kine:
he suffered from that fare.

In the reign of Nechtan bass-chain, of dear fame, of deep mystery, overlord of the two Munsters, occurred the cause of the enduring name.

The kine of every townland in Munster lasting harm!—by Nechtan's orders were singed, over ferns, till they were black of hue.

A mess of ashes was smeared by the noted men of cunning on the kine famed for fatness

They fashioned stout kine of wood—that whole host noble and slender:
Lug, who was dutiful on all occasions, chose them and brought them together.

Pails in their forks were set with cheerful nimbleness; red stuff, with no bright shining fatness, that is the milk that filled them.

Three hundred, that was their number on the road to that gathering:

at this contest, through his cheating illusion, there was not a cow of these kine alive.

Bress, hot of valour, came to the middle of the field to judge them:
thereby, without prosperous issue, be perished and died.

From the drove were measured three hundred buckets, bitter-harsh, for the spear-attended king to drink: it was a preparation of ill-presage.

Bress had a vow not to refuse any feat that was offered him: he drank it off without flinching: I know not what it brings.

At the Carn of radiant Ua Neit it killed the stern scion, when he had drunk without dread a draught of the dark ruddy liquor. 65

CROTTA CLIACH.

Here a man of the fairies made music, Cliach of the harp sweet sounding: he met a horror, amid the charm of his noble chant, at his timely tryst with Conchend.

He was a year, among throngs of chiefs, without food and without sleep:
while the Fairy host was making music,
the grief of woman's might was urging him.

Bodb, powerful prince, would not allow Cliach to approach the fairy hill of the men of Femen; 10 with inquiry he divined the design, the wooing, the solicitation.

The earth opened, with plenty of delights, before the hosts in endless durance:
a wonder of might, a boast of journeys, ease among the indolent fairies.

At the spot where he died of terror, Cliach sang sweet melody;
there seized him there suddenly, not unprotected, the loathly dragon that dwells in this place.

Loch Bel Dragon—fierceness of exploits, without mistake and without obscurity— a great and mighty sea in the east, where Cliach was, in this place made he music.

CEND FEBRAT.

Cend Febrat, a beautiful mountain it is, enduring home of the royal men; I see it is a home right hospitable since the days of the royal warriors, noble of form.

I came on a day in early morning 5 over Cend Febrat of the cool flowers, (no occasion to cause forgetfulness of song) over Cend Febrat of the verdant tresses.

The sound of the wind thrust me, sleeping with vacant mind, 10 amid the hands of warriors; it was a gathering with purity of wisdom.

As I slept (pleasant the manner) therein I met with the theme of my song:
there was shown me truly and in full every fairy-mound that is at Cend Febrat.

I saw thereafter the strong keep, wherein is battle-force unfailing:
on hazel-set Mullach Cuillen, wherein abides the stern-smiting thickset hero.

I met one that described to me the situation of the graves in full in the well-remembered stronghold, set in due order on Cend Febrat.

The grave of Cain son of Derg, long-haired and strong, 25 from whom is named Sliab Cain of the victory, appeared to be on my right hand; the neglect was cause of strife.

There I saw a lonely grave,
the mound of Erc from Irluachair; on the northern side of the slope he abides in a bed full hard.

The grave of Garban son of keen Dedad, the spot where he was buried on the hill-side; duly placed is its splendour where it is, to the east, not far from the tomb of Dubthach's wife.

The grave of Dubthach himself was known on the southern side of the slope: on the hill, this side of the tomb, is the grave where lies Lugaid Laigde.

The tombs of the three women—to wit, the wife of Daire, well-remembered, and Eithne, and Maer, and Mugain—are side by side on the great hill.

East of them comes on the mount the grave of Dodera in his brown cloak, after he was foully slain for ever:
it is not far from Cend Febrat.

CEND FEBRAT.	231
The well famed for beauty, made without a pit, and never failing,	50 is above the bed of the warrior Lugaid by Dubthach's keep to the north-east.
The well to which the name clave, at twice famous Cend Febrat,
on it, as I have heard,	58 rest virtues and solemn spells.
Whoever gets it on his right hand shall remain free from disease, free from spell, the Son of God has confirmed it to him,
so that it is his in perpetuity.	60
Whoever gets it on his left hand, the King of the World of Life hath ordained—this is his sudden doom before his departure, quick decay, or shortening of his days.
Since the Tuatha De seized	65
the soil of Fotla, noble in beauty, above the ranks of the noble druids in general s the branch at Cend Febrat.

The Head of Febrat, the Head of Currech, and the Head of stern-smiting Claire, 70 and the Head of Aife his wife which ancient speech of sages touches upon.

CURRECH LIFE.

Currech of Life, with his splendour, few kings there are fit to subdue him: his head was taken from him afar to the mountain above Bodamair.

Currech of Life, with numbers of hosts, whom the grief for a fair enemy gathered: a single hero to cut off the doomed man in early morning—it was full wondrous!

"I am Find, I am a withe well-proved, with a powerful battalion of dripping edges: I cut off [and brought] to proud Bodamair the head of shaven Currech with his hair."

The effort . . . on Fothad; to him it was the sound of a dishonouring blow:
it was the same womb that bore

Fothad and slender Currech.

The daughter of Mac Niad the mighty, Teite, whom chieftains used to guard, wife of the son of Regamain, spear-armed,
by the hand of Finn her blood was spilt.

By this encounter fell Teite, who excelled every slant-smiting stay of battle, and the son of violent Regamain and slender Currech fell.

TEMAIR LUACHRA.

The Luachair! if I remember aright, O boy, it was a fair wide level plain, with many a raid and onset.

The Luachair! it was a bright home, a wise choice; at the time when it changed its seeming it was fairer than the Land of Promise.

The Luachair!
it was a home of hero and bride;
it was a flowery plain, set with thorn, till the date of the sons of Ugaine.

The Luachair!
many a spear was in its hostel;
in the time of Dedad son of Sen, its clover-flowers were beneath their feet.

It was comely for the children of Dedad, when their home was at Temair; comely was Temair round their house in the time of Dedad son of Sen. 20

There was given to the daughter of fierce Lugaid, for her journey from the land beneath the wave, every holding she chose for live-stock, for advancing on the journey.

SLIAB MISS.

Miss, daughter of mighty Mairid son of Cairid Red-Sword, took a mountain as her own special portion for ever over the genuine line of Dedad.

When the children of great, active Mairid left the land of the son of Sen— (Echaid and Ri, royal the band, first beginning of a host free from mischance)—

Coemgen, stern ally, had to wife a noble woman chosen from the host, Miss, who obtained, never to part from it, the noble hill of Senach as her bride-gift.

Fierce Senach, son of keen Dedad, it is there he died, on the mountain:
there close covered by the sod is his rath, with the wail for his defeat.

Miss, the much-loved daughter of Mairid, above the thickets of the troops, acquired by covenant, with eagerness not slight, the noble, lucky title of the mountain of Sen-Miss. 20

TIPRA SEN-GARMNA.

The Well of Sen-Garman, with its chip of wood, what is the old tale to tell of it? and whence comes another name, the bloodstained Field of Criblach?

Whence this Field is named, and the Well of Sen-Garman,
I shall declare to you—excellent feat!—
the cause whence the names arise.

Sen-Garman of the Mount of Mac Sin, from Loch Lein out of Irluachair, many roads the beldame traversed;
since she was not young she was skilled in many feats.

She made a foray southward by the wave, wherein she wrought the heaped slaughter of Crochdond: a noble aftermath she reaped thereto, 15 the sack of Cathair Comfossaid.

Thereafter she went onward to the north, the fierce woman, furious, right grim:
she smote the lusty shielded man, Gannan, in his home in Caisle.

Onward she went-joyous exploit !-to Mongfind, Find's fostermother, and burnt the children, whereby she won fame, at enduring Noid Dromma Bertach. Onward she came without disguise ; 25 she reached the mound of the men of Femen. and slew Dub Roit of the rout in his own home at Formael. Sen-Garman and her fortunate son harassed and plundered far and wide: 30 there they made fair alliance with gentle Criblach from Cruachan. Son to Criblach was Crimthann Cass: he was no shirker in the mêlée: as for his compeer, he was strong 35 in wisdom, was the son of Sen-Garman. The force of nine was in Criblach where she mingled in the strife; and the force of nine likewise, with martial renown, in Sen-Garman. 40 The two of them had the force of twice nine men, (doings without concealment, without respite:) the terror of four nines likewise.

A surprise for Find was the declaration of the bold four complete, that in his time reaving undismayed should be wrought by them in Erin.

TIPRA SEN-GARMNA.	247
Thereupon Find himself pursues them till they went from the land; and they found no place of refuge on plain, on sea, nor on firm land.	50
Till on a day they found there a spring of water, a cool stream, just issuing from the earth, though unfamiliar to Sen-Garman.	55
Garman lays down her son after fatigue and after fighting; Slechtaire of the forays turns toward the well for a space.	60
He sets to cleansing the dwelling stoutly, right boldly; he flings from him out from its wall the clay thereof and high-piled gravel.
Thereafter he came out again and hid not his secret: he found a shelter against the assault of the army of Find a great house under the dry earth.	65 1,
The bold four came toward the ancient dwelling; secretly they brought to their shelter plenty of game and wild stock.	70
They went on a day upon Luachair though it was an infringement of utter seclusion: they see coming down a road I know not a young warrior whom they did not recognize.  Clanad Le: iarna himglanad, &c. cet. 67, arm-agil armquin	75 W

Ossin, he it was; alas the chance that he was not swift of foot! they come to blows without parley: they carry him with them to their chief abode.

One day Ossin was in the house yonder, in rigid bondage:
Crimthand Coel son of Criblach gave him a noble spear-shaft to plane.

Ossin planed his shaft for him submissively, rapidly; he fitted the bright spear without difficulty as Crimthand directed.

Ossin made covertly
a ball of the shavings of the spear-shaft:
he cast it from him from his finger-tips out on the water of the spring.

90

On a time Find was at the ford at close of day in the twilight; and he saw the shavings coming towards him down the bosom of pure, bright Fele.

95

He caught it in his hand—famous act! his spirit was strengthened within him: "Ossin is the maker!" saith each man, "whatever the spot whence it was thrown."

All the warriors went forth up the river, to its source:
they see a silent hole in the ground,
the place where was Sen-Garman's home.

They take their spears to them; they cast aside their cloaks; they set to digging up the earth, till Sen-Garman saw them. 105

Criblach got away from them in spite of the hundred armed warriors:
the noble Find slew her apart in the west at Airer Criblaige.

Slechtaire fled a short way by another road wandering through the land:
he went from them as the wind might go,
the vigorous lion, wise and proud.

110

Find went (it was a famous exploit) after the son of Sen-Garman: the kingly warrior far famed held him in pledge in the west, at Berre of the blows.

120

Crimthand advanced through the warriors and hard was his path:
Find caught him treacherously apart,
Crimthand Coel son of Criblach.

Blathnat the daughter of Mind wrought the slaying above Airget-Glend: a dreadful deed for a wife, the betrayal of her husband, for it was against him that she aimed it.

Alas for the fatal encounter of Blathnat and Fercertne alike! the tomb of both is at the Point of strong Cend Bera.

Ferbrecach and Senfiacail were charioteers to the chieftains; Fergaire came from Fraechmag afar,— many a hero they slew.

On a morning the Hound of the Smith was on the strong rampart of Dun Delga keeping cold watch for combat, to pursue hosts on the march.

And he saw the cold cliff-bound sea covered with a monstrous marvellous host the man of . . . . paid no heed in . . ., in great droves.

They filled the sea-plain with their gathering the bright-winged enormous host:

they sang a joyless strain on their ceaseless rapid course.

5

It was a world of grief to hear their calling, and their hoarse cries: full loathly and uncomely 15 was the sight of their black forms.

Thrice three fifties in the flock;
full plain to see was their multitude:
black as long-lived scaldcrow the cowl of each dusky bird.

Gross their bodies and their legs: they paddled the sea with their feet: long as a sail on the thwarts were the wings of each bird, past dispute.

Handbreadths thrice seven displays the beak of each cruel bird . seven cubits of the forearm I counted in the girth of their necks.

Against them turned—fierce valour ! the Hound of battles and encounters: the fiery hero slew them with his sling, with frenzy and fury.

Thereupon he slew them all entirely, the evil formidable fowls, across every inlet, with fulness of fame, to the last surviving raven.

He severed its neck from its shoulders; he bathed his hands in its blood; he wove all the mysteries of the craft; he laid the bill on the ancient rock.

Hence is it called the Raven's Bill, (through his valour every mystery is seen) from the deed of the Hound that slept not (long the measure) any early morning.

LOCH LEIN.

There is due to the water of Loch Lein a question from of yore, as it is free from sorrow beyond all, in beauty and endless glory.

There was a time when it was a waste, a place of graves, 5 with many a vigorous chieftain, though it be now a hallowed water, with fullness of fame, over the domain of Fathlind son of Aed.

Since the lake of the fair blameless host spread over the entire domain 10 of Fathlind son of Aed Daman, a lay is due to it from every man.

I have heard of Len with hammers in plenty, as being under the marge of its blooming bank, where he shaped by no feeble forceless work the shining vessels of Fainne daughter of Flidais.

At Sid Buidb he was a wright without reproach, Len Linfiaclach son of Bolgach: Bolgach son of Bannach—fair fame—was son of Glammach son of Gomer.

Were it chariot or helmet of gold, were it cup or well-made instrument of music, justly Len won good fame therefrom, it was finished work ere night.

After work ceased each night (right deed), for the accomplished man (no weakling he), at his anvil, he would fling it from him to the anvil of the Dese.

Three showers would it fling forth the anvil with its sparkles: a shower of water, unfailing, vigorous, a shower of flaming fire:

30

The third shower of pure bright quality was of lovely pure purple jewellery, so that these, lovely in purity, were the jewels of Loch Lein's clear waters.

35

Loch Lein of the hero endures with multitude of lean-sided waves: in the land of the Dese by Len's will endures his anvil after him.

40

In the reign of blameless Eremon after clear dawning free from strife sprang up, famous beyond every noble place in the east, the outburst of the waters of Loch Lein.

They tell here variously both nobles and gleemen, that it was not found and manifested in the east till the time of Cond Cetchathach.

CARN FERADAIG.

This carn I see, pre-eminent, the carn of Feradach of the true judgments: I am versed completely in every spot in the tale whence it took its name.

Feradach of the noble pride	5 was son of Rochorp son of Gollan: Gollan with the bright 'wind of wailing' was son of Conmael son of Eber.
A prince seized the high ground,
even Tigernmas, with powerful sway:	10 thrice nine battles with his line of slender spears he won against the children of Conmael.
He slew Conmael, head of battle, in the battle of great Oenach Macha, 15
in the battle of Eille in fight early-arrayed	10
he slew Rochorp son of Gollan.
He slew Feradach thereafter

LUIMNECH.

O thou that dispensest the lore of the learned, that declarest every usage with fresh radiance, approach, above the slopes of oak-wood, the portion of Luimnech, home of the hero-folk.

Luimnech—wide-reaching the story, it has been spread abroad mightily—at all times it is unsubdued, so that it is ever famous till doomsday.

It is a market-place of a gathering that is held with victories, with great renown; a proud and wealthy people held it, a people with saddles and silken raiment.

A multitude assembled here at the flats of Limerick of the voyages; from the meeting of the host voluminous rose the sound, 15 whence Luimnech got its martial name.

Eochu's province assembled there, it was a concourse peaceful, noble of mien; over against the host of eager Luachair came the champions of Cruachan, pinnacle of fame.

The princely leaders brought thither, endowed with lasting fame and prosperity, a noble pair free from shifty treachery, the two sons of Smucaille Smitchend.

Therefore said the host from high-mounded Tul Thuinne, "'Cloaked' (lumnigthe) is the mighty estuary called, as long as the combat shall be remembered."

Hence is named everywhere

Luimnech—proud the home of heroes—from this gathering, as the learned deduce, wherein its true warriors were despoiled:

Or else, when the stream of sail-dotted Shannon carried away from where you stand, past meadow lands, the shields of the chieftains of your mighty host from the shoulders of the nimble gillies.

Lumman is the name of every spiky shield no weakling is the chieftain that bears it; from these, it may be, mark it mindfully! the name Luimnech clave to the river of heroes.

The heroes were saying 65 on massy Tul Thuinne, "'Shielded' (luimnechda) is the stream of Mac Lir: unfruitful are its strong men!"

SLIGE DALA.

What company asks us the legend of the Road of Dalo the affable, of the strong man, unsubdued till he met dissolution in an evil hour?

Dalo from shielded Scythia, 5 son of Edlec, head of many chiefs, was here, busy with plunder and fierce fight, with raiding and ceaseless ravage.

Four of them came over sea,
the family of puissant Edlec, fleeing before the green-shielded Scythians, because they were sore afraid of invasions.

Dalo, who was stout to face wrath, and Cannan skilled in stern arts, Cre and Caire of the palisades, swift and mighty were the famous four.

Dalo died when he grew feeble, when he met trouble and outrage, so that from him, though low is his resting-place, the Road got its royal name.

At his ramparts, in a paltry fight in sooth, fell the warrior Cannan; this chieftain possessed in the north Cluain Cannain in Crich Ele.

Wife of Dala was Cre of the forays, neither unseemly nor cheerless of mien, till she met betrayal and sorrow in this life at the Wood rich in blessings.

Caire was wife of stern Cannan, with a fringe to her poll right red:
at Dun Cairin of a hundred feastings she met death and surcease.

This is her just portion after ceasing from effort and ill-doings, as through her fair confidence she gained her dwelling place with its story.

I have an array of judgments, of melodies and staves in order fair;
I have legal lore and matter for song, even the story of the roads of noble Banba.

The Road of Assal, son of Dor Donn, in great Conn's great land of Meath, the fifth Road green of hue:	41 as for it, not new is its story.  They were hidden, inaccessible, in the days of Fianna and Fomore, till the birth of Conn of the hundred fights the ancient prince's path was not discovered.	50
Since Conn the faultless was born ye can see them and know them; thanks to the five who fixed them, young men are riding over them.	58
There was a ban against going to Temair to a banquet after sunset: to him that was under ban there was toward the feast of Temair.	60
Samain night with its ancient lore was occasion for new and merry custom: it was learned in deserts, in oakwoods, from spirits, and fairy folk.

SINANN I.

The noble name of Sinann, search it out for us, since ye venture to lay bare its origin: not paltry was the action and the struggle whereby the name of Sinann became immortal.

Sinann, radiant, ever-generous, was once a maiden right active till she met all earthly misfortune, the daughter of Lodan from heroic Luchar.

In the still Land of Promise, that no storm of bloodshed mars,
the deathless maid gained the fame that was her undoing, the daughter of bright Luchar, whom I celebrate.

A spring (not sluggish) under the pleasant sea in the domain of Condla (it was fitting, as we recount in telling the tale):—

15 to gaze upon it went Sinann.

A well of lasting sorrow is by the edge of a chilly river (as men celebrate its fame), whence spring seven main streams.

Here thou findest the magic lore of Segais with excellence, under the true spring: over the well of the mighty waters stands the poets' music-haunted hazel.

The well fled back (clear fame through the murmur of its musical lore!) 50 before Sinann, who visited it in the north, and reached the chilly river.

The woman of Luchar full of gentleness followed the stream of Segais till she reached the river's brink and met destruction and utter frustration.

There the comely lady was drowned and perished under heavy injury; though the woman of warlike ardour is dead, her noble name clave to her river.

Hence with zealous affection is called the Pool of the pure-white modest woman. in every place (an easy visit) is known the noble pleasant name of this Sinann.

Sinann—the reason why it is so named, I will declare without deception:
I will report clearly without perplexity its name and its origin.

I will declare to each and all the origin of bright-streaming Sinann: I will not hide the source of its renown, I will report the reason of its name.

Connla's well, loud was its sound, was beneath the blue-skirted ocean:
six streams, unequal in fame, rise from it, the seventh was Sinann.

The nine hazels of Crimall the sage drop their fruits yonder under the well:
they stand by the power of magic spells under a darksome mist of wizardry.

Together grow, in unwonted fashion, their leaves and their flowers:—
a wonder is this, though a noble quality, and a wonder their ripening all in a moment.

When the cluster of nuts is ripe they fall down into the well: they scatter below on the bottom, and the salmon eat them.

SLIAB N-ECHTGA I.

The legend of noble Echtga by reason of her mighty fame and ardour is present to me, with her gatherings of the companies of the men of Feine.

A man bright of mien possessed it, Mac Ruide high in fame: 'twas he that got the bright-swelling land from every king that he served.

From Cruachan's king justly-famed he got a bride rich in substance; she belonged to him,—a fiery hero without fickleness—as is seen in every exact verse.

Lusca Beist was from childhood the name for Fergus mac Ruide, who was reared at Sid Nenta; his petition was not vouchsafed.

Kitchener for the hosts with active ardour, was the son of Ruide Ruad—declare it!
look ye and speak truth!

He took on him the spencer's office, innumerable were his excellent arts, whereby he got a noble share of strong places in the territory of all-generous Sengand.

SLIAB N-ECHTGA II.

Fair, fair is noble Echtge, the home of the grim-bladed warriors, the ground where the sons of Erc used to dwell, the place of Dublaithe near Dergdere:

A notable place of Echtga, Oenach Find,
if there were leisure I could tell of it:
there never was before me, there shall not be after me, any man better versed in the account thereof.

Famous were two women who desired it, who used to frequent the rugged mountain, Echtge daughter of strong Dedad, and Echtach daughter of Lodan.

Though the smooth mountain be named from Echtge, daughter of Dedad, whatever title was called after her, the mountain's name is Sliab Echtaige.

Etarba of the bloody battles, country of the hundred-slaying companies:
a bold pack of hounds used to rend it with their rough-brown squadrons.

The abode which was contested yonder by Clann Gairb of the Tuatha De Danann the strong place where settled Dolb Drennach, where the piper Crochan used to dwell.

I have praised Dal Cais of the hundreds, I have found no occasion to reproach its men,— thy Dál Cais, casket of companies, where I used to see none ungenerous.
Once on a time I, Fland, was light of heart, when I was on the road to the noble clans: I found not in glorious Banba a people superior in clemency and prowess.	85
A man of theirs happened to meet me northward in Mag Find of Tir Mane: he was on hire for an easy year, earning one cow and one cloak.	90
He said to me, in his wisdom, "Chant me the lore of my people: sweet is it to my heart to hear one that sells their music without bargain."	95
Thereupon I chant him the lay: it chanced that he was not displeased therewith: all he had earned,—it was no scanty phrase— he gave it me all together.	100
The just Dal Cais heard of it: he gained honour in their assembly: they gave him—the bright scions— ten cows for every quarter.
Scarcity of vesture or food was never heard of in the Dal Cais or their king: that friendly line, as has been heard, can never be brought to wretchedness.	105
Arise and declare to Brian, whether near, or soon, or far, he shall not fall without a battle until his worldly prosperity be accomplished.	110

SLIAB N-ECHTGA II.

He shall be high-king over martial Erin—hide it not from him, O Ilbrechtach:—
there hears not music, there buys not treasure any king that has fairer possessions.

Speak to MacCoscraig in the north, to the stag that won Tuaim Doss-glan: let him shun the far-famed Cuil, or he shall be plunged in wretchedness.

Tade mae Faelan, prince of noble Fal, Corr Buide and Cend Gecain, bore away from me my share of sin; they slew me foully.

Well did Christ, who loved me, ordain the murder they committed:

I am in the portion of the King of Crosses:
they are deprived of happiness.

I was Fland, the ardent poet; kings were once submissive to my high command: 180 though I was a guide, I was not weak: learned and fortunate was I.

Ciaran is chief of all saints under heaven, save only the great Father among his folk:
I was chief of the sweet-voiced bards, who were served by poesy, noble and fortunate.

ATH CLIATH MEDRAIGE.

When I was wont to wend thither, to the Ford of the generous, joyous, noble men, I was instructed, through lore of battles, in the true tale of the Ford of Fences.

It was a home of shields and skenes, with plenty of stake-fences and of troops: blood-stained were its braves on raids with the kingly Maines:

The Ford where men were covered with blood when wounded by the wonted lances:

when they were vanquished miserably, bright-cheeked men were slain:

The Ford where the Clanna Dedaid waged red strife on a foray against the seven Manes, a journey that stretched far, with their three thousand kernes.

Ill was the cause whence that name arose, though tremendous was the conflict about the reaving of Dartaid's loved kine, whereby great warriors were slaughtered.

Eochu the Little, son of pure Cairpre, king of warlike Cliu, low of stature, came from Cullend, instructed in knowledge, to the Ford of the mellay.

Medraige son of Dorcan Mall son of Tromda son of Calatrom was of the folk of Mac Con, one of the band that came from an island to the west of Spain.

The folk of ireful Mac Con set sail over the restless sea, and seized all this shore by this Ford of Medraige.

Cliath son of Cullenn son of Dubdonn, one of the household of Mac Con from over sea, fell swooning thereafter by this ford of Medraige.

Neide of the deadly wounds, not smooth of mien, 25 from him is called the smooth water among all the folk of Mac Con between Cron and Medraige. Gaeth son of Nechtan son of Fermor, who was the famous son of Eremon 30 son of Ross son of Inber Buide, took to wife the daughter of Medraige. Marcan son of Donn son of Dathach was of the folk of Conn Cetchathach: Marcan the kindly, the beloved, fell 85 along with Medraige. Gaillem, daughter of long-lived Bresal, washed herself in the chilly water: there the white sapling was drowned: from her is named Gaillem. 40 Close to each other are the two graves of Medraige and Gaillem, thou deemest: there lies beloved Gaillem side by side with Medraige. Laigen Garbliath son of Daire, 45 son of the high king of Spain, settled by the Ford thou seest till the Doom come over Medraige. Ath Laigin from thenceforth is the name given to the ford, and shall be for ever. 50 and shall be, till this Doom that thou seest, the name of the Ford of Medraige.

MEDRA	IGE.
-------	------	--

Failenn son of Illann son of Ner came from the eastern parts of Greece to aid Mac Con, as I deem, and settled on Inis Failenn.

After his slayings and his battles Illann's son, Failenn the feaster, went his way onwards and himself rests at Medraige.

Bairenn son of Bolcan son of Ban son of Illann from Spain went onward with his following to Bairenn above Medraige. 60

Hence is named Bairenn of the peaks and white-tressed Inis Failenn: they came to this strand thereafter, even to this Plain of Medraige.

LOCH RIACH.

Loch Riach—who was Riach to whom it belongs?—famous among lakes for its wonted colour: know ye who was Riach who scatters the battle, surrounded by shields?

Four kings there were in the plain who drove steeds,—it was not for long:
Caimell and cruel Etar, Casta and Riach of the bright cheeks.

5

A noble daughter had fair Caimell, cruel Etar had a daughter too, 10 Celbil Fair-lips, womanly the name, and Land Half-red—that was her name among the host.

Casta woos one—it was no famous action:
Riach woos in his turn:
the women are refused them at the meeting that led to their undoing.

Then the men of the South declared battle, as all know, against the men of the North; thence came their destruction— alas for the cause that brought it to pass!

They set the battle in this wise, even in the form of lofty warlike stags: none escaped from the battle, with its treacherous.... save one of the four, after their undoing.

Fair Caimell is slain in the battle, and cruel Etar is slain:
Casta is slain there beside him;
both their armies are slain together.

None escaped after their undoing out of the battle—it was no famous action—save only fierce mountainous Riach, whose name clave to the lake to designate it.

At the spot where their heads were brought in the glen beside Druim Sam, a spring rises there, to reward search:

15 it boils over wall and plain.

Riach builds a house over it:
great enough, I ween, was its evil power:
he put a door across the mouth thereof:
strong though it was, it availed not.

Once on a time, when the water was not sealed up, and he was away in the house meanwhile, the well boiled up mightily—that was the history of the men's drowning.

A thousand men who were in the keep it drowned speedily, 'tis certain; and it drowned Riach of the victories: they lie all together in the lake.

In the place where the dead men rotted under the waters of Ler, with their wealth of blossoms, 50 the colour of each man's blood in turn is the colour that the lake acquired.

All the sheep in Erin were plunged therein every seventh year,—it was a lasting custom: white they were when they entered the lake, famously red they stepped forth.

The Sheep's Thorn, that stands above it overshadowing the spot, excellent of colour, and the Ford of the fair Sheep are named from this, both of them,—it is a grace.

Fot, from whom in truth Mag Fot is named, was famous on the Road of the Kings: this Fot,—comely was his host—was bailiff in charge of the lake.

Mess Alluda and noble Ruathar went early side by side to dye their sheep crimson therein, and the lake drowned them beneath its waters.

MAG N-AIDNI.

Mag Aidne, a plain blest with increase, with wealth and with noble name: the men of Mag Aidne of the horses, men that are not stinting in strife:

I proclaim that I am going to tell of them 5 to their host, beautiful and vast, bringing their legend, the story of their noble origin, from my fruit-laden homestead.

Four and twenty fit rath-building serfs in company, by regular covenant:

the vigour of the kingly men, the rath-builders, was a glory of Clan Miled.

Twice twelve goodly plains,
a possession of fair fame, no false prosperity, they cleared successfully,—love ye them!—
for the children of loud-shouting Golam.

One of them was son of fair Allguba, a hand that misliked not Erin,
a strong warrior that practised digging and used to clear great plains.

Digging up of woods with their stumps, construction of raths on royal hills: there was wont to be made in huge piles yonder fire for encampment and expedition.

His noble fingers used to drip fire whenever it was the will of the brave prince, when they assembled together by day: his two hands [made fire] every night.

Therefore the kingly man demanded a wood from the sons of great Mil 30 to level it, a name full of pleasantness, that it might be a home for his kindly race.

It claims, free from fierceness and sorrow, its name from huge Aidne, because he brought a people from the oakwoods, 35 so that a great race dwells in the plains thereof.

It is there the famous man died, as noble great Segais relates; whence the appellation of the hosts till now is the great surname of Mag Aidne.

MOENMAG.

Moenmag—who was the Moen whence the plain is named, that was royally spacious beyond all battle-fields? it got the noble and joyous name from good Moen son of Allguba.

5

Along with the goodly Clann Miled, Moen was brought by the powerful prince Labraid Luchair, whose fame decays not, to begin the enduring custom of noble shaving.

Two arts had Moen (active employ) whereby the noble prince got his reward:
the business of shaving the gap above the fringe and [of clearing] a plain of great woods.

The warrior free from grief got a heritage from Eber, from Eremon, so Moen, that was . . . . cleared 15 the tenant-land of the sons of Fordub.

Moen first received (lasting his fame) by his science reward for much shaving
(the company of historians declares it at Samain), in reward for shaving he got Berra-main.

Berra-main, noble guerdon of shaving, Moen of the kingly household got it from the children of Golam of the shouts, so that they might be famous for unfailing generosity.

MOENMAG. 887
He it was who was shaved here first (he was not urged thereto without sure knowledge) Forbarr the wright of the hosts, a sight! his fair cheek first was shaved.
Here is the pleasant legend of Moenmag, renowned above all places of resort—mark it !— 30 in honorific clear-tongued discourse, no assurance of fame.
There are four Moens, excellent in judgments, the best I have heard of on populous earth: but this Moen, slender, of peaceful fame, though they were kingly, he was passing strong.
Moen son of Etna, the eager poet, Moen son of Ugaine of the keen weapons, Moen Moraind of Inber Ella— I praise Moen son of Ailell.
There was found, through the noble fame of each, a derivation for Moenmag, for Berra-main: among lords of kine is named from these Moens, Moenmag.

LOCH DERGDERC.

Daily I celebrate this lake, when I weave the lore of legend: a lake not shrunk and scanty at summer-tide, whose name is Dergderc strong and vast.

I have heard of a king of pure strength ruling here over the land of Tuath-Mumu; a prop of his people, notable for goodly shape, Eochaid son of opulent Luchta.

Luchta son of Lugair of the lake son of bright Lugaid Lamfind, son of tall . . . Anle, son of heroic Leo Lamfata,

Son of Smirdub, son of gentle Molach, son of Gaeth Golach, son of Ingaeth, son of Cormac Corach (thou hearest), son of Ailill Laebchuire,

Son of Ruad, son of eager Marthene, son of Find, son of wealthy Sithchend, son of Galach, whose wrath I provoke not, son of noble Riagall, who was a ruler,

Son of Eoin Brec, lord over territories (hearken!), son of Ith and son of Breogan, son of doughty Brath (good renown), of the race of Gaedel ever fair.

The history of Eochaid,—no sordid giver, has been spread abroad far and wide: for his illustrious pedigree is no sordid preface.

A king more generous with his splendid treasures never held Clare of the hundreds:

in every conflict he was a "beetle of havoc" till he was found laid low at Findchora.

There came a poet of Ulster (sordid greed without reason) on his continual questing, because he had heard (choice his exploits!)

35 there was none in Erin to whom Eochaid would say nay.

A single eye had the King of Druim Derg
— he was the kindly one-eyed man of the red sword:
terrible the treacherous business that brought from home the son of Athglo, to demand it.

- "Give me thine eye grey and bright," said the surly malignant druid:
- "thou among all men art specially distinguished by fame for generosity among the Gaels."
- "Thou shalt have, without reproach for deceit, what thou seekest, O Ferchertne!" said the warrior of wounding weapons, "though that is the hard request."

The King of Clare and Codal put (it was a deed of praise and of horror) his finger under his grey ball-like eye, so that it lay on the palm of mac Athglo.

He said, upbraiding him as he went,— (he had extinguished all vast generosity)

"of all men it is I that have checked thee:
thy one remaining eye hath satisfied my importunity."

As to Eochaid, however, he was not ignorant; he went thence on a right fortunate road to seek water cold and pure, till he found a lonely unfrequented spot.

One blameless man alone takes charge of the high-born man bright and splendid: there was but one in a hundred that would receive the high king with peaceful welcome.

The sagacious warrior who was his guide sought out every rush-bed in turn: he deemed, by rule of harmless sorcery, that there would be help in pure water.

"Long life to thee, O king far-ruling, free from danger and treacherous crime! 70 there is not to be had here for precious treasure the means to wash thy face, noble sir."

Eochaid approached the rush-bed;
he was not awkward, he was not indiscreet:
following his hand, as he plucked up the rushes without violence, 75
came the spring, the water of a fountain.

To stanch the blood (this is true), the gracious king's eye is bathed from the spring of the secret waters, round which hung a threat of mortal combat.

Eochaid put his head without offence firmly under the spring thrice: so that the deep hole was red and gory with the king's blood, champion of famous compacts.

Eochaid, marvellous in hospitality, received 85 through the might of the King of the high-sun (a happy mystery—best of all abundance)—two bright clear-shining eyes.

As Eochaid of Assal looked on the pool with its shower of drops, he said, by a sudden impulse, the mighty man,
"Dergderc (Red-pool) is thy proper name."

Hence comes—it was an appropriate title—the name of the pleasant lake, when meet, with . . . murmur, the spring and the broad lake.

RÁTH CRÚACHAN.

Listen, ye warriors about Cruachu! with its barrow for every noble couple: O host whence springs lasting fame of laws! O royal line of the men of Connacht!

O host of the true, long-remembered exploits, with number of pleasant companies and of brave kings!
O people, quickest in havoc to whom Erin has pledged various produce!

Manly in battle-rout multitudinous is the seed of noble Brian, with their strong fleets:
10 in express submission to them have been sent hostages from all Europe to Cruachu.

If we stay to recount its fame for every power, we shall not be able to pour out the lore of noble science for Cruachu, holy without austerity, 15 whose foemen are not few.

Known to me by smooth-spoken eulogy is the designation of powerful Cruachu: not slight the din, the uproar, whence it got its name and fame for bright achievement. 20

Eochaid Airem—high career! when the fierce, generous man was at Fremu, the man who cherished feats of skill, holding a meeting for horse-races,
There came to them noble Midir (he was no favourite with the gentle prince) to carry off Etain in dreadful wise, whence came lamentation of many tribes.	25
Ill-favoured was the man who bore off Etain and hardy Crochen the queen and her handmaid, who was right lowly, yet ever-famous.	30
Westward Midir bore the fair captives after boldly seizing them as booty, to Sid Sinche of the ancient hosts, because it was noble Midir's hereditary possession.	35
Till three days were out he stayed in the radiant noisy Sid: after fruitful enterprise it is custom to boast at board and banquet.	40
Then said strong Crochen "What fine house is this where we have halted? O Midir of the splendid feats, is this thy spacious dwelling?"
The answer of the famous man of arts to Crochen blood-red of hue: "Nearer to the sun, to its warmth, is my bright and fruitful home."	45

	Said Cruachu the lovely,

66	O Midir, yet unconquered,	1

	by Midir, report says, northward at his home,	55
	by him her name was given to it as ye hear.
	Hence men say Cruachu, (it is not hidden from kindly tribes,) since Midir brought (clear without falsehood)
	his wife to Sinech of the Side.	60
	As for Midir, he was no sluggard thereafter, he went to Bri Leith maic Celtchair:
	he carried with him the bright indolent lady, whitely	radiant, whom he bore off by force from Fremu, Eochaid (mighty in dignity was he,	65 his brave troops lived in wealthy quarters, was on the track of Midir, the great champion.

CARN FRÁICH.

Carn Fraich—what is the reason of the name? let it be asked of the learned: the Fraech from whom the goodly cairn is named, his weapon was not feeble in the fray.

I ask of you no petty matter, ye learned that dwell round the spot,
what was the former name of the pointed cairn?

I will name to you—'tis true lore without contention or wrangling—the Fraech from whom the strong cairn is called in the plain yonder, excellent in might.

Cnoe na Dala was its name aforetime, in the days of Medb great and glorious:
it endured to old age thereafter 15 with every man that dwelt there, past counting.

Though many names belonged to the Hill in succession until the coming of Conn, who provoked envy, they all departed from it, and likewise every man to whom the Hill belonged.

The foster-father of great Conn mac Felim was Conall of terraced Cruachu; though he dwelt in stone-built Cruachu, he was king over the tribes of Temair.

CARN FRAICH.

Let him be laid in this cairn by my side,' said Conall, the highborn chief:

'his name shall be on the fair cairn to designate it there among men of lore."

Carn Fraich it is ever since, from that Fraech (whoever it be that inquires thereof), even the son of Conall, never hard about cattle: I praise its people joyously.

Some tell another tale concerning Carn Fraich of the princely house: how it was called from glorious Fidach's son, the stripling who crushed a mighty band.

They have settled that the round cairn is named from Fraech, buoyant of soul, and that it was in the time of Medb long since, who stirred his spirit against the foemen.

By the hand of Cuchulainn, famed for goodly feats, the slender youth surely perished, in a river-fight (though it be a reproach) he fell by the hand of the strong Hound.

By the edge of festive Sliab Fuait in the even-balanced battle of Oman was drowned the son of the champion Fidach, whose hand made no senseless havoc.

After his drowning in the brimming stream his head was severed and his war-cry silenced: the army leaned on their spears, while their great prince fought a fatal match.

CARN FRAICH. 365 All that army make a pause 110 round the head awhile; they utter round the head a cry of mourning; it had been better for them to avenge it. Before Medb quitted the field, she saw a strange sight drawing nigh, women-folk, sweet-voiced, famous long after, 115 their beauty reflected in the stream's shining waters. The blooming women-folk bear the body away with them to the peaceful elf-mound: they utter wailing and vehement grief; 120 unbefitting was their general woe. Sid Fraich is so christened by men from Fidach's son of the gilded spear: at his Sid-'twas a goodly broodbefell the warrior's destruction, 'tis right pitiful. 125 In such wise came his death yonder of yore, to Fraech son of Fidach from Umall at the Tain Bo Cualnge, with its forays: heavy the sorrow of it for his household.

ATH LUAIN.

O thou that enterest the plain of Medb, thy lays shall be fully remembered; declare to the king of the rath, in my poor dwelling, the story of Ath Luain of the goodly champions!

Ath Luain, what is the haunch that lies buried there?

5 whence comes the sure-clear name?

it was called Ath Mor, free from the craven spirit of defeat, till it came by a change of appellation.

A queen, strong in the prowess of a famous host, gained the sovereignty of strong Connaught, whose bitter name, spread far and wide, was Medb daughter of Eochu Fedlech.

Mate to the noble maiden, I ween, was the son of Ross Ruad of Rairiu (it was an honoured name over crumbling Bairenn), Ailell son of Mata of Muresc.

Three queens there were of fiery force who had right comely consorts;
they had rights over a third of hearth and having:
theirs were not unions of a moment.

Ailell, who was not unwise, was husband to Medb:
Macha lorded over Cimbæth in like fashion:
Art, whose skill of spear was faultless, was husband to Medb Lethderg of Liamain.

They performed deeds of daring more than all the exalted kings: thus, by labours of a host, was built Emain, by Macha Mongruad. 25

The feast of Tara,—sore was the strife, with plenty of feats and wonted riot,— was brought to impotent abasement by Medb of the Gaileoin, with her pure beauty.

30

The noble daughter of Eochu Fedlech, ruler of Fal, Medb from cold inviolate Ednech, in truth the fence of death never closed upon a woman that was richer in store of lordly substance:

35

Except for her being in want of the bull that belonged to the king of Macha wild with mead: even as her noble husband reproached her, the son of the king of Leinster, the warrior-prince.

40

Medb (out of her own household she was fit for war) went raiding Cualnge of the hundreds, when she fared on a path of peril against a warrior, and bore off the wife of Conall Cernach.

When they had plundered pleasant Cualnge by proud and pitiless doings they changed their goal, to entrap the bull of Daire son of Fiachru. 45

The Dun Bull of Cualnge,—comely was the splendid brute—was in the Heifer's Glen:

round him they drew a ring of reavers, and made the Cattle-Raid to catch him.

The people of Banba suffered hurt through the comely hero, whose home was death and chilling gloom:

he bound them in galling chains 55 for the space of three winter months.

To many a band, to many a hundred of harmless people, the host of Cruachan, eminent in fame, brought death and dismay by sorrow more piercing than any wound.

After Candlemas (rough was their herding) came the unvanquished bull to Cnoc Tarbga, fair resort of the people: it was a dwelling of dread for many a man.

They made a proudly-matched pair, the Dun Bull of Cualnge and the White-Horn, before the eyes of a host (a wealthy dwelling) about the rough-flanked hill of Tarbga.

ATH LUAIN.

They fought a fierce combat on miry ground on the seventh day of spring: and the White-Horn fell therein by the wild-wood bull of Sliab Fuait.	70
Hence is named Tarbga in the north, in a martial land excelling in kine, from the battle of the beasts (pleasant path), about which there were conflicts, noble sir!	75
The Dun Bull scattered his bones and his body; he bore each limb to a famous spot; he carried with him to Ath Mor, where they abide, his chine and his thigh.	80
The noble name clung to it perpetually thenceforth,—Ath Luain of the vessels: though it was once Ath Mor, with no soft and kindly beauty the chine gave it a new name, valiant sir!	٠,
The White Bull's hoof through treacherous crime is at Lough Dige (Dige was a noble chief): his two ribs—a brilliant exploit, the mighty Dun Bull bore to Mucfind.	85
He bore his heart to Dun Cromm: a fortress against frenzy was the great Dun Bull: he strode with his haunch afar to the noble tribe of Asal Abrat.	90
He carried his buttock across his back, across his mane, to Inis Glas of the bridles:— (they were wonders for a blind man almost to see)—	95

TURLOCH SILINDE.

Silend's Lake-bed was here yesterday; to-day it is a lake whose waters are full: Blonac daughter of Tue it was who ruined it in planting the stakes of her cattle-pen.

Though it is Silend who owned it 5 (it is a certain fact, it is common talk), vet is Silend deprived of her own, because 'a weakling is ever a coward,' men say.

Silend shall suffer under endless toil: 10 that is the truth, long is the labour: to Blonac shall the warriors' lake belong: it shall be Silend that shall perish by the lake-bed.

Silend shall search east and west, over every mountain, till she reach its base: Silend, who was not . . . shall come to 15 a dwelling whose threshold is not dry.

Famous above women were these for grace, they plied no business, after the fashion of low-born women; though their lakes clave to the heroic women. Silend had a fatal toil from her lake-bed.

FIND-LOCH CERA.

I will tell you how the White Loch purely bright received, for a year and a day, that which turned it white enduringly,—for it is I that have certain knowledge.

When Patrick, famed for holiness, dwelt on blessed Cruach Patrick, greatly suffering, (labour and sorrow was that time!) protecting warrior-women and warrior-men, 5

God sent, to comfort him at that season, a flock of birds angelic, purely bright, over the clear loch unremittingly they sang a chorus, a gentle admonition.

This was their auspicious summons:

"O Patrick, rise and come!
O protector of the Gaels, bright in glory!
O golden exalted star!"

In numbers they smote the lake with their smooth-shadowing wings so that the ruffled surface unsunned showed like sheen of silver.

This it is that gave rise to the bright name of Find-loch Cera, scene of combats, as I have heard in every church: this glorious meaning I declare.

MAG nAI.

Good sir, if thou comest into Mag Ai, declare to us the lore of noble sages, and assure to them the designation when comes in very truth the new name of the plain.

Ai son of Allguba, hero of the battles, swift his hand at hewing trees was the first man on whom the task was laid: he burnt the place from top to bottom.

He brought with him a band of labourers, big and brawny, great was the service they gave, with kindly help, four times six strong champions: that hewing of theirs was work for an army.

Four and twenty hours they wrought, as it seems, till their task was done:
though before them there was a host that was wealthier, no fiercer was their vigour nor their valiance.

Ai begged of them, when their labour was ended, to promise instantly, for his good fame's sake, so that his power and pride might be increased, that the place might be named after him, good sir.

Let me be under thy protection, O King of Heaven, that I may be dear to thee without neglect: O King that art great in every good thing, in thy kingdom the lordship of any man is little worth.

MAG MUCRIME.

Mag Mucrime, that all extol, the plain where we shall go as familiar visitors, the plain full of homes and householders, the kin of fair-haired Eochaid possessed it.

A land for tillage, smooth and rough alike, long, wide, and shining; a flat country where girded swords are seen, full of oak woods laden with oak fruit.

"A secret," saith every fortunate host,

" is the legend of Mag Mucrime: needful is the help of sage or bard," saith each of them, "to illuminate it."

From the cave of Cruachu, where they were used to dwell, came a black herd of magical nature, and a demon urged the lean stock 15 towards Medb and Ailill.

10

It was a wondrous property of the herd of swine—a hundred men busy counting them on the same hill, though they stayed till doomsday counting them, no two would find them alike in number.

They ravaged fruit and sheen in the tuneful province of Connacht, so that nought was left but ruin and blight in every district that they visited.

Ailill and Medb came to hunt them and number them aright: and they were found upon the bright sands in their lairs in Mag Fráich.	25
The hunters set to chase them one by one, and to count them right heedfully; to Medb at Belach na Fert they were brought all together at a marsh.	30
One pig, deer-like in hue, made a spring, and Medb caught hold of his strong foot, and with the haste of danger he left his skin in one of her hands.	85

Here stands Duma Selga in the plain where the sons of Muredach used to dwell: now they are gone the royal barrow endures, although it was here before their day.

The grave of Fer Fota is on Ard Cáin: many there be whom he brought to beggary: Duma Selga is its name here to this day, since the chase of Drebriu's six swine.

The swine—so they seemed—of Drebriu daughter of Eochu Feidlech, who caused them to be brought to her? how did she come by the wild swine?

Mac ind Oc's own darling was Drebriu, she was given many a kiss:
and the swine, when they were men, were likewise her own housemates.

I hold naught too hard,
if only the High King have willed it so:
Moses' rod—great was his grace—was turned into the shape of a serpent.

The Son of God showed them mercy when they were here in this life, in that he took not away their understanding, their reason, nor their power of speech.

DUMA SELGA. 389 The mother-in-law of the tender women 25 was Garbdalb, gloomy and ungentle: she cast on them a spell from her bosom. and turned them into the form of red swine. Conn, Find, and Fland were the men,-those were their names: 30 Mel, Treg, and Treis were the names recorded of the women. From the day that their hue was darkened after eating the fruit of the nutgrove of Caill Achad these were the names of the faultless warriors, 35 Fraechan, Banban, Brogarban. The shape to which each of the women was turned caused grief to the Brug of Brega: Crainchrin, Coelcheis, strong Treilech were the names of the sister-swine. 40 They spent a year with Buichet: the King Oengus concealed them, when the chieftain's wife was seized with longing for a steak off Brogarban's belly. It was a grief to Brogarban of Brega 45 when the woman's husband told him of it: "Let us slav the white woman," said Buichet to Brogarban. "No evil hath thy wife deserved of me," said then the white-flanked swine: 50 "if she desire a steak of my tender flesh, she shall have it for thy sake, brave warrior!"

At the end of a year apart they shook the fair tree's bole: it was the day for Medb to hold her state on Mur Muccaisse.

Thereafter they fared westward through the wood, 85 till they reached Crich Umaill, and that was the day on which this barrow was raised.

From this hill Medb went to Port Dubinse in sooth, 90 and she took red Dubinis against the swine in her fury.

Mighty Medb gathered all the men of Connacht in one day, from Luimnech to Ess Ruaid from Usnech to Inis Bo.

95

In an evil hour the host marched westward, though they were long upon the road:
the event that killed each of the dumb swine was full evil for the men of Erin.

Thereupon the swine came forth against them perforce, as for a pitched battle: and so they perished, all of them save yellow-crowned Brogarban.

One of the swine fell at soft Muccelta, 105 and another at Ceis Choraind: one swine at Mag Trega—it was doomed, and one at Cuallacht, amid the blood of dogs.

MAG LUIRG.

Known to me in my silent dwelling is the pleasant tale of no false prosperity from which is named—an intricate task—Mag Luirg with its plenty of adornments.

When Conall, dread centre of strife, dwelt with the King of Cruachu, chief in danger, as an old man forspent on the feeble brink of his grave,

Conall, cunning with the stout spear, caused grief in Cera's Cruachu, when he laid low at his home northward
Ailill mac Ruaid, high in fame.

Fierceness seized him at the tale;
he fled (it was sign of feebleness) over Mag Luirg, without crime of note, to Mag Slecht of old Brefne.

The way to follow was known from his track by the fleet host girt with brown blades; so the stout soldier fell by their hands at Ath na Minna near Magin.

The three active Red Wolves of Martin quenched the sturdy strength of the famous man: they took his head from him, whatever came of it, in revenge for Curui mac Daire.

Loch Cé,—what was the cause of its breaking forth, when it was as yet a plain level and smooth? the pure water, good sir, where is the spot whence it rose?

I ask of you all, who was the Cé from whom everyone names the lake? to what ruler of famous Banba belonged the renowned druid who caused the lake to spread?

What was it that caused the growth of the green lake free from horror?

the joyous bright pale water, tell me of its story!

The druid of Nuadu, heartener of the fray, son of Echtach, son of Etarlam, from his grave comes the name of the lake, when he came to it from the rout of a great battle.

From Mag Tured yonder he came, when poisoned spears dealt wounds, smitten by a keen-edged weapon; and he sat him down in the cairn of the mountain-peak. 20

Thereafter Cé arose from the cairn: he was all but stark-dead: emerging from his swooning weakness he went on to the middle of the smooth green plain.

LOCH NEILL

I tell of Loch Neil—bright gathering—where the famous son of Enna Aignech of the wealthy host of noble Temair met a lamentable death.

Nel was leader of a full band of hunters, greatly dreaded in the meadow-lands of Elga: in the reign of goodly Conall Cromderg he wrought all warlike deeds of rapine.

Drebrenn out of her evil heart sent a baneful drove in the shapes of red swine:
from Collomair—a noisy strife—the hoary-bristled drove wrought havoc.

By the track they left bare Nel followed them
—the contest was a 'tale at sword-point'— with his pack of hounds over a fair road

15 throughout radiant Mag Ai.

Ai was the name of the fell hound of Enna Aignech, excellent in strife, after whom is called Mag Ai, fair under green sward, perfect in beauty.

When the swine had eaten the mast of the oakwood of Tarbga, scene of mighty conflicts, they went, the ever-famous brood, to the lake to satisfy their thirst.

Nel followed them—a path of terror was their track through the warrior tribes: it was the journey of one doomed to a wretched end; he entered the lake and it drowned him.

Hence by the wish of every chieftain is named Loch Neil, with its cloudy brightness:
the death of Nel of the stout retinue is found in books, as I tell it.

O King that drownedst keen Pharaoh make ready for us, by thy royal will, a place on thy right hand, O tender, sweet-speaking King, 35 as thou didst protect every warrior of whom I tell.

LOCH CON.

Loch Con, whose name shall never tell of peace—who is there that knows not the wilful woeful deed that made it a pillage and a prey?

From the sea-girt islands of Mod baying with jaws agape

the hound-pack towards its destruction bore its impetuous course.

The pack of Mod unfaltering, which the beast overcame round Tuirbe's tower, tracked the mighty swine through every impenetrable thicket.

5

It fled before them into this lake, it brought distress upon this tower;
the dogs were drowned beneath this homestead by the swine, in countless numbers.

When it had settled its battles it went to an island of the lake, and took it as a pleasant domain:
the soil was its perpetual domicile.

From the length of that pursuit when their doom came upon the hunters and they met an untimely fate—the lake derives its name.

LOCH DECHET

They tell of a warrior with numbers of troops, whose name was Dechet of fiery force: he was a mighty man, a lord of lands, a staff for clearing of roads.

Glass mac Caiss had authority by covenant over strong Dechet son of Dergor:
by him a rath was raised to be for all time far-famous beyond all royal raths.

The mighty man built a rath of surpassing strength
Suide Ruaid, above the royal cataract:

10 Aed Ruad son of famous Badorn was leader of the shouting troops of the eastern tribes.

5

This is the reward given by the king Ruad, grandson of Mane Milscoth, to Dechet—a fair compact—the noble produce of the red cataract.

The children of Ailill and only they, until the coming of Doomsday, own the produce of Ess Ruaid—no hasty gift, as Dechet got it, no sorry bargain.

In the territory of Ailill, lord of steeds, a tower was built—it was his last award, that there should not be among his children (famous conjunction) strife nor division for the future.

Dechet ate his portion, by standing usage,	26
after ending the bright cold work, on the plain of Mag Lunga-knowest thou the carouse that brought trouble upon Dechet?
He grew drunk and mad by turns,
his seemly bearing forsook him,	30
it was the noise of one doomed before his dissolution:
he plunged in the lake and was drowned utterly.
Hence, from the heroic repast, is called Mag Lunga, laden with crops:
its enduring name was granted assuredly	35

to the warrior, as they tell.

ARD NA RIAG.

Ard na Riag—declare to us its origin if you can gauge it aright! how came it to be so christened to after-times? how came this name upon the tongues of men?
Tell us a while of the gibbets whence comes the name perpetually: make not its yield profitless, since its produce began to multiply.	5
From four gibbets is it called by this name, when it comes to mind; reprobates fierce as bears were they, the four foster-brothers of Cellach.	10
Cellach son of Eogan of Eig, his henchmen were they, a body-guard that deserved not to be fettered, virtuous foster-brothers all fair.	15
Their names were Maelcroin, Maelsenaid and Maeldalua, lover of ale, and Maelteoraid of the throng: a chieftain corrupted the noble kin.	20
Guaire corrupted the band of warriors— it was not hard—by his constant urging: he gave them all they asked to murder Cellach; it was the doom of a headless man.
When mangled Cellach was slain by the wicked deed of his own people, for the sake of a bribe that profited not, Guaire was deprived of lasting profit.	25

INBER BUADA.

Inber Buada this place is named, it is right for the learned to tell its story: what was the excellence whence the name comes, from which the Muaid got its famous title?

I will tell you, for well I know 5 every excellence whence its name is derived: the knowledge shall be set forth in the middle of my book, . . . . . . without fault of memory.

Parthalon of Port Breg came from Greece—'tis an ancient harbour—to the land of Elga in good sooth:
the martial soldier was a chief in every art.

In Inis Samer free from grief, there Parthalon came to land, where the troop of eight found a shore
when they reached Banba, land of ceaseless conflict.

Parthalon of the harbours hoped that the rivers of Erin would give him help:
every law had departed from his band of men:
seldom did host or company visit them.

Though it was long since he left his home Parthalon, in whom the noble men believed, he found not a fish till he reached mead-loving Muaid; the hosts were quarrelling along the marshy ground.

CARN AMALGAID.

I will relate in full the legend of noble Carn Amalgaid to the proud race in mine abode, without deceit or dispute, even the lore of this ancestral cairn.

Fiachra Elgach, lord of slender steeds, was son to the High King of Erin, even to Dathi—it was a strong branch—we have heard of no king who could match him.

Son to Fiachra of the bright cheeks was Amalgaid of martial arms, from whom is named the cairn exempt from weakness that stood yonder in the plain exceeding fair.

He it was that first trenched that cairn—it was a fair abode the son of Fiachra, who never wronged a man, (the words of maidens are many and sweet):

In order to behold his long ships, and to have a place of assembly to dwell in: the hosts of your line rested quiet in the ancient place of burial.

Long time they spent thereafter until the death of the athletic king, until the hero lay in his own cairn: famous for ever is his death.

This is the veracious account of honoured Carn Amalgaid, the hosting-place of alert levies: it is right to tell its name and story.	25
Amalgaid himself son of Fiachra from him is called the level sod of Tir Amalgaid, home of saints and churches and crosses: noble, I trow, is its story.	30
Treise's Ferry on the northern side is called after Amalgaid's wife of high worth, she died at the ford hard by, for which cause her smooth cross was hewn.	35
Amalgaid, that never wronged a man, son of Dathi of the radiant cheeks from him is the island now called, the lovely precinct of the gentle guardians.	40
The brother of renowned Manannan, Bron, who cleared the ancient plain of trees, from him Mag Broin hard by is named, where no help stood by him against Fergus.
Here are the names of the secret places that I name to you according to rule: no man of learning nowadays follows the legend yonder—we are the leaders.	45

MAG MUIREISCE.

O man from Muiresc of the steeds that is visited by the strong-rushing wave, whence comes the applausive fame that the great and goodly plain has won?

I will tell thee without complaint of ignorance, in ready verse full of liberal lore, the cause, beyond contest or question, why Mag Muireisce is so named.

A flood of sea-fish, slippery fry,
the abounding sea brought to the rich land, till it filled its thriving homesteads, both woods and sloping glens.

A full year it lay without rotting:
that was a harvest of unfading lustre:
the king received of every colour at his wish;
it was the wealth fit for a righteous ruler.

This it is that betrayed the name of the plain; hence comes its name high in honour: the plain of stakes and spears eternally, numerous in exploits and indwellers.

Is it allowed to mention in the lay, according to the opinion of sages everwise, the monster, round whom the trouble arose at Fich in Mara by Muiresc?

It was a great sea-fish, huge a thousand fold, that brought no harvest to the lands; its name is Rosualt—clear saying with many a conflict and many a portent.

When the sated beast would cast up its stinking gorge in huge flood over the lands eastward, defiling them an affliction of sore disease beset them.

When he cast it up to the clouds, it was war upon the constellations:
when he cast it downward in turn it was a plague upon the creatures of the sea-shore.

When it brought destruction on the men of the swarthy host in the steads of mighty Muiresc, there settled on the oaken people of the marsh-land the lordly name of the sea-monster.

The name of that creature clave immovably to that land for ever: it designated the spot, above every marsh-ford, with the familiar title for its illustrious men.

MAG TIBRA

Mag Tibra, that fair dwelling-place, do the vassals know its story? brightness undimmed rests upon its wealth: whence comes the name of the ancient plain?

Tibir was a woman of renown, from her comes the title of possession: she was daughter of Cass Clothach, ruler of clans, a woman of the Tuatha De Danann.

Irial son of mighty Eremon won Liathdruim by his valour:
he was a king with no lack of horses:
that woman was his nurse.

Irial went from a fight for kingship round fair noble Erin till he came to the Dun of strong Tibra to hold speech with his noble nurse.

Then a brief sickness seizedthe lordly high-king of Erin, and he met a death that gave him no respite, though it was grievous tidings for his nurse.

All the men of Erin came at the tidings of yellow-haired Irial, to bear him to Cruachu of the clans, the burying-ground of the Tuatha De Danann.

25 They bear with them the body of the noble king, having Erin on the right and the sea-shore on the left: not joyous was their feast at all: they leave Crich Breis for Borrach.

Heavily went the men round the body of the featful king, 30 till they dug the noble king's grave, for the body of the king of Spanish blood.

Tibir plunged into the sea for grief of noble Irial, and the solid wave buried with its force 35 the wife of Palap son of Eremon.

Hapless Tibir was brought to land, and the sight caused the people to break silence: she had no lack of honour at her decease, 40 Irial . . . the sloping mound.

Dun na Gairthe is the hill's name from the cries of the folk of the encampment: seven days they spent there in holding races round Irial's grave.

Mag Glas was the name of the bright plain 45 from Borrach down to the shore: but since the queen departed hence the name of the smooth plain is Mag Tibra.

Gam was the gillie of famous Eremon, from whom bright Sliab Gam is called: from Gam indeed, without deceit or violence, comes the name of the mountain in the North.

The gillie met with a strange death, an offence against piety was the deed that was done there.

On the edge of the spring on bright Sliab Gam his head was cut off in its beauty:

the head was thrown a while into the well, that turned bitter for a time from that deed.

One while in the day it was a salt stream grey and bitter another while it was pure water, so that it is a wonder in Erin, the tarnished spring of Sliab Gam.

CEIS CHORAIND.

Here abode gentle Corand playing on the harp—it was goodly riches: Corand white of skin was a poet in the service of Diancecht, giver of sound limbs.

The Tuatha De (excellent name) bestowed land in fee, for his goodly music, on Corand of the soothing strains:— for his knowledge he deserves high esteem.

Here abode the wayward man plying no fierce vocation and no sinister art; it was a home of guests and of plenty,
when the noble man dwelt here.

20

When Caelcheis was driven abroad, the savage nursling of Derbrenn, fleeing from the hounds of Connacht, at no tardy pace, 15 her way brought her to Corand.

Each man took his fellow's hand round the swine, right eagerly, and the sturdy sow was slain:

not . . . . was the combat's close.

Ceis Choraind, where hundreds gather, was thenceforth the name of the place of mighty herds, since the swine was slain yonder unlamented here in the land where Corand abode.

CARN CONAILL

Learn ye the legend whence is derived (it is no deceitful utterance) the name of the cairn where I am seated, even now, the cairn of slender Conall son of Oengus.

Oengus son of Umor from over sea, his son was Conall:
on Conall Medb bestowed lovely Aidne, this is sooth.

From the land of genuine Cruithne came Umor's household, across the sea, seeking Cairpre Nia Fer in Meath, centre of the Gaels.

ŏ

They asked for goodly lands, all the best of Brega, with its enduring strong places; Rath Cennaig, pleasant Rath Commair, Cnogba of Brega, the Brug of Elemar's wife,

Oenach Tailten, the tilth of Cermna, Tlachtga, the three Findemains, Ath Sige of the roads, Bri Dam Dile—that was the land they asked for.

Cairpre laid a demand upon the men from over the sea, to do service to Tara, as other tribes do, so long as they till Erin, land of swift horses.

They bound their pledges without more or less ado:
Cairpre took four sureties as well, in respect of the service of his great stronghold.

Cet mae Magach from Mag Maein
Ross mae Dedad from Druimm Cain, Conall Cernach, hard of thews, and the man of feats, Cuchulaind.

When the tribes had settled themselves in the east round the shining sward of Temair, Cairpre of the hundred exploits imposed upon them a tax that they would not endure.

They departed out of the east with their belongings unto Ailill and Medb; they settled westward of the sluggish sea, round Dun Oengussa in Aran.

Cutra was carried to his lough, Cimbe was borne to Cimloch, Adar built his house southward Mil is driven upon Muirbech.

Dalach is driven upon Dail, Enach builds his house beside him, Bir is driven ashore at his Point, Mod is driven upon Modlind. 45

They departed thence to Rath Cruachan the formidable valorous four, they set to fasting—strong the compulsion—on the green of Cruachan of Connaught.

The wife of Magu's son besought them for a respite until morning, so that Oengus the king might take counsel as to his pledges,

Whether he would go back to the east or would stay at Cruachan in the west, or whether his three brothers and his son should engage in combat on his behalf.

This is the counsel that he fixed on:
against Ross he sent Cing, to face Conall Cernach of the hundred trophies he set Cimbe Cethar-chend:

90

He set Irgus the man of many fights over against Cet mac Magach, he set the flower of his family, Conall, to face Cuchulaind.

This lake that shallops stir, though it be now a lake under a stormy flood, was once a plain blooming with whitethorn. till it was inundated by the waters of a lake.

Its name was Mag Airbthen, laden with blackberries, free from storm and gloomy skies, until Ri, blood-stained stripling, settled on its green-topped harvest-bearing hill.

Once on a time there came out of the west the sons of Mairid, with thousands of hostages, lordly were the prolific chieftains with galleys full of wealth.

To Belach Liac of the bright warriors each of them followed his fellow: Eochaid of the slender spears pressed on till he reached the Brug in Brega of the blows.

Eochaid we leave on one side because his story has spread far and wide:— how the furious outburst of Loch Lindmuine wrought the ruin of his shapely form.

The plain was called in turn Tir Oenaig Midir and Mag Find, with triumphs of rich winnings; it is now a land guarded by saints since the destruction of Oenach Oengusso. 25

Ill-pleased was Midir at that host grazing their kine on that spot, 30 so he brought upon them every plague that he threatened: for three hours he slept not sound.

He afflicted them with continual wailing for the loss of their kine and oxen in the first hour, their horses—no sudden destruction he slew in the second hour.

Midir came to them, in the next place, from Donncholg in the south: the noble righteous prince of Feine warned them to be gone with all speed;

	He will destroy thy children, he will throw them from him, he will drown thy portion, thy kingdom: it shall be a stormy lake after a number of days, that shall overthrow in violent wise the mighty throng."	70
	Well for thee, O Rí, as we declare, if it turn out as Midir said: but everything that Midir forbade happened to him, and no good report came of it.	75
	The horse staled without delay after the journey, and contrived to stray: it came home in the west, and left its bridle behind.	80
	The stale of the ruthless intractable horse found bottom under the damp earth, so that a sluice was needed over its bed to confine it and to dam it wholly.
	Rí guards the mighty well, he builds his house about it, the generous man sets up in truth, look you, his bed to the west over the spring.	85
	Thirty years he lived over it in his bed—no hard couch, till it burst with noise from its bonds on the eve of a Monday at Lugnasad.	90
	Then it drowns Ri completely and destroys his fair children: it brought them under the silent ebb-tide in his house, it drowned his wife and his household.	95

LOCH ERNE.

Loch Erne-high its leap! was a turbulent pool, without bright tranquillity, when first it showed its troubled waters in the north, on a radiant evening in harvest. Fiachu Labraind, with numerous hosts 5 extolled beyond every armed squadron, unerring hand in use of spears, was son to Smirgoll son of Smertha. Smertha, famed for bloody prowess, 10 was son to ever-combative Senboth, a warrior proved in frequent carnage, son of strong-armed Tigernmas. The chieftain arrayed the battle of Carmun, even Fiachu Labraind-it was a warlike arbitramentwherein Eochu Faebuir son of Conmael 15 fell ingloriously by treacherous chance. Fiachu right radiant, he that found Labraind, was made king thereafter without division. and reigned four and twenty years, 'tis sooth, 20 till Echaid Mumo slew him. Four outburstings reckon ye in the reign of right-adventurous Fiachustrong drink hath not confounded them togetherthe bursting of the Flesc, and of the Mand.

NOTES.

CARMUN.

THE fuller form of this poem is found only in the Book of Leinster. All other MSS., except E (and H3, which is merely a copy of E), are agreed in presenting an abridged version, which omits 188 lines contained in the LL recension. The manuscript quoted as E occupies an intermediate position. This codex has not hitherto been described. It consists of two vellum folios inserted by mistake in the medical MS. numbered 1436 (formerly E. 4. 1) in the Trinity College Library. They contain the dindsenchas of ten places, among the rest Carmun. This copy agrees closely with LL, so far as it goes, and contains, in common with LL, 64 lines which are not found in the abridged recension. There remain 124 lines for which LL is our sole authority; and unluckily the folio which contains our poem is much rubbed, and in places quite illegible. Some stanzas which are almost obliterated in LL can, however, now be restored from E. The condition of LL must have grown much worse in the last fifty years, since O'Curry was able to read some passages which it is now impossible to decipher, even in the most favourable light. A comparison with E corroborates his reading of some lines which are now quite obliterated in LL. On the other hand, the same test shows that he misread a good many passages. This is not surprising, considering the state of the folio; but it is unfortunate that there are no indications in the transcript printed in Manners and Customs, III. 528, to distinguish what he could read with certainty from what was merely conjectural. It must be remembered that O'Curry is not entirely responsible for this text, which was published by his editor, Sullivan, from posthumous papers. The translation is in part the work of Sullivan, but most of it is taken from O'Curry's Lectures (II. 41-47), with corrections drawn from his notes.

The value of the poem as a description of a typical Ocnach has long been recognized. The nature and origin of such gatherings has been studied by Hennessy (Proc. R.I.A. IX. 349), D'Arbois (Les Assemblées Publiques de l'Irlande), Rhŷs (Celtic Heathendom, 410 ff.; The Coligny Calendar, Proc. Brit. Acad., 1910), Nutt (Voyage of Bran, II. 184), Joyce (Social History of Ireland, II. 438). In the Triads (ed. Meyer, p. 4) the three most famous Ocnaige are said to be those of Tailtiu, Cruachu, and Colman Ela. Those at Tailtiu and Cruachu were held, like that of Carmun, at the Lugnasad, or gathering in honour of the god Lug, and it is possible that they may originally have had a ritual character.

Petrie (Eccl. Archit. 107) remarks that the site of an Oenach was usually a famous burying-ground; but it is more likely that the place of burial was determined by the existence of the gathering. Whatever the origin of the institution, it came to be important as the stated assembly of a tribe or whole province. The traditional rendering 'Fair' is misleading, and I regret that I have used it. Amusements were, of course, the most obvious feature of such occasions, but they had a more serious significance. It is quite credible, as we are told in both the prose and verse dindsenchas of Carmun, that various enactments were adopted or confirmed, especially in regard to the dues of the various tribal chiefs. Again, the Oenach served as a parade or review, and helped to strengthen the consciousness of tribal unity and tribal connexions. The Annals record several instances where an Oenach was held in order to celebrate success in war, or demonstrate the ascendancy of a king where his authority had been disputed. Thus in 1006 the Oenach Tailten was held by Maelsechlainn, after a period of seventy-nine years during which the gathering had been in abeyance, on account of the Danish invasions, the intention being evidently to exhibit the superiority lately established by Brian Boroimhe. So again in 1120 Turlough O'Connor, having deposed the Ard-Ri, proceeds to hold this Oenach by way of celebrating his triumph. The Oenach Carmain was held in 1033 by Donnchad mac Gillapatraic to mark his conquest of the Kingship of Leinster. This, by the way, is not (as O'Curry asserts) the last recorded celebration of this gathering: Mr. Orpen notes that it was held again in 1079.

The situation of Carmun is matter of controversy. O'Donovan identified it with Wexford, but gave no evidence for the assertion; it was no doubt an inference from the old name of Wexford Harbour, Loch Garman. His view was challenged by Hennessy, who says in a note on AU 840 that Carmun was in the south of Co. Kildare, but in a later note on AU 1033 asserts that it 'was really the name of a place in the present county of Carlow '; in neither passage does he attempt to determine its position more exactly. The point has recently been discussed by Mr. G. H. Orpen in a masterly paper contributed to the Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, March, 1906. He proves to demonstration that Carmun cannot be identified with Wexford, and brings evidence tending to show that Carmun was connected with Mag Lifi, and must be placed in the neighbourhood of Naas, Knockaulin, and the Hill of Allen, all in the present county of Kildare; and he argues that the Oenach was held on the Curragh of Kildare, which has been famous as a race-course from time immemorial. O'Donovan had already pointed out in his Ordnance Survey Letters (in the keeping of the Royal Irish Academy) that Cormac's derivation of Cuirrech, 'a curribus,' implied (1) that he must have had the Curragh of Kildare in view, since currech usually denotes swampy ground, impracticable to chariots; (2) that the Curragh was associated in his mind with chariot races. Hennessy, in his paper in Proc. R.I.A. 1x. 343, had previously collected references to games held on the Curragh: these, no doubt, were part of the entertainment at the Oenach Lifi referred to in FM 954 and elsewhere. According to Mr. Orpen's view, this Oenach Lift is another name for the Oenach Carmun.

There is, however, one difficulty in the way of this identification. The Curragh is a waterless region: there is no lake within twenty miles, and no river except the upper waters of the Liffey, which, even at Newbridge, is of trifling size. Yet our poem speaks of the rath-lind Carmuin (275), and again of Carmuin na cúan crúchach (147). Neither of these phrases would naturally suggest a small stream: cúan usually means a harbour, and lind a lake or a deep pool in a river. One does, however, find cúan applied to the reaches of a river, e.g. ds. Ath Lúain 104 (infra, p. 375). It is curious that Loch Garman is called cúan crúchach lethan na long (infra, p. 168); but this must be regarded as a casual coincidence.

Dr. Hogan, in his Onomasticon, also rejects the notion that Carmun is Wexford, but would place it in Carlow, near the confluence of the Barrow and the Burren. This position would not be open to the objection just urged against Mr. Orpen's view; the words cuan and lind might be as appropriately applied to a river like the Barrow (which, as Hogan observes, is tidal above Carlow) as to the Shannon at Athlone. Besides, this identification would bring Carmun within Ui Drona, and would agree with the phrase about the 'hospitality of Ui Drona,' line 285. I cannot, however, regard the positive arguments by which Hogan supports his view as convincing: they depend very much on the supposed agreement in name between Carmun and Bairend Chermain; whereas all the best Mss. agree in spelling the eponym of the latter place Cermun, not Carmun. So far as I can see he has not adduced any evidence which directly associates Carmun with the spot in which he places it.

The poem is attributed in the Book of Leinster to Fulartach, whose date is unknown: in E it is ascribed to 'Flann,' that is to say, no doubt, Flann Mainistrech, who died in 1056. If the Diarmait mentioned in line 96 as King of Leinster is Diarmait mac Mael na mB6, the poem must have been written after 1040, as Diarmait did not become King of Leinster until after that date: see note on line 96: and the chronological data in 137-144 show that the 'last fair' mentioned in 140 must be that held in 1033: consequently this passage must have been written not later than 1079, when the Oenach was again held by Conchobar as Conchobair Failge (FM). Perhaps it was written for that occasion. This would explain the compliment to Ui Failge in line 200.

 nat-techt: because Carmun was a burying-place as well as the site of the Oenach.

2. a shiaig: all the Mss. have shiag or slog.

rath-chert: this is the reading of L and S: most copies have rochert, rachert, &c. The force of rath- is not very clear: cf. rath-lind (line 275), rath-buiden (1.323), rath-ordan, rath-ruanaid (Br. Da Derga).

7. taichme: both the form and the meaning of this word are doubtful: we should, perhaps, read taithme, and regard it as a by-form of taithmet, 'remembrance, observance': cf. Faffand 4 (Todd Leet. ix. 66), and Ceilbe 3 (infra, p. 55).

- 12. slog bunaid, the original, native inhabitants.
- bith-gradu, a genitive used adjectivally: for this form of the genitive see Pass, and Hom. Index.
- fáidiud seems a derivative of fáid, fáed, 'a cry': cf. Nás, 38, 43 (infra, p. 50).
  - 15. fagmair: the gathering was held in the beginning of August, RC xv. 314.
- 16. slim, 'slender,' with a short vowel, is distinct from slim, 'smooth': cf. slim-sliag, Liamuin 103 (infra, p. 74); Zimmer, ZDA xxxii. 278. Render 'lean cheek.' For the use of griad cf. Liamuin 104, and Todd Lect. vii. 40.
  - 18. ét: perhaps the verbal noun of étaim, 'getting': cf. Thes. Pal. i. 497, 37.
- marggaid is a doubtful conjecture: most copies have margnaid, which I do not understand.
- 23. The translation offered in the text assumes that tarmun is written for termun to supply a rhyme to Carmun. But there seems to be a word tarman still in use, meaning 'noise'; so O'R., and see Claideamh Soluis of Dec. 24th, 1909, p. 7, col. 2; this accords better with tairm: translate then 'loud was the noise and din she made.' Cf. 303, infra. O'Curry renders 'loud her rustling and her tramp' (MC ii. 41).
- 28. airdmeis seems to be intended as gen. of airdmes; put instead of airdmessafor the rhyme.
- 36. Cairmen: most copies have this form in order to make a rhyme with aidben: cf. 41, 64, 69.
- 38. áes núachair: this is obscure: cf. méit núachair, Maistiu 3 (infra, p. 134): adba níad is nuachair, Tem. Lu. 10 (p. 236), fri dumu cech dag-núachair Rath Cru. 2 (p. 348), gním núachair 'dalliance' (?), Crechmael 7 (LL 199 b 2). O'R. has núachar, 'stranger': O'Curry renders 'newly come.'
  - 39. co tráig: cf. Ailech i. 22 (Todd Lect. vii. 34), as cach thír . . . co tráig.
  - 42. aidcgled: v. Meyer, Contribb. adcellim.
- 45-46. Windisch's Lexicon gives ráthaigim twice with mark of length; but it rhymes here and in SnR 1317-8 with brathaigim, which seems to be derived from brath (mrath), not bráth.
- 57. ní rogain roga, 'not a choice of choosing': roga = roga, which is indeclinable in O. Ir.: for rogain, pl. roigne, cf. FM ii. 934, 5; vi. 2028, 10; Cath. M. Lena 74, 18.
  - 58. soraid: cf. ITD sóraidh, 'farewell, blessing.'
- 66. muir mil: so Benn Boirche ii. 13 (BB 403 a 28) ós muir mil: cf. muir milach, Fél. Oeng.
  - 69. báide can hardly mean 'affection': it may possibly be a by-form of bádud.
- 73. Tancas, 'men came.' It would be better to put a full stop after cét-gubo, and supply a verb, such as roächt, 'was held,' after la Túaith Dé. For gáine cf. IT iv. 547, 552: gaine i. maith, O'Cl.
- 80. Bres mac Eladan belonged to the Túatha Dé: cf. FM a.m. 3304. He figures in the battle of Mag Tuired; see Rev. Celt. xii. 61, &c. The chronology of our poem does not agree with FM.

- 83. fo chisu for fo chisaib, to rhyme with 'Isu: cacht, literally 'captivity,' in apposition to Carmein. Or chisu may be gen. sing. for cisa: in either case the sense is obscure. Perhaps the meaning is that Carmun was a captive held to ransom. Zimmer would interpret the phrase as meaning the spiritual bondage of paganism: see Sitzber. d. preuss. Ak., 3 Dec., 1908, p. 1122.
- 87. cacht seems to be s gen. pl.: 'Carmun of fetters' = the imprisoned Carmun,' Cf. SnR 4035 a ternam iar ngábud cacht. There is a variant cucht.

Crimthann, son of Enda Cennselach, was King of Leinster in St. Patrick's time: see V. Trip. index.

- 90. The reading of the Mss. creitid should be kept: translate 'before [the knowledge of] Christ—believe it!'
- 91-2. The best Mss. read nisill—chiain: the latter word must then be dat. of crian, 'a pack,' metaph. 'a throng,' &c., and niaill is written metr. gr. for niall. It would be easier, however, to read nuall—chian ('harbour, resort'). By niall is meant the shout raised at the election of an Irish king.
- 95. comdas na cned, if taken together, may mean that Crimthann could give blows and take them; but perhaps we should read chomdas (adj.), and regard na cned as an attributive genitive.
- 96. Diarmait: this must be Diarmait mac Maelnambó, as 55 kings are counted from Crimthann down to this king: see LL 39, columns 2 and 3. Diarmait mac Maelnambó is frequently mentioned in the Annals from 1036 (FM) onwards. He was originally king of the Ui Cennselaig, FM 1040. In FM 1037 he seems to be an ally of Donchad mac Gillapátric, who held the Oenach Carmuin in 1033. It is not clear from FM in what year Diarmait made himself accepted as King of Leinster. The list in LL 39 gives three kings between Donnchad mac Gillapátric, who died in 1039 (FM) and Diarmait: two of these reigned only one year each; the regnal period of the third is not stated.

The epithet dúr-gen, 'hardy offspring' or 'born with hard travail,' is applied to another Diarmait in Dallán mac More's poem, Rev. Celt. xx. 10.

97. Ocht maic: cf. Dinneen's Keating ii. 82; also LL 12, col. 2, where the number is wrongly given as seven.

98-100: these lines are taken from Eochaid ua Flainn's poem, Toisig nal-longse LL 16 a 13-15. In 100 Herech Febria should be read as the name of one person.

109-116. A similar enumeration of guarantees is found in a poem in a Stowe Ms., D iv. 3, fol. 30b.

Hite ratha rogab Tuathal tren fri tobuch:
nem, talam, grian, esca idan, muir, tir, torud, cossa, lama, beoil im thengtha, cluasai, suile, eich, roith, gai, sceith, claidib croda cona nduire, drecha daine, drucht la daithein . . . la tule ith, blich mes, cach maith ar chenai fo . . .

Cf. also BB 43 b 55.

110. turscuir: the exact meaning of this word is uncertain: cf. Mart. Oeng. p. 50, where it is used in connexion with sliceeda, 'sea-shells': see also the authorities quoted in Stokes' index, and add Ir. T. ii. 2, 64, l. 722, turrscar 7 landgar a nemi, 'slime.' In the Acaliam na Senorach it is used of terrestrial gear. O'Reilly has τριγγαρ, 'sea-weed'; τριγγαρ, 'dirt, filth'; τιργγαρ, 'equipage.'

115. daithen: Meyer, Contrib. has dathen, 'light,' but the meaning seems to be less general. The word is frequently associated with dricht (especially in this guarantee-formula), as here and in the passages quoted by Meyer: cf. also BB 43 b 56, Magh Léna 104, 10. So dricht oous dathe, dricht la daithgen (Contrib.).

103-4: these lines are found also in the dindsenchas of Tailtiu, 71-2 (LL 200 b 47).

117. uile n-ig: for this phrase ef. poem on Srub Brain 33 (infra, p. 258); and see note on Berba 11 (Todd Lect. ix. 104).

119-120: i.e. they undertook that the Oenach should be held in peace once in three years.

125. baistid: the rhyme caistid in the next line shows that this is the right reading.

127-128: the meaning is: if the pagans (genti Góedel 121) could keep the peace, how much more should Christians!

137-140. Two hundred assemblies, at intervals of three years, occupy 600 years. If the 'last óenach' is that held by Donnchad mae Gilla Pátric in 1033, then Bresal Bróenach must be the same as Bresal Bélach (ninth son of Catháir Mór, king of Leinster), who died in 435 (FM, AU: cf. LL 39 b 1).

141. For Crimthand of. note on 87: he was king of Leinster next but one after Bresal Bélach, LL 39 b 3. Hennessy (note on AU 461) says that he succeeded his father Enna Cennselach as king of S. E. Leinster, about the year 444. It is not clear from what point the 'nine fairs' are reckoned: the date of the battle of Ocha is uncertain; it is given by FM in 478, by AU both in 482 and in 483.

147. na cúan cróchach. If we accept the view that Carmun is to be placed in the neighbourhood of the Curragh of Kildare, it becomes difficult to see the appropriateness of a reference to 'branching harbours.' This is the natural meaning of the phrase; and it is used in this sense of Loch Garman, Wexford Harbour (infra, p. 168), and describes very suitably the windings of a great estuary. The word cúan also means 'a pack of hounds,' and hence metaphorically 'a company, band or family of warriors': possibly then we should here render 'of the wide-branching troops, or families': cróchach being used of the ramifications of kinship.

145. Sixteen kings. From this to 164 we have apparently a division of the kings who successively held the Oenach, according to their different districts. Counting Crimthand separately there are in all 48. In line 93 there is mention of 55 kings, beginning from Crimthand; but this number refers to the succession of kings of Leinster, whereas the present passage seems to show that the privilege of presiding at the Oenach passed from tribe to tribe, no doubt by the right of the strongest: this is perhaps implied by the choice of warlike expressions in 148, 152, 155, 160, 163, 169.

148. slat-benach. O'Cl. has slat i. láidir: cf. slat-brig SnR 5187.

149. Dothra: this is the name of the little river, now the Dodder, which rises in the Dublin mountains and flows into the Liffey at Ringsend, near the mouth. It is not obvious why petty kings belonging to this district should hold the great gathering in Carmun. There may have been another river or district of the same name in Leinster.

153. rudra seems to be sound, as it rhymes with urgna. It is probably a by-form of rudrad, a legal term which Atkinson, Glossary to the Laws, renders by 'prescription, usucapio': cf., however, Rev. Celt. xxiii. 97.

158. fichset: perhaps from figim, properly, 'I weave': cf. rofiged gleb, Ir. Text. ii. 1, 48, line 1510; figed gail, Todd Lect. ix. 54, 17: figed feirg, supra, p. 84, 4: ca froech na figed fri feirg, IA 255 a 34.

159. co srethaib should perhaps be rendered 'with ranks (of fighters).' In MC iii. 539 note, it is said to mean 'the double-reined or parade bridle': this explanation is perhaps founded on Laws i. 138 x; but there in dá sreith seems to mean 'the two reins' or 'double reins.' In Tochm. Feirbe 122 (Ir. Text. iii. 472), sretha sitai fria gel-chues must mean something like 'silken ribbons along her white skin.'

161. Raigne is here treated as feminine, in line 2 as masculine.

162. Bresal Breec is identical with Bresal Bélach, according to O'Donovan (note a, FM 941). The bric cannot be clearly read, and metre would lead one to expect a trisyllabic compound, say bale-béimnig. O'Curry's transcript gives bric.

160. Coemgen is joined with the Three Patrons, as being 'exclusively a South Leinster saint' (Plummer Vit. Set. Hib. lvi).

170, cert should be rendered 'justice' rather than 'law.' chorgud = chorugud.

171. O'Curry's transcript (followed by the facsimile of LL) reads flaithis glain, but this seems unlikely to be right. A rhyme to bis is required. I suggest fri gris glain as a tag meaning 'bright-glowing.'

177. Fothairt and Laigsi: these two tribes are called 'the two chief forslomnti of the Leinstermen,' LL 312 a 19: 380 b 53. (In the latter passage the reading primstoinned is evidently a mistake for prim-forsloinned, cf. Atkinson, Contents of LL 78 b). By forslonnud is meant an off-shoot thrown out by one of the main stocks (prim-sloinnti) of the gens: so in the prose dindsenchas of Carmun these two tribes are described as a forgabál or ('dependent branch,' Stokes) of the Sil Rossa Failge, who in their turn are a main division of the Lagin. On the origin of the Fothairt and Laigsi, see O'Donovan's learned note in Lna gCeart, 214, and Atkinson, Contents of LL, pp. 21 b, 24 a.

181-184. Apparently the fifth and sixth days were respectively assigned to the sons of kings (rigdamnu), and persons of high rank (sliuig enig) who did not belong to the Lagin.

185. The Clanna Condla are the same as the sept of Mac Gilla Patraic, according to O'Donovan, L na gCeart, 40.

186. comga is used especially of the protection of a saint: see Plummer, Vitæ Sct. Hib. clxxix. note 1). The Oenach was under the guardianship of four saints, 165-6.

188. rig-thorud: cf. T. B. C. (Wi.) 2617, rig-aball fo rig-thorud.

189. mar dámair dait: render 'as thou art taught'; dámaim 'I instruct' (Contrib.).

197. Carmain may be dat. or acc., as from a nom. Carma (Hogan, Onom., Carman, sub fin.), so that it is better to render 'Cathair left Carman exclusively to his own offspring.'

204. Gaible = Fid Gaible (157), now Feeguile in King's County. If we read Cruachain, either Cruachan Brí Eile (in Offaly) or Cruachan Cloenta (the Hill of Clane in Kildare) may be meant. The meaning of géc-lúain is obscure.

205. Is lorg lasil: cf. prose dindsenchas, Rev. Celt. xv. 312, a forgabail 7 a ndeoraid i lurg in anaig. O'R. gives lop5, 'progeny,' etc.: probably an extension of the meaning 'track.'

209. On the Kalends of August; that is, on the date of the Lugna sad or gathering in honour of Lug: see Rhŷs, Celtic Heathendom, p. 418; Orpen, as above, p. 15. The Oenach of Tailtiu was held on the same date.

211. The Book of Leinster reads and luadit co dana ar daig cert cech cana 7 costaid, 'there they discuss freely in strife (?) the right amount of every tax and custom.' costaid is gen. of costud, for which see Meyer, Contrib.: here it means 'customary impost.' I am doubtful as to ar daig. The same phrase perhaps occurs in ds. of Ath Luain 43 (infra, p. 368), dia rue réim ndodaing ar daig. It is probably a metaphorical extension of daig, 'flame, fire,' which also means 'warrior.' Such a collocation as cen cath cen indrud cen daig ndeirg (Contrib.) shows how easily the meaning 'fire' may pass into 'strife.'

213. fri båga bil: for bil, 'speech,' see O'Dav. ed. Stokes, 293. This interpretation of the phrase would agree with the suggested rendering of ar daig. It is easy to believe that there was usually a pretty hot discussion over the triennial budget of the province of Leinster.

217-220. This stanza (which is not found in LL) has no grammatical connexion with the context, and seems to be out of place. It is evidently intended as an enumeration of the blessings which will attend the due observance of the rules of the Oenach. Compare lines 73-76 of the ds. of Tailtiu (LL 200 b 48).

Ith ocus blicht for cach dind síd ocus soinend dia chind doratad do gentib Gréc ar fírinni do chomét.

Cf. also the concluding paragraph of the prose ds. of Carman, RC 15, 312. 217. sáma is for sáime, to rhyme with lána.

218. ler-thola: probably for ler-thuile, 'sea-plenty,' i.e. abundance of fish. There is a word lerthol (lerthól?) which occurs in SnR 610, but it rhymes with dermór, and must therefore be separated from ler-thŏla.

219. fir riglaich: cf. prose ds. sub fin. fir riglaig leó: Stokes renders 'that they should have men, royal heroes.' But O'Clery has rioghlach. i. seanchailleach and rioghlach, i. céid-sheanóir, i. duine breic-liath; hence O'Reilly, 'rioghlach, an old hag, a grey-haired old man': in Tipra Sengarman 11 (p. 242, infra), the word is applied to an old woman. It occurs also in Temair iv. 84 (Todd Lect. viii. 34), and in V. Trip. The point would be that, in times of peace, men live to old age.

cind is rendered 'chieftains' (cf. Meyer, Contrib.), but it is perhaps the imperative of cinnim, which is used as a cheville, 'mark!': cf. ds. Loch Garman 169, Luimnech 63, Moenmag 29 (infra, pp. 180, 274, 336): in that case co combáid must be construed with fir riglaich.

220. Literally 'incursions in force against Erin': a natural symptom of Leinster's prosperity. The prose has cen forran coigid in Hérinn foraib, 'no other province of Ireland being able to oppress (or invade) them.'

221-224. Cf. ds. Tailtiu 57-60 (LL 200 b 40).

223. lamar seems a mistake for laimther. For the use of la, cf. 1r. T. i. 106, 17, ni laimtis chena la Conchobar, 'they did not dare on account of Conchobar.' I do not understand in gaid.

224. For these technical terms, see Atkinson's Glossary to the Laws.

225-6. Cf. ds. of Tailtiu, 65-6, Con techt fer i forud mban, cen mná i forud fer find-glan.

228. athfer, athmenter may mean 'worthless man, worthless people': so Meyer, Contrib.: but the meaning seems to be that no woman takes advantage of the Oenach to desert her husband and form new connexions. Athben is used (apparently) in the sense of 'a fresh wife'—in this case a third wife—in the lines (I have forgotten to note the reference) treas-bean ná hiarr . . . gidh sleamhain sliasad athmná.

230. Tradition ascribed to S. Benén (or Benignus) a work on the rights of the kings. See O'Donovan's introduction to Leabhar na gCeart.

231. ná beth for ás na fine. This seems to mean that he should be rooted out of the tribe for his offence: cf. ds. of Móin Tire Náir, 3: rug Nar for as 'sa fine (for fás a fine, R) co fuair bás la hEitsine, BB 405 b 2.

235. citisig. I have no other instance of citisech, 'piper': citisech, acc.

timpaig seems to be an abbreviated form of timpanaig.

236. fáen-chliára: here as in faen-bir, Mag Rath 52, fóen-glinne TBC (Wi.) fáen-maithes Sil. Gad. i. 6, 35, the adjective may have a depreciatory force, and the word may denote the minor performers. Or possibly it refers to jugglers and buffoons: cf. fuirseóir fáen (Todd Lect. viii. 26).

237. fiansruth. See Stern's article in ZCP i. 471; and cf. finnsruth Fithil (a collection of legal maxims?) Laws, Glossary, p. 786.

- 239. slisnige. Coneys has plipnese, 'a quantity of wood-shavings or chips.' Probably the word here denotes tablets made of bark: Joyce, Social Hist., i. 484.
  - dule feda, 'wooden books': the Duil Feda Mair is quoted in O'Dav. 369, 1286. 241. Roscada: cf. Roscada Flainn Fina YBL. fcs. 411 a 42, Tec. Corm. pp. 10, 44. O'Dav. 589 has drechta .i. duana no laidhe 7 roscada.

- 242. On the Tecosca Fithail, see Meyer's edition of Tecosca Cormaic, p. vi. Thurneysen, Gött. Abhandl. n.f. xiv, 2, p. 11. Cairpre is Cormac's son, to whom his teachings are addressed.
- 245 seq. These are the subjects of tales, poems, &c., recited at the Oenach. The 'Feast of Tara' is one of 17 Fessa enumerated in the list of prim-scéla given in LL 189 b.
  - 246. Oenach Emna: perhaps the story of Macha's race is meant.
  - 248. This refers to some such composition as the Saltair Temra or Leborna Cert.
- 249. Soel tellaig Temra: perhaps the Suidigud Tige Midchharta, of which there is a copy in LL 29.
- 250. fis cech trichat: a poem on this subject is quoted by O'Curry, Battle of Magh Leana, 107, note, from H. 3, 18.
  - 251. There is a Ban-senchas in BB 282 seq.: cf. LL 136 b.
- 252. Bruidne; i.e. tales of the sack of a hostel, such as the Bruden Dá Derga, Bruden Da Choca: other such are mentioned among the prim-scéla: sec O'Curry, MS. Mat. 584, and d'Arbois, Catal. 261.
  - 253. For the Testament of Catháir Mór, see L. na Cert, 192.
  - Deich-thimna is a compound like deich-duan, 'a poem in ten cantos,' Contrib. 257. As cengal is used for the refrain of a song, fir cengail may be singers of

- 259. The meaning suggested for egair can hardly be right; the contradictory of gor is ingor. Also the Ms. has egair (not égair), and a short vowel is required by the rhyme. But I cannot offer a better explanation.
- 264. The reading of the Ms. ndán should have been kept: ar governs the accusative in such locutions.
- 265. The list of prim-scéla includes many Aitte and Oirgne: see LL 189 e 34, 190 a 16.
- 267-8. The text seems corrupt. Réim ríg usually means a succession of kings: why should the recital of the King of Leinster's ancestors be a blessing to Bregmag (or Mag Breg), which is part of Meath? And in 268 one would expect chatha rather than chath. I propose to read a reim ratha dar Bregmag, a chatha 's a chrúad-engnam, comparing Mag Rath 148, 5, acht sluaiged re réim ratha is comergi cruad-chatha. If Diarmait mac Mael na mBô is the King of Leinster intended, the allusion might be to his invasion of Meath and plundering of Fine Gall in 1053 (FM).
- 271-2. This seems to be the final benediction with which the Oenach is formally dissolved: if we read dilib for doib, it becomes a quotation of the actual formula employed; the construction will be then less elliptical.

273. Most of this line is now illegible: lag is visible, and probably stands for Lagin or Lagen, but the horizontal stroke marking the contraction is gone. O'Curry read Gniset noem Lagen iar lo. .

274. noem in chotaig: one would expect noim (plural), understanding a reference to the saints mentioned in 165-6 as guarantors of the Oenach.

277. Troscud: so in ds. Tailtiu 145-6, a fast is held to avert disease from Erin during the coming year.

fofecht, pret. pass. of fofichim, a verb which is found in the Laws and in Cain Adamnáin; but its usual sense is 'commit an offence': or else read fo fecht 'a good occasion' (not 'journey').

279. sam-there: can this mean 'sparsely gathered,' sam- being = 'together,' as in sam-il-dánach?

283. mar rosdlig: the translation offered assumes that the phrase is impersonal; but this is very doubtful.

286. ech-thress: see note on p. 350, 24.

287. As the gathering separates, the fighting-men raise their spears aloft and utter a parting cheer.

289. The prose account says that Mesca had been carried off from Sid Finchada in Scotland by Sengarman, and died in Mag Mesca, and that Sengarman met his death in the same place.

290. ni hespa: this refers to the literal meaning of mesca 'drunkenness.'

295. 'it was due to them, and it has a claim to them.' For dligim used of the legendary rights of a departed hero to the place which keeps his name, cf. ds. of Fid nGabli 18 (Metr. Dinds. ii. 58), dligid a doss, a derb-chaill.

298. táth. This word seems to mean 'close-packed clay.' Cf. ds. Sliab Mís 15 (p. 240, infra), fo thath fo thuba; BB 408 a 28, 'cuirther sin muir fo thath tess in cend,' ar cách co comdess; LL 187 o 23, is chend isin táth; LL 30 d 23, i táth na lettrach = hi taob léitrech, Rev. Celt. xv. 284; fo thath na rátha i. fo thaob, O'Cl. (tath). Cf. also tathaim, 'I conjoin,' 'I squeeze,' Festschr. Wh. Stokes 11, note; hence the verbal noun tath; Cath Finntraga, p. 76, ag tath an grotha; C. Maige Leana, 100, 7, tír do tháth, 'to consolidate a country.' Hence again, táth, 'unpressed cheese; glue,' Index to Aisl. M. Con.

301. As taidlind rhymes to chainfud, it cannot be referred to taidlin, I visit. Possibly it is formed from taidle, 'sparks' (Br. Da D. index, taidle), and the meaning may be 'without radiance from them': i.e. no lights, or bright dresses, were allowed on these sepulchral mounds.

303. tarmain. This is rendered as plural of termun, altered for the sake of the rhyme. More probably it is adjectival genitive of tarman, 'din;' see above, 23. Translate then 'seven plains full of uproar.'

304. eluiche cáintech and eluiche cáinte are both used for funeral games : see Contrib. s. v. cluche and cointech: cf. Rev. C. xxiv. 184.

305. These 'three markets' are not mentioned in the prose version as printed by Stokes, but in the Book of Leinster there is this paragraph: Tri marggaid and i. marggad bid 7 staig. Marggad beochruid bo 7 ech, et cetera. Marggad Gall 7 deorad is creice oir 7 argait, et cetera.

The 'market of the Greek foreigners,' or 'Greek Gauls,' suggests a traditional memory of traders from Marseilles.

309-312. Apparently three pieces of ground were reserved, one to tether the horses; one to do the cooking; and one where the women could find privacy and do their needlework. Cf. mnd fri draine LL 188 a 40.

313-6. This stanza is certainly out of place in LL and should come (as it does in all other MSS.) after line 288.

318. 'Less Labrada' is probably Dinn Rig, also called Tuaim Tenbath, which was sacked by Labraid Longsech. See ds. of Lagin, Rev. Celt. xv. 299; Metr. Dinds. ii. 50-52; ZCP iii. 12, § 22.

BOAND I.

In LL traces are visible of the name of the author to whom this poem is ascribed: . . . an. h. . . .  $a\bar{\imath}$ : probably Cuán úa Locháin. No other Ms. has any attribution.

The story of Boand's death is told in Tochmare Emire (ZCP iii. 242), and also in Liber Flavus Fergusiorum i. 27 ro a.

This poem has lately been edited (from L and B) in ZCP viii. 516, where its relation to Tochmarc Emire is discussed.

5. demne. We should perhaps read demniu, 'too certain for dispute.'

6. otá: here and in 11, 13, 17, 38, the Mss. vary between ótá, otá, ota, ótha, and otha: LL has otá four times, ota once: R has ota three times, óta once, and once otha.

asmaig: read with L asmaid 'breaks forth' from asmaidim: cf. Rev. Celt. xi. 130, 41.

9-20. These names are mentioned in Tochm. Emire (as above), with Smir mnd Fedelma for Smir Fedlimthe, and Mann-chuing Airgit, instead of Mórchuing (19). Manchuing is read by three of our Mss., and M has man written over mor.

Inber Colptha is the usual name of the Boyne estuary.

24. Loch n-Echach, now Lough Neagh.

28. nosturrand: reading and meaning are very doubtful. Perhaps we should write nó is Torand, and translate 'or its name is Torand, according to its meaning.' Torand is found as the name of a river (Hogan, Onom.), and the point may be that the meaning of this name, 'thunder,' is appropriate to the Boyne.

26. LL's reading drumchla daim dile, is probably suggested by the phrase dam dilenn, for which see Ir. T. ii. 2, 182; Ir. T. iv. index.

48. thargad, M.I. for thergad, 2 fut. of detiag.

52. In four MSS, the three are called Flesc, Lesc, and Luam (Luman, Luaman): so in Boand ii. 46, Tochm. Emire, ZCP iii. 242, and Airne Fingein, Anecd, ii. 2. In 51, RB have gual, ngual for nglan: if this is right, we must read Flesc ocus Lam ocus Luam: so in ii. 46, Luam rhymes with druad. But what is the meaning of gnim ngual?

55. tarta: is this plural of tart? Render ' without being thirsty.'

68. i.e. the affront she had tried to put upon the powers of the Well recoiled upon herself.

70. moshii: for this form v. Wi. s. v. immlai, and cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 28. 21, and 68, 33; BB 405 b 22.

91. Cnow Dabilla. The true reading is perhaps Dabilla in row osin'le. See O'R. poc. This would explain the readings of L and B. The place meant seems to be Rockabill, a rocky island which lies a little north of Lambay. See Hogan, Onom.

BOAND II.

The poem is addressed to Maelsechlainn mac Domnaill, who was ousted from the high-kingship by Brian Boroime, and afterwards fought with him against the Danes at Clontarf. He died in 1022 (FM); the poem was therefore composed before that date. If my view of lines 53-60 is right, it was written after 1012.

- 1, 2. These lines are quoted by O'Clery, s. v. comhghaill, which is glossed i. comhgaoil, as if it were an adjective.
- 4. Böinde is here a disyllable; so in i. 60: but in i. 83 it is a trisyllable (if we adopt LL's reading). The nominative Böand is treated as a disyllable in these two poems, except perhaps in i. 73, where bruich is probably disyllable (Contrib. bruäch) and Böand a monosyllable.
- 9-24. The object of these lines is to explain the derivation of the name Boand from the junction of two rivers named Bo and Find: cf. i. 77. The first of these, Bo Guairi, flows from Loch Munremuir, now Lough Ramor or Virginia Water, in Cavan, past Teltown (16): this is the northern Blackwater. Find is therefore a name for the upper Boyne before it is joined by the Blackwater near Navan. It is described as flowing past Tara 'from the north-east' (14). If this reading is sound, the poet must here be tracing the course of the river up-stream, as it flows from S.W. to N.E. Perhaps we should read aniar-thuaid, which would mean that it passes Tara to the N.W.

What, then, is Find Gaileóin (9)? As one of the two Finds is said to flow 'past Tara,' the other must join it below that point. Line 15 should, as I now think, be rendered 'they (the two Finds) meet at the Confluence,' 'con Chommar. This is the name given to the meeting of the Boyne and Blackwater (cf. O'Curry's Magh Leana, 67, note k): the full form of the name is Commar (or Commor) Mana: see Hogan, Onom. The two Finds are therefore the upper Boyne and the Blackwater. Find Lifi must be the Boyne, which rises in Mag Lifi, and Find Gaileoin, also called Mifind (12) Bô Guairi, and Banna (20), is the Blackwater. The two Finds are said to meet with the Boyne at Commar Mana (15-16); we should express the same idea by saying that 'they meet and form the Boyne.'

The translation of lines 15-16 given in the text is grammatically possible; but it makes the context unintelligible.

- 16. I can make nothing of bán-brondad. The conjecture bán-bronnat gives good sense, but a bad rhyme.
- 20. Banna is not a good rhyme for aba: possibly we should read Mana: this might explain the name Commar Mana.

25 sq. This story of Boand's intrigue with the Dagda is told briefly in the foretale to Tochmarc Etdine, published by Stern in ZCP v. 523. She is there made wife of Elemar (or Elemaire). Stern does not seem to have observed that the same incident is related at greater length in metrical form in LL 208 b. In this version of the story, as in our poem, Boand is wife of Nechtan, and Elemaire is her brother. The Dagda finds her in Elemaire's house, and after vainly trying to get her from Elemaire's keeping, he invents a pretext for getting the inconvenient brother out of the way. Elemaire is unwilling to go: the Dagda gives him leave to return in the same day; but he is detained by a feast which he cannot avoid, and is absent for nine months. During all that time the sun does not sink (cf. 33-36): thus the undertaking that he should come home before nightfall is not violated. Meanwhile the Dagda gains his end with Boand, and before the end of the nine-month day a son is born, who is Oengus mac Ind 'Oc. This is how Boand was brought to bed in a single day (line 32). Neither the foretale of Tochm. 'Etdine nor the poem in LL 208 says anything of Boand's drowning : this is probably due to a later diascenast.

33-36. This stanza is taken from LL 208 b 21 (a druid is offering to enwrap Elemaire in a magic mist).

'Missi fossaigfes in g[r]éin · co cend nói mís, mór in búaid do gorud in rafeor ráin · i cleithi áin aeóir úair.'

Cf. FM vi. 2028, 9, i ccléithib aeóir. I take raeóir to be ro-aeóir. Dinneen has paep 'darkness.'

44. soised: this seems to be past subj. of saigim, used impersonally: cf. Dinneen, poicim 'I reach;' Strachan, Verbal system of Saltair na Rann, 73, rosagim, rosochim.

53-60. These stanzas seem to refer to the fighting which weut on in Meath between Maelmorda mac Murchada, King of Leinster, and Maelsechlainn in the year 1012. In that year Maelmorda, supported by Flaithbertach ua Neill, King of Ailech, and other chieftains, made an incursion into Meath, and, after suffering a reverse at Maelsechlainn's hands, joined forces with the Danes under Sitric, and inflicted a heavy defeat upon Maelsechlainn (Cogad Gaedel re Gallaib, pp. 146-148). The sense of 53-4 is not clear: uirre must refer to the Boyne; dogabaim means 'I commit an offence, do injury,' Wb 22 b 9, Eriu ii. 56; but perhaps dogabad = rogabad. The meaning may be that the Boyne is choked by the heaps of slain men. In 58 leth Cuind stands for the forces of Maelsechlainn, who was recognized by Brian as over-lord of Leth Cuinn in 998 (CGG 109).

CNOGBA.

THE prose dindsenchas of Chogba (Knowth, near Drogheda) is edited in Stokes' Bodleian Dindsenchas, no. 43. 1 print here a fuller text from Y, with corrections from HSS<sub>3</sub>.

Echtach ingen Deaga [Daghdha HS<sub>3</sub>] déid-ghil · Englic, Nas, Búi cen brath, is iad sin mná Logha línmair · rug rogha ó rignaib co rath.

Cnogba, whence was it named? not hard to tell. Englie, daughter of Elemaire, Aengus mae ind Oc loved her, and could not win her. They held a gathering for sports between Cleitech and Sid in Broga, and the fairy people and the noble folk of all Erin used to attend these sports every Samain eve, bringing with them provision of shell-fruit, that is, nuts. The three sons of Derg, son of Etaman, came from the North out of Sid Findabrach, and bore off the daughter of Elemaire at a swoop, unknown to the young men (timcheall = cen fis dóib). These, when they knew of it, pursued after the reavers as far as the knoll that is called Cnogba. There they raised a loud lament, and this is the feast that sustained them there—the nut-crop. Hence the name is derived, from the lament over the nuts (cnó-guba):—

"Hence comes Cnogba of the troops, so that it is famed among every folk, from the lament after stripping its nuts, when the daughter of Elemaire was lost."

Or else it was named after the King of Britain's daughter Búi, wife of Lug: and these are the wives of Lug, as the poet says:—

"Echtach, daughter of white-toothed Daig, Englic, Nas, guileless Bui, these are the wives of Lug, lord of hosts, who won the flower of gracious queens."

Our poem is attributed in S to Flann mac Lonan, who died in 918; but this cannot be right. The other manuscripts prefix the name of Flann file, meaning, perhaps, Flann Mainistrech.

2. Lug mac Céin is another name of Lug mac Eithlenn.
TODD LECTURE SERIES, VOL. X. 2 K

- 7. and for ane, which is sometimes used of place: cf. BB 407 a 45 dia dudcaid aniar ane.
  - 9-10. amach ó Búa, 'from the days of Búa.'
  - 17. Englee is mentioned in Gilla Modutu's ban-senchas LL 137 a 30.
  - 26. rosfarraid: probably for dosfarraid (tarraid).
- 33. Cf. Oss. iii. 118, 13, Is é lón tugadar Tuatha Dé Danann leo a Tir Tairngire il enódha corcra, &c.
- 43. dlug: on this word see Contrib., also a note in Ériu iv. 238. The rendering 'possession' suggested in the latter locus does not suit our context. In Ir. T. iii. 504 dluig legis seems clearly to mean 'desire of healing.'
  - 46. Dubthach is presumably a contemporary king of Meath.
- 48. Bresal Bó-díbad is mentioned by the annalists, LL 23 a 28; FM a. m. 4991; cf. Cóir Anm. 269, Keating ii. 181; but nothing is said of his tower.
- 59. rothócaib, cf. Rev. Celt. xxiv. 180, tócbáil giall ocus cána; but I should now prefer to read rothobaig (derivative of tobach).
  - 65. for fecht: read, perhaps, fo fecht, as a cheville.
- deccra, plural of deccair, is used especially of places notable for some association.
  - 79. ní dernad co cend, 'was not completed.'
  - 80. tíat: a late substitute for tíagait, formed from téit.
  - 83. mó achách: see Contrib. achách.

NAS.

The metrical system of this piece is exceedingly complex. The end-words are all monosyllables, except in 45-48. Those of the second and fourth lines are perfect rhymes: those of the first and third make imperfect rhymes (assonances) with the second and fourth end-words: that is, they agree in quantity of vowel, and the consonants belong to the same rhyme-classes. Further, the first and third end-words in most have an echo-rhyme in the following lines: there are also in every stanza internal rhymes between 1 and 2, 3 and 4. Finally, there is alliteration in almost every line. The natural consequence is that the diction is highly artificial and difficult.

The author's name is given in L only as Mac Nia. He is, no doubt, the same person as the Mac Nia to whom one of the poems on Brug na Béinde is attributed: Metr. Ds. ii. 18. His name is there given in YMS<sub>2</sub>S<sub>3</sub> as Mac Nia mac Oengusa, in the Rennes Ms. as Maic Nia mac Oenna, in H as Maic Niedh mac Aonagain. O'Curry (MS. Mat. 505) writes it Mac Nia, son of Oenna, on the authority of BB's copy of the same poem; but in that manuscript it is written 'McNia mac Oen.' The poem on Rath Essa is attributed to him in H, where he is called Maichiadh mac Aonaccan.

- 2. traite may be an adjectival genitive, or we may read i traiti with most mss.
- 3. Lug: this is Lug mac Céin: see Cnogba 2.

- 6. mbán, 'white-skinned' rather than 'white-clad.'
- 7. rostúi ás: literally, 'growth stirred them,' i.e. they conceived; for lúaim, 'I move,' see Wi., and cf. Rev. C. xiv. 408 § 18, luathium luis Goll a láma: LL 166 b 35, diaslói for slicht a charpait (reflexive).
- 10. This line is quoted by O'Clery, with the gloss is dearsgaithe no saincamhail a dhreach is a dath. He seems to regard dligid as an adjective. For the rendering given in the text see note on Carmun, 295.

drech is the 'aspect' of the place: cf. druim ndrech-slemon, Metr. Ds. ii. 46.

- 11. For testa= 'has died' see ZCP ii. 50, 4: Pass, and Hom. s. v.
- 13. rogaibi. Strachan notes (Verbal System of SnR) that the -i of the s-pret., 3 sing. is sometimes extended from i-verbs to those of another class: he quotes rogaba (for rogabai?), SnR 6383.
- 15. grés is perhaps put for do grés; or possibly the construction may be im grés gairg-dliged, 'on account of the fashioning (?) of stern laws.'
- 23. marb-alt. O'Dav. has alt, i. aircetal: cf. Mart. Oeng. index, altae: Metr. Ds. ii. 28, glé-alt: O'Clery glealt, i. glain innsce. The line means 'she died young.'
- 26. snomda, I take to be an adjectival genitive = snomtha, gen. of snomad 'act of stripping bark' (Laws, Glossary) = snobad, from snob, 'bark,' see ZCP iv. 359.
- 27. garg-mathim: the second element must be acc. of maithem, 'forgiveness, remission': garg seems to belong to gnim, but is transferred by hypallage.
- 33-34. cáine—chlaine. I have kept these forms as they are written in most mss. instead of the older cóine—chlóine.
- 29. Lug was the legendary founder of the Oenach Tailten: see ds. of Tailtiu, Rev. Celt. xv. 50.
- 35, cluche cned: this seems to imply that the funeral games included something like a tournament.
- 37. Maidiud seems to be verbal noun of moidim (the usual form is moidem). Does it mean 'subject of boasting,' or 'panegyric of the deceased'?
- 38. fáidiud, from fáid (fáed), 'ery': cf. 43. fés is used in Br. Da Derga § 61, fés ichtarach, 'beard on the lower lip': cf. Magh Rath, 20, 8-9, fés ichtair—fés tíachtair. O'Cl. has fés i. bél, which may be a secondary meaning: fáidiud fás fri fés will then mean 'lip-mourning.'
  - 39. gleós I take to be = glés, so spelled to rhyme with beós.
- 40. antem: Meyer, Contrib. suggests that this word = an-timm, 'untimid': if so, it may mean here 'a man of valour.'
- 45. testan: I have not found this word elsewhere; it may be = Welsh testun 'theme, argument' (Pughe), which Loth regards as a loan from testimonium (Mots Latins, 211).
- 47. os Chúan: the prose version says they had been summoned to cut down the wood of Cuan.
- 48. The rendering offered assumes that bian rosbidestar = ros-bian-badestar.
  But it is simpler to translate 'enduring (ever-famous) Taltiu extinguished them.'

CEILBE.

The prose legend of Ceilbe is found in most copies of the Dindsenchas, but without the usual metrical version. The poem printed here is given in four copies only. (Of one of these, V, no account is taken.) It is attributed in one copy to an O'Mulconry, whose death is recorded by the Four Masters anno 1543, with the following notice: 'Maurice the son of Paidin O'Muleonry, a man learned in history and poetry, a man of wealth and affluence, a learned scribe, by whom many books had been transcribed, and by whom many poems and lays had been composed, and who had kept many schools superintending and learning, several of which he had constantly kept in his own house, died, after having gained the victory over the Devil and the world.' He was evidently held in considerable esteem, and if we may judge by this specimen he was a master of the cryptic style which constituted the principal merit of scholarly poets. It has been pointed out in Hermathena, 1907, p. 474, and 1909, p. 389, that O'Clery's glossary contains a number of quotations from this composition. The drift of the first four stanzas is that the author is called upon to repair the omission of older poets who had neglected to put the story of Ceilbe into verse.

1. comma. Meyer, Contrib. quotes a gloss from H. 3. 18, coma .i. ceol: cf. Ériu i. 192, comae réaguil in Choimded: but this word rhymes with nospromae, ibid. 202, whereas in line 120 of our poem comma rhymes with tromma.

2. O'Clery, s. v. airilleadh quotes this line, with the gloss i. as dlightheach d' Athairne. O'R. gives 'hire, wages,' as the meaning of airilleadh: in the Laws airilliud designates some sort of title to property: cf. O'Dav. s. v.

It is not clear why Athairne's name is introduced. The legendary author of the Dindsenchas was Amairgen; perhaps bardic tradition allowed a share in the work to his contemporaries Athairne and Ferchertne.

 th'aithme: so S<sub>3</sub>: haithme Y: taithme H: the word should alliterate with icht. It is a by-form of aithmet 'commemoration.'

iocht is variously explained by O'R. 'elemency, justice, good nature, confidence': Dinneen adds 'pity.' It occurs in ds. Sliab Echtga ii. 88 (p. 310), icht is engnam.

- 4. inglinne 'insecure,' O'R.: rather 'bad security,' the opposite of glinne.
- caibtel may be rendered 'stanza' (Mart. Oeng. index): the order of words being then cen chomma caibdil 'not to compose a stanza.'
- eisledach I have found only in the Lecan Glossary (ACL i. 57), where it is explained by meata 'cowardly.'
- 7. This line is quoted by O'Clery s.v. ruadh, with the gloss ni thigh dath ar bith gan ruamann. P. O'Connell explains ruamann as 'the first dye or tinge, or the stuff that gives it, and prepared (sic) for the second or last.'
- Also quoted by O'Clery s.v. deachair (but with dhuain for duar), and explained sgél gan a dhuain ina leanmhain. For duar 'quatrain,' see Stokes, Metr. Gloss.

- Freenaire fri hecnaire, i.e. bards of the present and of the past. can condire fri freenaire is a metrical term, LL 37 b 36.
  - 10. O'Cl. has feanchas .i. seanchas : cf. fénechus, Wi.
- 12. O'Cl. quotes this line under scarthonna, which is glossed .i. eigsi no caludha.
  - 13. ria cur, i.e. ria cur i comma.

With romermais cf. rotirmais écáine, p. 352, 71; roshirmais ven-ainm vile, BB 402 a 35.

- 14. aidne il aos, mar ata aidhne na Borana 7 aidne an dinnseanchais, O'Cl. Bergin suggests that this may be a mistake for aigne, 'advocate.'
  - 15. gada is third person: in t-aba is its subject.
- tascur should rather be rendered 'attendants, retinue': cf. O'Dav. 1501, 1606.
- 21. tathain, adjectival genitive of tatham 'death': of. Dinneen, conteam, and ds. of Odras, 53 (Lc. 523).
- 23. This line seems to mean that Ceilbe thought all other household work should be suspended while the feast was being prepared.
  - 24. coigle: see Contrib. coicle.
- 29. tiar righe .i. tuar imdheargaidh, O'Cl. s.v. righe. A poem in H 4. 5 (T.C.D.) begins Tuar righe rath tighearna, Abbott, Catalogue 367.
- 30. midige: is this gen. of midech, which is glossed laidir no calma, Ir. T. iii. 276? Bergin suggests that it may be 'belonging to Meath.'
  - 34. nar maîte lit. 'not to be grudged' (mbidim): cf. Dinneen, maoibre.
  - 35. fairthe: O'Cl. has fairthe i. fleadh, and also fairthe no a bfairthe i. go
    - 39-40. These lines are obscure. O'Cl. has rú .i. rún . a rú . a rún.
    - 41. O'Cl. has dorr .i. fearg . do dhruim a dhoirre .i. a fheirge.

For do druimm 'by reason of,' see Pass. and Hom. index.

Under gadaim O'Cl. has gadais i. guidis: if this is right, the word is a late formation from gaid 'prayed.' But perhaps we should read gadais . . . céin saogail 'deprived her of length of life.' sentuinne, which also means 'an old woman' (Wi.), here probably means 'old age.' Compare the verses quoted in the prose version, Rev. C. xv. 319, swgal sund co sentainne for rathaib nitraib (so LL) 'may you not have long life lasting to old age!'

- 44. donoisig: cf. O'Cl. nois .i. oirdheirc . do noisigh .i. do oirdhearcaidh.
- 49. diultaim (dosluindim) is usually found with fri governing the person (not, as here, the thing) refused: v. Wi., and cf. Togail Troi, 375, radiult . . riu.
  - O'Cl. has dathadh .i. tiodlacadh: I have not met the word elsewhere.
  - 51. fairthe: cf. note on 35.

foruime: perhaps gen. of foram, 'motion,' &c., Wi.

55. the: the rendering 'yonder' here and in 67 supposes the existence of a word related to ane, as thall to anall, thair to anair, &c. The same word is perhaps to be recognized in Metr. Ds. ii. 26, 3, im threbthus te; supra, p. 172, 73

- sin taig the; 332, 23 in each thromthuirt te; 288, 39 isin topur the; 206, 5 in toenach the (de, te mss.); BB 406 a 15 ria cath Muige Tuired te. In all these passages, however, it is possible to regard the word as a somewhat otiose adjective. For ane, Meyer Contrib. gives the meaning 'then, therefore'; but it seems also = 'there': cf. BB 407 a 45 dia tudcaid aniar ane; Ir. T. i. 100, 5 anuas ane.
- 58. H reads indincrech-; Y and S<sub>3</sub> have anincrech-. Read in t-inchrechaid, and translate 'the critic is ever a great terror.'
  - 61. condla: ef. Contrib. cundla.
- 62. For fresabra 'opposition,' cf. Mag Rath, 118, 10; Rev. C. xiii. 121, LL 26 a 24, 26.
  - 70. rolangach .i. romeablach, O'Cl.
  - 71. co faichlib: O'Cl. has go bfaichlibh .i. go tuarastal.
  - 73. Wicéb: see Bergin, ZCP iii. 487.
- 74. Cerball, son of Muirecén, King of Leinster: see Rev. C. xx. 7. His death is recorded by FM 904.
  - 75. 'na eigre: i.e. the place inherits her name: she has no other heir; cf. 111-2.
- fann-ad rhymes with Dallán, and must therefore be a compound, formed apparently from ad 'luck.'
- 81. & furáin: O'R. has pupán 'welcome, salutation'; so Dinneen, popán. It is, no doubt, the same word as eráin (uráin, furáin), which means (1) 'excess': (2) 'advance,' cf. Meyer, RC xxxiii, 97: here 'advancing to greet.'
  - 88. cuimge: apparently for cumcai.
- 89. O'Cl. has intreabh i. easbaidh. The word usually means 'furniture.' The rendering in the text is a mere guess.
- 90. seél fromtha 'merely to prove'; like cuit adaill 'merely a visit,' Ml. 102 a 15.
- 99. millfet lí th' aigthe = 'I will kill thee': cf. gur cláechlódh a lí 'till he died,' Contrib. s.v. conimchlóim.
  - ar m' fechtas : cf. Laws i. 224 fri fechtas fadesin 'in his own turn.'
- 100. eisceptus is common in the Laws in the sense 'exception,' but this seems out of place here: O'Cl. has eisceptus i. cur in agaid.
  - 103-4. The order of words is cen m'ainmed tre cen taidbred.
- 106. This line is parenthetical. For dia 'enough,' see Contrib. It is usually employed in interjectional phrases (Bergin).
- O'R. gives 'toll' as one meaning of cumal: it is an extension of its usual employment as a unit of value.
- am' chinaid; for this use of the preposition in see Monastery of Tallaght, p. 166 (note on 130, 18). So in the next line im = i mo.
- 116. snaidm properly = 'knot': hence 'difficulty,' Dinneen; but perhaps the meaning is, 'was not the bestowal of it a compact binding upon her?': cf. Wi. s.v.
- 117-120. The closing stanzas are very obscure. O'Cl. has trom .i. tomhra .7 tomhra .i. tearmonn: so also s.v. tomhra.

119. For tromma (trumma) 'dignity,' v. Meyer, Triads, index. The meaning may perhaps be: As a return for supplementing the omission of the poet of the Dindsenchas (cf. 1-2, above), I hope for his protection, which is a small matter for so great a personage as he is.

121-4. As to the meaning of these lines, I conjecture that the writer is apologizing for not being more devout in attending Mass. Or perhaps we should translate: 'Seek not strict account—if thou, Lord, purposest to . . . me: what dost thou do with thy family at noon if the exact account is required?' (i.e. what profit is there in the sacrifice of the Mass if an exact account is demanded of us for our sins?)

LIAMUIN.

The situation of Liamuin has been discussed by G. H. Orpen, Journ. R.S.A.I. for 1906, pp. 76 sq. He rejects the usual identification with Dunlavin in Wicklow, and holds that Liamuin is now represented by Newcastle Lyons, which lies about eight miles from Dublin, a little off the road to Naas. Hogan, Onom., recognizes two or more places of the name in Leinster. The other places mentioned in this poem, so far as they have been identified, might have been associated either with Dunlavin or with Newcastle Lyons.

The story is concerned with two families, one belonging to the Dési, settled in East Munster, the other to the Erainn of Munster. The pedigrees of both are found among the tribal genealogies (see below on 29 and 63).

- 3. ar-ree: see Thes. Pal. ii. 63 note b, and 162 note d (hi rece); also p. 140, all supra; LL 147 a 47; 166 b 45. The phrase means something like 'forthwith,' ohne Weiteres.'
- 7. cen malairt 'without change,' especially 'change for the worse, detriment': see Wi.: O'Day. 1236.
- 9. Forcarthain: the manuscripts vary between Forcarthain and Fercarthain each time either name occurs; but the balance of evidence is in favour of calling the place Forcarthain and the girl Fercarthain. The place was somewhere near Rathcoole, half way between Dublin and Naas (Onom.).
- 10. Trustiu: in the prose version Trustiu is said to have been killed at Ath Truisten, which O'Donovan places near Mullaghmast in Kildare (FM ii. 635). Miannach has not been identified.
- 16. Dubthach is called king of the Dési of Brega, in a historical sense; the tribe had been expelled from Meath in the time of Oengus Gái-búaibthach several generations earlier; see FM 265, and note on line 29 below.

Hogan identifies the Dubthair here mentioned with Duffery, near Baltinglass; but this is neither in the original home of the Dési nor in the lands which they had colonized in the south.

21. mi bendachtan 'month of blessing,' must mean an extra month beyond the year contracted for, but I can cite no parallel.

- 29-36. The same pedigree is given for Dubthach in Rawl B 502, p. 143 d 31. The Oengus mentioned in 32 is there called Oengus Gái-Buaibthech, who was the cause of the expulsion of the Dési from Meath; see FM 265, Anecd. i. 15, etc. If Dubthach's grandfather was grandson of Oengus, Dubthach's date would be somewhere about 400 A.D.; but see note on 57 below.
- 35. róin. O'R. has rón, 'strong, fat.' Four kings called Aed Róin or Rón,' are mentioned in FM index. It is perhaps the same word as rún which occurs in Metr. Ds. i. 24.
- 47. This is an obscure line: dát fo demi is used as a periphrasis for 'death," Contrib.
  - 51. Read co fagbaitis.
- 57-63. The genealogy of Acher Cerr is given in LL 336 b in ascending line as follows: Acher Cerr, Eochu Antóit, Fiachra (.i. Cathmail), Eochu Riata (is eside Carpre Rigfota), Conaire, Mug Lama, Lugaid, Corpre. In Rawl. B. 502, p. 162 d: Acher, Eochaid, Fiachu, Feidelmid, Cincee, Guaire, Cintae, Coirpre Rigfota, Conaire Cœm, Lugaid, Cairpre Crom-chend. In FM 186 Cairpre Rig-fota is mentioned as fighting in the battle of Cennfebrat. If this date is right, Acher Cerr's birth-year would be somewhere about 300 a.b. according to the genealogy in LL: that in Rawl. would bring him down to 400 or so. The date of Acher Cerr can also be approximately determined from the descending line, as he was ancestor of the kings of Dal nAraide; Fergus mac Erca, who oum gente Dalriada partem Britannia tenuit (Tigernach 502 = FM 498), was tenth in descent from Acher. This, however, would put Acher (and consequently Dubthach) back into the third century.
- It will be observed that both LL and Rawl. B. 502, omit Olldóitech (or Alldathach) mentioned in line 63. Now in Cóir Anmann (Ir. T. iii. 314) we have a Lugaid Alldathach in company with Cairbre Crommehenn and Mug Láma (otherwise called Eochaid Ilchrothach). It would seem, then, that Olldóitech (or Alldathach) is not a separate person, but a cognomen of Lugaid: is Oll-dóitig (the reading of LRB) will then mean 'also called Oll-dóitech.' My conjecture Olldóitech is therefore wrong. The form Oll-dóitech is much more likely to be right than the fanciful All-dathach, which is supported by some inferior Mss.
  - 71. This is obscure: it should mean literally 'as prosperity is usual till now.'
  - 75. de, i.e. out of the province of Leinster.
  - 79. calaid seems here to be a substantive. For céte, 'path,' see Contrib.
- 92. forrach, verbal noun of forrgim, Wi. See Ir. T. iv.; Festschr. W. Stokes, 9, note.
  - 94. congbăil, 'military service,' Contrib.: congbăil catha Tog. Trói, 1696.
  - 102. find-choraib, from cor 'plait,' Contrib.; abrat-chor 'eye-lashes,' ibid.
- 108. dointnem (trisyll.): Bergin suggests that this may be intended as a verbal noun = di-ind-snim, meaning perhaps 'hardship.
  - 109. Fornocht is identified with Forenaghts, near Naas.
  - 111. This line is quoted by O'Cl. s.v. aradhain vilo: he reads ghég for gein.
  - 114. Read ic dub-athaib.

135. oca is frequently written ca or coa.

139. sluindfitit: if this is the true reading, it is an instance of the affixed pronoun in -it, which is found already in Wb. 26 a 8 gebtit. For examples from LU, see ZCP ii. 489.

140. Read with L dia nddlaib isna dindgnaib 'to their gatherings in the notable places' (at which these poems were recited).

DUN GABAIL.

This place was in Cuthraige on the Liffey (lines 62-67), but has not been more exactly located. The Cuthraige were one of the sub-divisions of Dal Cormaic Luise, who were one of the four prim-sloinnti of Leinster: Rawl. B. 502, p. 118 b 43.

3. Lutur, not Luthar, is the correct form: it rhymes with cutal in 64.

9-12. The corresponding sentence in the prose version is: Airdin each ralaig &: caéea cubat 'na gabul 7 a leth'na leithe: 'he (Lutur, not Gabal) was taller than an oak: fifty cubits in his fork, and half as much in his shoulder.' The word leithe may mean either 'shoulder-blade' or 'breadth': the prose-writer understands it in the former sense; the author of the verse substitutes the kindred word lethet, meaning 'breadth.' How has this discrepancy arisen? Has the prose-writer misunderstood the verse, or vice versa? or have they placed different interpretations on a common source? I am inclined to think that the last explanation is the true one, and that the prose is in error: it is suspicious that the word gabal 'fork' is virtually identical with the name of the woman; this is, I think, the cause of the double entendre.

The woman is called Gablach in 9 and 55, Gabal in 61.

15. cen luing: i.e. these giants did not need a ship, but walked through the sea, like Gulliver invading Blefuscu.

21. Co rodéirged (sic leg.), from déirgim 'I make a bed'; cf. dergithir do is tilaig, Contrib.

26. I have treated romair as a verb, but more probably mara romair = 'of the Red Sea.'

28. The prose does not give Fuither's pedigree, but makes Lugaid lâm-derg one of his captains, in place of Labraid lâm-fota.

36. After this line Lec. interpolates a stanza:-

Anmand desi ele dib · tanic anoir can dimbrig Luitheach Lamfada co mblaid · 7 Labraid a brathair.

47. gualle for guailne, plural of guala.

51, 52. In place of these lines L has rochaichlaig cuirp roscirri do maithlaib uilc inchinni. Here rochaichlaig (which rhymes with máithlaib) is probably redupl, perfect of conclichim (for ro-com-cichlaig > rocóichlaig). The lines perhaps mean: 'he bespattered the bodies which he mangled with horrible messes of brains': cuirp for curpu; uilc, adjectival gen. of ole (subst.): máithlaib 'puddings' maethal): roscirri (cirrim), parenthetic.

- 53. Co 'morogaib dôib: for instances of this idiom see Wi. 515, col. 1; immgabaim here = 'catch hold of one another.'
- 54. This seems to mean 'when the assailants were worsted they found little protection.'
- 56. trom-thuitted: read rather trom-duith-fer 'of strong churls': cf. duith 'base' SnR index: dothfer, cf. p. 350, 29; doithir .i. doidhealbh O'Cl.; duthair 'surly' Lism. index.
- 64. ba cutul: O'Cl. has cudal i. saoth no olc. bá cudal i. bá saoth no ba hole, which is perhaps founded on this passage. The word is probably the same as cutal 'empty' (*com-toll): see Contrib.
  - 71, 72. literally 'without dangers of thefts, of cattle-raids,' &c.

BELACH DURGEIN.

Nor identified.

- lúaded leirg: the same phrase occurs in Metr. Ds. i. 6, 22. The reading luaith il-leirg would give a rhyme to fúair.
- 4. fer figed feirg: cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 54, 17, fer find, figed gail: Ir. T. ii. 1, 48, line 1510, refiged gleó: infra, 272, 27 fri ferga fige. The verb is figim, 'I weave.'
- 7. Read issi ba sond selaig, and translate 'she was a halbert for hewing': selaig is gen. of selach, verbal noun of sligim: cf. SnR 5355, ic selach na sluag. For sonn, cf. Mag Rath 202, y am sonn catha: Wi. (s. v. sonn) am sond slaide: infra 410, 4 sond sleehtaide sliged.
- 16. As the end-word must be a monosyllable, the line should read luid in mug cétna cét col, ' the same slave went to a hundred crimes,' i.e. the offence was repeated a hundred times.
  - 18. sidmer = sithmer, from mer with sith intensive.
- 22. Hercaid is properly accusative (sie leg. in 19), but here is put for nom., metri gratia. Read arbdig (from arbdgaim), 'Hercad denounced her to Indech': rochertaig 'she ascertained.'
- 23. This line means perhaps 'the liberal (?) hosts, she has a right to them': for this use of dligim, ef. note on Carmun 295. For sumig we should perhaps read suinig, an adjective of uncertain meaning found in SnR 6544.

BAIREND CHERMAIN.

THE name of this place is preserved by the river Burren in Co. Carlow (Onom.). See note on 38.

4. cethar-chend. So L; all other Mss. read calad-chend, which is the sobriquet given to Cerman in the prose version, as also in the note at foot of LL 194 a. This note only allows him three daughters, Bairend, Capp, and Cliathna.

- 5. ar tharba means I think 'for profit,' such as a rich wife might bring. Atkinson, Glossary to the Laws, understands torba as meaning the fertility of cattle: in i. 190. 3 na dartada no na colpacha ocus na samasce i. na hindlithe retorba, the last clause is translated 'cattle before they are productive'; and the rendering in my text was influenced by this passage. But cf. Laws, v. 270. 7. na buirb nar hindled fri torbu isin re suthain bid ag lath (fisin re sothai mbiat oc láth) 'fierce beasts that have not been yoked for profitable labour during the bearing season while they are in heat': i. 190. 3, should be rendered 'the heifers, etc., which have not been yoked for profitable labour.'
- daltait raind. Cf. BB 401 b 24 co hArd Macha daltaid fir: the verb is a derivative of dalta.
- 24. fognad: literally 'let it serve you.' Ernbas (so L) is more correctly written ernmas: the spelling ernbas is due to false analogy.

There are many variants of this line, but most begin with sniid uann (or the like). This seems to mean 'Begone from us!' but I have met with no similar use of sniim.

28. ainble: pl. of anbil (for ainbli).

- 29-38. Only two or three of these places have been identified. Glenn Smóil, in the Dublin mountains, still keeps its name. Glenn Da Gruad (Glenn Cappaige in the prose version) is placed by Hogan, Onom. (Glenn Caipche, Glenn dá Ruad), near Delgany: the Babluan is said in the prose version to be the older name of the Bairend, a river in Co. Carlow.
- 31. graimm = modern Theum 'grip'; cf. SnR 1467 ni tldith a glé-graim; 3687 maith a ngraim; infra 330, 12 a ngraimm rig-fer; Metr. Ds. ii. 46, 7 bas greimm ria gle-raind. In all these passages the rhyme proves that the vowel is short. Wi. and Stokes (SnR index) mark it long in gréimm, which they distinguish from greim, graim.
- 37-40. In the alternative version of this stanza printed on p. 92, rograind is presumably a verb, but its sense is uncertain. The phrase brogais béim is also obscure to me. O'Cl. has béim i. céim. In the fourth line comlaid should be written comlai. Cliathberna is elsewhere placed south of Glenn Smóil (Onom.).
  - 42. tothchos = tochus, Wi., Laws; Tec. Corm.

DUIBLIND.

This poem is translated in O'Curry's M. C. ii. 289. He identifies the 'black pool' with the Poolbeg, a reach of deep water at the mouth of the Liffey.

- 4. in iathaib Etair: that is, the meadow-lands on the landward side of Bend Etair (Howth).
  - 7. tairem = tuirem, so written to rhyme with aided.
- rosbáid should be rendered literally 'drowned her,' as Mairgin's shot cast her into the pool: see prose.

- 13. Five of the MSS. have ingen: in the other two the word is abbreviated. In such phrases with gabaim the person affected by the feeling is usually object of the sentence, but may be subject: see Atkinson's Keating, 381 a; Dinneen, s.v. gabhaim.
- 19. chaer: the direct object is occasionally aspirated in LL; e.g. supra p. 110, 9 Atchiu chiciur.
- 16. It is not obvious why Cnucha, who is Aide's grandfather, should be mentioned here. Perhaps we should write cácl Cnucha 'Cnucha's slender son,' sc. Ochind. But LL has Chnucha, and the metre demands a trisyllable.

FORNOCHT.

Several places of this name are mentioned in Hogan's Onomasticon: this is probably the place referred to in ds. Liamuin 109, and identified with Forenaghts, near Naas. Fornacht is mentioned among other strongholds of Leinster in the poem Slån seiss a Brigit, LL 50 a 17 (ed. Meyer, 'Hail Brigit,' p. 17). Our poem is attributed in all Mss. to Find, i.e. to Find mac Cumaill.

- 3. fertha: pret. pass. of feraim.
- maignech: this epithet is applied in Fled Brierenn to a horse; it occurs also at p. 428, 40.
- 10. fid-ruba 'a wooded spur': cf. Rev. Celt. xiv. 412, 10 for rubu na rigratha. Stokes (ibid. 447) identifies the word with Scotch Gaelic rudha, 'a promontory.'
- 11, 12. These two lines are found only in L: they are printed as they stand in the Ms. Rit and rot = fri + possess. pron. 2 sing.
- 13-16: the prose says that Find returned from the west (aniar) after fighting against Uinche Ochair-bél at Ath Cinn Mara, and found his stronghold burnt down.
- 19, 20. Apparently there was a convent of nuns on the site of Druim Den at the time that the poem was composed.
- 24. Hogan, Onom., places 'Ath Uinchi in West Munster, but this poem and the prose version seem to be his only authority.
  - 26. brúachda: see note on p. 370, 60.
  - 29. tétnas: see Wi, tethna, and ef. BB 402 a 4 tria tetnas.

ATH CLIATH CUALANN.

This poem on the legend of Dublin was edited in the seventh volume of the Todd Lectures Series, p. 20. It is attributed in all the Mss. to Colum Cille and Mongán mae Fiachna, the legendary King of Ulster († 621), who came to be identified with Find mae Cumaill (Voyage of Bran, i. 45). Line 2, and the theological turn of line 5, indicate that Mongan is the questioner and Colum Cille answers. In lines 29–32 the position is reversed; but the metre suggests that this stanza is an interpolation.

- 6. cluiche drenn should be printed as two words, 'rough sport.'
- 8. The beast here described is called in the prose version the Mata: cf. Wi. mat, 'swine'; Glend in Matai (Mathai) is one of the notable places near Brug na Boinde; see Metr. Ds. ii. 22-24, Rev. Celt. xv. 293; it is there said to have been killed at Lecc Benn.
- 11. This line is corrupt: the last word should be a disyllable rhyming with Boind.
- 13. Here again the text is faulty: instead of  $c\delta el$ , which gives no satisfactory meaning, one would expect either a rhyme for  $e\delta l$  or a word assonating with  $\delta e$ .
- 14. Also a difficult line. I take diamsat to be 2 pr. sbj.: for the adjectival use of e6l cf. infra, p. 266. 3 am e6l. What is meant by i n-ilib 6c? O'Cl. has 6c i. fili innilibh 6c i. iomad na bfhileadh; probably an attempt to explain this passage.
- 17. rofich: we should perhaps read roficial (which is supported by the rofhaidh, rofaid, &c., of six Mss.), understanding this as perfect of figim 'I weave, plait,' &c.: ef. rodfaig, ds. of Ailech, 52 (Todd Lect. vii. 36), used of building a wall; figim is used of constructing a fortress, Todd Lect. vii. 42, line 8: it would apply naturally enough to palisades of mingled timber and earth, such as Casar describes.
  - 18. inna méit is suspicious: méit should be a word rhyming with cléith.
  - 21. rola cor, 'took a turn, made a circuit.'
- 24. doscer isinn áth: cf. dacer 'it fell to him (by lot),' Turin Gl. 132. The construction is then like contarla il-Laeg 'so that it lodged in Laeg,' Rev. C. iii. 178. Or we may read docer, which is supported by three Mss.
- 28. Stokes, ZCP iv. 372, renders this line ''tis he that used to protect every small one,' referring adchomad to *ad · com · óim.
- 31-2. L's reading is intended to be cia lin dorochair de i tulaig na segainne: the scribal marks indicate that de has been accidentally misplaced. Tulach na Segainne is not identified.
  - 33. L reads cota ler: see Contrib. and ZCP viii. 76, note.

BEND ETAIR I.

A PROSE version of the legend of Etar, Mairg, and their children is found in LL 216 b 1, where it introduces the poem on Sliab Mairge, printed at p. 160. As it is omitted by Stokes, it may be well to give it here.

Margg ingen Rotmand maic Thacce, ben side do Echaid Muniste ri Galian. Oen ingen lee i. Bethe a hainm. Tue Etar mac Etgáith iside iarsain 7 rue a hingin lee co tech Etair. Et oen mac ar a cind oc Etar i. Aes mac Etair, conastue side Bethi do mnái 7 co rue mac dó. Dond dano a ainm-side. Oen ingen dano laiside i. Elta a hainm-side. Romarbait dano Aes 7 Bethi oc immarbaig snáma issin muir. Beist rodosmarb. Et a quibus dicuntur, Rind chind 'Aisi, 7 ó Bethi, 7 enocc nDuind 7 mag nElta 7 bend Etair. Luid Margg iarsin iar n-éc caich di chumaid araile uadib co riacht in sliab n-ucut, ar ba sain-treb di, conabbad and. Unde sliab Mairgge.

Here Etar is called son of Etgáeth: so also, in the prose version printed in Rev. Celt. xv. 330, Benn Etair is said to be named from Etar mac Etgaith; but he is there said to have been son-in-law of Manannan mac Lir, and to have died of love for Aine; Mairg is ignored. The Kilbride Ms. quoted in Silv. Gad. ii. 521 (xii. v. b) says that "Edar mac Edgaeth's wife was Marga." In Ac. na Senórach Howth is repeatedly called Bend Etair maic Etgaeith in fénneda; see Ir. T. iv. index. Mairg Etar and Bethe (not Aes) are mentioned in ds. of Sliab Mairge, p. 160.

- ni fail aslaig: the meaning is not very clear: aslaig is not the regular acc.
  of aslach (: adsligim), which belongs to the o-declension.
- 5-6. Ruirtheeh is the older name of the Liffey. The Dothra is now the Dodder, a little river which falls into the Liffey at Ringsend, near the mouth.
- 7. fachta for fechta 'battles': cf. fer fo facht, Metr. Ds. ii. 34. It seems intended to rhyme with tráchta, in spite of the á. The quantity of tracht is perhaps unfixed; in LU 40 a 22 it rhymes with immomracht, and at p. 214, supra, with aréracht.
  - 8. aichre trethna 'fury of the sea.'
  - 10. cardais is for nocartais.
  - 11. is tsenchoss for isin tsenchus: cf. modern aprij = isin tig.

ardospeitted, from arpetim with infixed dos-. It is perhaps passive; 'therewas chanted to them.'

- 13. Tárcai = dóairci. The word lost after lind may be éc.
- The metre compels us to read oclaich, a literary form reminiscent of oc-laech.
- 16. 'Aes should be 'Ais, as in 47; in 43 the gen. is 'Aise.
- 19. The line wants a syllable, and seems corrupt.
- 23. nad båded fairge 'that the sea might not drown him,' &c.
- 28. There must have been a spot (a reef of rocks perhaps) known as Nase Mná Etair.
- 29. This line perhaps means that when Etar and Mairg married, their children (by former unions) were still infants (báith).
  - 32. The line is hypermetric: read narb.
- 37-40. This stanza does not harmonize with the account of the death of Aes and Bethe given in the prose legend. Two different versions of the story seem to be here combined: according to one Aes and his wife Bethe had a swimming-match, and were attacked and killed by a sea-monster; according to the other, he went to a tryst in the sea with the daughter of Crimthann, and was drowned. The second version of the story is perhaps that on which two stanzas of the Ban-senchas in LL 137 b 13-19 are founded. They run as follows:—

Cland Fergusa gnai maer medar · mna Etair Béthech [is] Marg. Bethech ingen Chremthaind Chualand · rodeg-thuill mór n-ualand n-ard. Mór-mac Ugaini féin Fergus · co méin is co mer-gus garg.

Margo mor-ben 'Ais maic Etair . 'Ais ba hathair Duind na ndúan. 'Ais athair cen terca tall mán [leg. talman] · Elta don maig barr-glan búan O roraded Mag an Elta . tan do tham slechta na sluag.

Here it would seem that Etar had two wives Bethech and Marg: Bethech (= Bethi) is the 'daughter of Crimthann of Cualu,' mentioned in line 40 of our poem; and Aes must have been intriguing with his step-mother, and neglecting his wife Margo. Baes (38) often means 'wantonness,' and dal (39) 'a love-tryst.'

According to the list in LL 39 b 22 Crimthann, son of Aed Cerr, called also Crimthann Cualand, was king of Leinster between Ronan mac Colmain and Faelán mac Colmáin. Ronán died in 624 (FM), and in 628 Faelán defeated and slew Crimthann mac Aeda, king of Leinster. If this is the Crimthann of line 40, the personages of the poem belong to the early seventh century.

- 37. The symbol which stands in the margin of L opposite this line should be read proprium, and means that Aés is here a proper name, not the noun substantive áes.
- 39. telchaind. This seems to be the same word which is found in SnR 4269 (in the description of the Tabernacle) deil telchinni . . . fri torgbdil na drumslatte. This seems to mean 'a roof-pole-to support the roof-tree.' If so, telchind would mean 'roof,' and would be another form of tulchinne which occurs in Mesca Ulad, LU 19 a 14: lasodain ingid Cuchulaind i n-ardai co mbói for tulchinniu ind lis.
- 41. dathe should be rendered 'nimble': it is an adjectival genitive; see Contrib. daithe.
  - 42. I take sithi to be participle of sinim, literally 'stretched.'
  - 43. Rind Cind 'Aise is perhaps the present Ringsend.
- 46. bechta, participle of bechtaim, is used in the Laws = 'established by evidence.'
- 49. Read dian mag, 'whose is the plain.' Mag nElta = Moynalty, the name of the plain which forms the northern part of Co. Dublin.
- 65. For 'champions,' read 'curraghs': cf. Rev. Celt. viii. 54, 24; ar dochoid Leborcham do thochostul Ulad, co tístais i curchaib no co tístais ar tír dia cobair.
  - Read mac-blait: a disyllable is required by the metre.

The exploits of Cuchulainn's fosterling Mess Dead are recounted in Talland Etair (Rev. Celt. viii. 54), but not this incident.

- 75. Read nad chloiter, ' who are never beaten.'
- 84. Read a hEtar, 'from Bend Etair.'

BEND ETAIR II.

- 1. With this opening, cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 26. 3, raidfed frib im threbthus te; p. 396, 1 supra, Is eôl dam im threbthus to; p. 422. 2, sloindfed . . . am lis, etc.
  - 2. scél fromtha: cf. 19, find-fadb fromtha: 111, radare fromtha.
- 3. This is a hint that a proper reward will elicit the poet's lore. slimda: this is regarded in the text as gen. of slimad 'eulogy'; but this word has in modern Irish a long \(\tilde{\epsilon}\): see Dinneen.
- 14. sq. Dun mBrea = Bray Head; Sliab Lecga, perhaps = Three Rock Mountain (Onom.): the other places not identified.

Senboth: there may have been a nom. Senub (cf. Cathub), but Senboth is found as nom.

- 15. frais is acc. of frass 'shower,' metaph. 'assault': cf. V. Bran 24 note; Oss. Soc. i 160. 9, tabair frasa tréana.
- 16. dobga: in Fél. Oeng. lxxvii cen sobchai glosses cen sotla 'without pride': one may infer the existence of an adjectival sobcha 'proud' and dobcha or dobga 'humble.' In SnR 4046 the Red Sea is called dogba dub-rúad; where dogba = dobga may mean 'low-lying.'
- 18. fri fáthaib: translate perhaps 'with subjects of song,' i.e. 'noteworthy associations': fáth 'cause, occasion,' means in poetry especially 'occasion for a lay.'
- 23. rún is generally fem., and makes acc. rúin: but cf. p. 220, 60 cen deg-rún; 198, 19 cen baeth-rún; 246, 66 ní rocheil a rún.
- 26. Literally, 'above the great fame of Elg': Elg is an old name for Ireland, Metr. Gloss. Elga is gen. after oll-blaid.
- 34. dún is inher is ard-ler: cf. Ériu iii, 14, in a poem on wandering thoughts: dún no ler no lom-daingen ní astait dia rith. The ordinary meaning of ler 'sea' seems out of place.
- 39. Slung-bann 'host-exploit': cf. BB 408 b 48 Diach na sluagh-band. bann is originally neuter (Contrib.), but becomes fem.; cf. 77 fri oll-baind.

Slat is gen. pl.

- 41-44. This stanza is found in ds. of Cnucha (ed. Stokes, The Edinburgh Dinnshenchas, p. 77, from Eg. 1781), but with a different third line, and o tracht corruptly for êtrocht.
- 47. gécach from gée 'branch, off-shoot,' is found also in LL 396. 5 Macaom gegach gorm-rosgach: King and Hermit, index, where Meyer renders 'vigorous, flourishing, keen.'
  - 50. cen chuibde perhaps rather 'without measure.'
- 52. Fremu or Fremann = Frewin in West Meath (Onom.); but according to Keating, i. 106, Gann's kingdom extended from Waterford to Cork.
  - 55. fri selba sáith: literally 'with sufficiency of possessions.'
- 57. elgnus (<elo-gnds) 'intention (of crime)' Laws: cf. O'Dav. 767; BB 392 b 32 rop saer ar ole ar elgnos.

 Aine, daughter of Manannán, is mentioned in a poem edited by Meyer in his Cath Finntrága, 74, 52.

63. sluag-barr, 'host-leading': cf. O'Gr. Cat. 350 6 theasda Brian barr in tsluaig.

samlaid is perhaps imper. of samlaim, used as a cheville 'imagine!'

71. cen esair without any straw litter, such as was used at a regular interment: see RC. xii. 462: ZCP iii. 432: Ir. Nenn. 206; ZCP viii. 560.

75. segair 'is referred to': on this use of sagim see Sarauw, Irske Studier, p. 82.

83. daire is perhaps an adjectival gen. of daire 'oak wood,' meaning 'oaken.' For tech nDeirg ef. Br. D\u00e1 Derga, \u00e9 16, \u00e3 31. dorsig must agree with Deirg.

85, 86. Long Laga and Tond Uairbeóil are no doubt proper names. Hogan, Onom. s.v. Glenn Caipche, identifies them with Long Hill and Tonduff, but this is arbitrary and improbable. The pirates naturally started from the seashore: from Tracht Fuirbthen (= Merrion Strand: see J. H. Lloyd in Ériu ii. 69) according to the LU. text of Bruden Dá Derga (ed. Stokes, p. 57); but the Egerton copy says that they marched from Sescenn Uarbeoil (p. 160). This is, no doubt, the same as Tond Uarbeoil, or close by. Long Laga (perhaps = Long Loga 'Lug's ship') would then be a name for one of the sand-banks off the mouth of the Liffey.

The positions of the other places mentioned in this passage have not been accurately determined. Sliab Lecca is called in Br. Dá Derga, § 68, Leca in wib Cellaig.

103. toiche is an abstract noun corresponding to toich 'fitting, acceptable.'
105. fesfaide = O. Ir, refeste 'would be known.'

DÚN CRIMTHAINN.

DUNGRIFFIN in Howth still keeps the name of Crimthann's stronghold. The story of his birth is referred to by Keating (ed. Dinneen, ii. 234) and other authorities. His adventure over sea formed one of the prim-scéla enumerated in LL 189 c. It is briefly described in the older Lebor Gabâla, LL 23 b 2. Is é dochoid inne cehtra a Dûn Chrimthaind re Ndir ban-sidaige co mbbi coicthiges for mis and. Co tuc scotu imda leis, imon carpat n-ôrda 7 imon fidchill n-ôir 7 imon cetaig (.i. leni) Crimthaind. Co n-crbailt iar tiachtain immuig i cind cóicthigis ar mis. This account is expanded in O'Clery's Leabhar Gabhâla, p. 131 (R.I.A. 23 K 32 = 'G'). Besides the chariot, fidchell and tunic, there is mention of the sword engraved with serpents, the shield with silver bosses, the spear from which none escaped unhurt, the sling that never missed its mark, and the brace of hounds fastened by a silver chain. The Four Masters, A.D. 9, reproduce this description almost word for word. It corresponds in the main with our poem; but the latter omits the chariot, and adds a beaker (line 13), a brooch (37), a stone (45), a tallann (53—whatever it may be), and a horse-whip (57). The poem agrees with O'Clery's Leabhar Gabhála in making Crimthann start from Dál Usnig, whereas the older Lebor Gabála says that he went from Dán Crimthainn. The prose version has: Is é docuaid i n-echtra a Dun Cremthainn (nó a Dáil Uisnig, ut ipse dixit). According to the Four Masters he died at Dun Crimthainn; O'Clery's Leabhar Gabhála adds that he was buried there. But in the Senchas na Reilec (LU 51 b 5) he is said to have been buried at Brug meic ind Oc, among the Tuatha De Danann, ar ba do thúaith Dé a ben .i. Nár, 7 is si roaslaig fair, combad he bad reilec adnaicthi dó 7 dia chlaind in Brug, conid hé fáth ann.

There seem to have been different stories as to the origin of the name Nia Nair, and as to the connexion between Crimthann and Nar. The reason for the masculine genitive Nair must be sought in a passage in Bruiden Da Derga (ed. Stokes, p. 133). Here Nar tuath-chach is a man, 'the swine-herd of Bodb from Sid Femin.' This suggests an explanation for the name Nia Nair. In order to cloak the incestuous birth of Crimthann (see Keating ii. 234) he is feigned to be the son of a fairy mother (unnamed), sister to Nar of Sid Femin (also called Sid Buidb): Nia Náir = Nár's nephew. Next the name Nár is transferred to his fairy mother: the Bansenchas in LL 138 b 13 makes Nar thuathech (for thuathchach) mother of Crimthann and of Feradach Fechtnach (who is Crimthann's son in the Annals). But the compiler of the Bansenchas knows the true story, for he adds no 'sí máthair Chrimthaind Clothra (sic leg.). The next step is that the connexion with the aes side gives rise to the Echtra Crimthainn, the voyage of adventure over sea from which he brings back wonderful treasures. To suit the romantic story Nár becomes his wife: this is the account adopted in Senchas na Reilec, quoted above, and in the Dindsenchas, and also in an entry in Coir Anmann (Ir. T. iii. 332), which runs thus: Crimthan Nía Nár (Náir BB.). níadh i. trén i. trénfear Naire .i. Nár thúathach (thúathchách BB and Lec. quoted Ir. T. iii. 415) a sídhibh ben Chrimthain. Is sidhe rug Crimthan lé a n-echtra n-ordhaire a Dún Chrimthain a n-'Edur. So again in Airne Fingein (quoted by Stokes from Bk. of Lismore (Lismore Lives, xxx: the text printed in Aneed. from Irish Mss. ii. 4 is corrupt at this point): Fideheall Crimthain Niad Nair tucc a hAenuch Find, dia luid la Náir túath-cháich is-sidh Buidb for echtra co mbúi fo dhiamraibh na fairgi, ata fo dhichleith isin ráith ind Uisnech cusanocht. In this passage I would read assid Buidb. Nar came from that place (as in Br. Da Derga, above), but the starting-point of the Echtra was Dun Crimthainn (or Dál Uisnig).

- Madochód i n-echtra n-áin. Atkinson, Three Shafts, and Dinneen make echtra masc., but cf. p. 206. 14.
  - 2. Dal Uisnig is not given in Onom. Usnech = Usnagh Hill in Westmeath.
- 3-4. These lines are glossed in G.i. as iomdha muir 7 tir ina rug mac an Riogh. i. Criomthann fodhein a rouidhe lachdha no laidir. Cf. LU 56 b 1, ó dodeochatar a cetna rude ("leg. nude," Eriu, Suppl. 7); LL 394 w, mac do Murchad ri ruidhe. In SnR 1078, 7074, garg-ruide, rorude seem = "prince," &c.; but this meaning will not suit with the fem. ruaid.
- Read for séit (: bréic); the Mss. have sét; Strachan, Ériu i. 2, and Thurneysen, Hdb. 125, make sét an u-stem, in spite of dat. séit, W 24 a 17.

- tre aslach mban: cf. LU 51 b 6, quoted above: Nár...issí roaslaig fair.
- 10. Mag Eolairg, the sea between Lough Foyle and Iona (see Reeves' Adamnan, 274, note), or possibly it may be a 'kenning' for the sea generally.
  - 14. The phrase romra rian occurs also in Ir. T. iv. 311, note on 4569.
- 15. Here and in 12 and 55 the best Mss. present bu sed for the historical ba hed.
- 16. I can only guess at the meaning of this line: Tuathal's cup may have had the virtue of multiplying indefinitely the liquor it contained.

For méin, 'metal' (= mian), see Laws i. 170, 17, LL 16 b 50.

- 17. This fidehell is referred to in LL 145 a 20, Ac. na Sen. 3945; also in the tale Airne Fingein (quoted above).
- 21. The 'shirt of Lug' must be the same as the cétach Crimthainn mentioned in the different prose versions of the story, and also in the ds. of Luibnech RC xvi. 73, and BB 407 b 46 sq. Perhaps lug is here the noun meaning 'hero': see O'Dav. 1188, 1202.
- 24. rofuacht: this is the reading of the best Mss.: it is formed from -ruacht by false analogy, as in LL 210 b 1 the monstrous form rosfuachtastar (corresponding to dochúaid chuccu in other texts) probably means 'she came to them.' The cétach may have been a short riding-cloak.
- 29. A Dáire Derg, grandson of Ailill Ólomm, is mentioned at pp. 134, 138; and a Dáire Derg mac Find is named] in Acallam na Senórach: there was also a Dáire Derg, ancestor of the Three Fothaids: Rev. Celt. xxxii. 393.
  - 30. bedg, properly 'bound'; here perhaps the sudden spring of a swordsman.
- 31, 32. This shield is described by FM and O'Clery's L. Gab. as solath combocoidib airgit: the thrice nine arrows are another kind of ornament. The meaning of creehad is uncertain; cirb is probably gen. of cerb 'cutting.'
  - 34. Read with YHG ciarbo choseur 'though it was a bloody trophy.'
- 37. This is a daring anachronism, as Aed Abrat, King of Connacht, was killed A.D. 576, AU: cf. BB 57 b 5.
- 40. foir. Dinneen has poin 'a hem, fringe, border,' &c. If this is our word and the quantity short, then choir in 39 may be = chair, gen. of car 'brittle.' But perhaps we have to do with fóir 'a ship's crew, a number of people stowed together' (O'R.): it might conceivably be used of a set or row of gems, as foirenn of a set of chessmen. We should then write chóir in 39. There is no mark of length in the Mss over foir or choir.

'na sreith = ' ranged in a row.'

- 43. lánamain usually denotes a married couple: in legal language any pair of persons connected by some social tie. Here it seems to be applied to a couple of dogs.
  - 45. On stones used in warfare, see O'Curry MC. ii. 263, sq.
- 50. acht mad eel: G has a gloss rob ineglaighthe an gres do tuagmiolaibh baoi arna riondad . . . isin tabaill munaptais mairbh, 'the ornamental animals engraved . . . on the sling would be formidable only that they were dead.'

- 52. This stanza is a nest of riddles. The word tallainn is found only in R: it is adopted in the text on the supposition that it is a rare word which has been replaced in other copies by atôd, &c. Talland = lat. talentum is used in the metaphorical sense of 'special gift,' see Wi. Cf. Ir. T. iv. 3193 tallann do thallannaib na fannaigechta, which O'Grady renders 'one of the special articles of Fian-lore.' But this word is masc., and the acc. should be tallann; besides, the context calls for some more precise expression. Perhaps R's reading is a mere corruption due to talmain in the preceding line. We must then adopt the alternative reading atôd, which can only be the verbal noun of addôaim (see Thurneysen in ZCP viii. 64), which usually means 'kindling': does it here signify 'a tinder-box,' and is 56 a description of the wood used for the purpose? A 'sliver of holly' seems unpromising material. O'R. has 510m, 'a lock of hair: a fleak (flake?).' I can make nothing of 54: in 55 frithatad is unknown to me.
  - 57. This ech-flesc seems to be really a whip, not a goad:
  - 66. snúad is an adjectival gen. pl.
  - 67. murbach, 'place where the sea breaks,' 'sea-beach.'
  - 68. mac Lugdach = Crimthann: his father was Lugaid Sriabnderg.

RATH CHNAMROSSA.

O'DONOVAN says (note on FM i. 11, note e) that Chamross is probably the ancient name of Camross, near Barry's Cross, Co. Carlow. The death of Lé fri Flaith is an incident in Bruiden Da Derga: see Stokes' edition, pp. 147, 161.

- 3. gnithe, n. pl. of gnith 'shout': cf. 'gnithech 'shouting,' Death Tales, index; gossa is an adjectival genitive. So also in 43. The reading of YLc ngnithi is in favour of this interpretation. O'Cl. has gnithe i. gniomhacha, quoting go raghonsad Gaoidhil ghnithe, which is a line from a poem found in LL. 11 a 16.
- 9. fomaire fir 'giant of a man,' a phrase like peta eóin, 'Eriu Suppl. 768, petta cuirre Aisl. Mac C. 51, 28; deóra dagfir, p. 162. 11 bidba troch, p. 172. 66 supra.
- 16. charnail chnám-(f)rossa; so in the prose ds. ní fuair acht carnail cnam... 7 fosceirá in cnam-fros sin inde.
- 18. esgal or escal 'roaring of water, storm, onslaught'; ef. Cormac s.v.. Coire Brecáin; Rennes Ds. index; Rev. Celt. xiv. 441.
  - 19. dal fo deime 'a meeting in darkness,' a periphrasis for 'death.'
- 20. Read vo fan Corra Ednige: the rhyme with dal requires fan as a monosyllable: Corra must be regarded as a genitive. None of the places called Eidnech mentioned in Onom. seems likely to be meant.
- 23. numchin is the opposite of mochen: cf. LBr. 85, lower margin, line 7, nimochin ogan congail hi saidfithea in sen-fiacail 'woe betide him in whom the old tooth is fixed in the combat!': LBr. 94 lower margin: nimochin nech nosfothraic na tib dig 'woe to him that bathes himself and does not drink a draught (f) ' I regard tossaig as the verb of which tossach is the verbal noun (to-od-siag- Thurn. Hdb. 475).

31. The nut-grove of Segais is described in ds. of Sinann, pp. 289, 293: other references in Joyce, Social Hist. i. 446.

35. coti dag-ruis: so in the prose legend nidat one rous acht is one amrois, which Stokes renders 'they are not nuts of knowledge, but nuts of ignorance.' But ruis 'knowledge' has a long vowel; either then the quantity is shortened in dag-ruis, to rhyme with amruis, or one rois means 'nuts of the wood,' and there is a play on words in ruis—amruis.

37. fál-gus: a compound of fal 'prince': the magical knowledge which the nuts bestow is superior to the might of warriors.

39. This corresponds to the prose rosadnacht Find traig i talmain. I have no other example of foressaim.

40. adbair ardosfail 'the cause which is upon them': adbair for adbar, for the sake of the rhyme with talmain.

41-48. According to FM. Cairbre Lifechair died in 284, and Bresal Bélach, grandson of Cathair Mór, in 435; but there is an error somewhere in the annalistic chronology of the Leinster kings; see introductory note to Loch Garman, p. 508.

MAISTIU I.

Maistiu is identified with Mullaghmast, in Co. Kildare.

2 and 21. insear sometimes means 'encounter' (properly 'the result of an encounter, the condition in which the combatants part'): cf. p. 254, 5: Trúag a n-imsear imalle, said as here of two enemies whose meeting is fatal to both. So in BB 435 a 52 ar rofedar ni bad imsear mae mbee im chuail fithiucan a n-imsear na da ardmiled.

- 5. Eochaid Toeb-fota, son of Ailill Olomm, was killed A.D. 241, FM.
- 8. forud Oengussa = Oenach Oengussa in the prose : cf. note on p. 452, 28.
- 9. rosill, cf. Metr. Gl. sillid 'a witch.'
- 10. romill, cf. Corm. milled i. mi-silled and Zeuss 954 na ramillet mna.
- 15. thue Snuaid dar sise: the prose says she was drowned in the river Snuad. dar sise seems to be put for tairse.
  - 17. cen scis nglė, i.e. she died ingloriously, not in the toil of battle.
- 19. co ceird chriti cf. p. 282, 85. O'Cl. has ceird chriti i. ceird imdeargtha no ceird bhasaighthe. Cf. also p. 138, 3, iar ceird gascid.
- 21. For mairer 'troop,' &c., see Rev. Celt. xiv. 446, Ir. T. iii. 539, Ll. 111 a 25. It is no doubt the same as murer 'burden, family,' Ir. T. iii. 539.
- 25-6. As to Oengus mac Umbir and his son Conall, see ds. of Carn Conaill, p. 440. The Oengus mentioned in 29 is, according to the prose legend, Oengus mac ind 'Oc.

- 27-28. I have translated according to the natural order of the words; but the prose makes the two sisters Maistiu and Maer die of grief for the loss of Conall, regarding this as an alternative account of the fate of Maistiu.
  - 30. e6em-loisse, cf. Wi. luisse: O'Dav. 1185, 1200.
  - 31, 32. sam-rsin, mag-rsin seem to be both compounds of run.
- 34. For this use of flad cf. Lism. Lives 2485 co torocht in sceich fil isin fladh re cill Eochaille aniar 'in the wood,' Stokes; ba flad fertach, p. 260, 5 supra; SnR index.

MAISTIU II.

- This must be the same Daire Derg, grandson of Ailill 'Olomm, as in the last poem; yet here he is a Leinster king.
- 8. Neither Wi. nor Meyer gives ailges with  $\bar{a}$ : but it has the mark of length in Atk. P. and H. 4026, 7991, 8215; so in Three Shafts and Dinneen: cf. also ds. Ceilbe 107 (p. 62 above); LL. 114 b w.
- 10. Apparently Gris demanded a mass of gold from Maistiu; and as Maistiu could not satisfy the demand, she suffered the vengeance of the ban-licerd, as the prose legend calls Gris.

ROIRIU IN UI MUIREDAIG.

Now Mullagh Reelion, 5 miles S.E. of Athy in Co. Kildare (Onom.).

- 6. is maic B; see note on p. 216, 7.
- 11. ar-rec: see note on p. 66, 3.

ROIRIU IN UI FAILGE.

Now Reary or Rerymore, 5 miles N. of Mountmellick (Onom.). This poem found in LL only; there is no corresponding prose legend.

- 3. comul n-ena; see note on Metr. Ds. ii. 2, 12; ena may be an adjective, or possibly gen. pl. of en 'water.'
  - 6. Sil n Echdach = Ui Echach (also Ui Echdach) an Ulster sept: see Onom.
- 9. rot: cf. Mag Rath 40, 9, in mac rot (: cloce): LL 150 b 31 rot a ngal: it is probably the same as rot 'red' Corm. Tr. 146 is rot cech ndery.
- 11. idus: is this Cormac's hidoss = eloss? O'R. has iodhus 'a tower, fortress.' Can nar mit be = nár smit? The modern prince or prince 'a piece of anything' (Dinneen) = smit 'lobe of ear' Wi: nár smit then might mean 'not a scrap.'

MAG MUGNA.

According to Stokes, Rev. Celt. xv. 420 Mag Mugna was in the east of Leinster along the Barrow; this is a slip for west: see the note to which Stokes refers in Félire Oeng. p. clxxxi, Mart. Oeng. 258. The name Mugna survives in the barony of Kilkea and Moone in the south of Kildare. The local relation between Mag Mugna and Mag nAilbe has not been clearly determined, if one may judge from Hogan's articles on Belach Mugna, Eó Mugna, Mugna, Mag Mugna, and Mag Ailbe.

1. mo gnia. The prose version has: No Mugna moo gnia i. mo macaib sethar, quia fit gnia mae sethar, ut dicitur in Brethaib Neimedh gnia sethar i. mae sethar mae som didiu eaera dona earaib dobert trefuilngid treorach for a eraeb. Stokes regards mo gnia here as = Christ: see his note, Rev. Celt. xv. 420, but he does not explain the connexion between Christ and the Tree of Mugna, and his rendering of the last sentence can hardly be right. I think we should translate: "gnia sethar, i.e. sister's son; now it (the Tree) is the son of one of the berries which trefuilngid treorach put upon his bough." What trefuilngid treorach means I cannot say; but the general sense seems to be that the Tree of Mugna sprung from a berry which grew upon one of the trees from which the Cross was made; and in this way it is sister's son to the Cross, mo gnia feda féil. If this is right, mo in mo gnia must be hypocoristic. O'Cl. has gnia i. bile.

3. sorthaib: d. pl. of soraid 'blessing' Dinneen.

6. ba fó fiad. O'Cl. s.v. fiadh quotes ubhall ba fó fiadh and explain .i. ubhall ba maith an biadh. But cf. fiad-ubla 'crab-apples' Rev. Celt. xv. 460.

9-12. This stanza is quoted in the notes to Félire Oengusso, Dec. 11, with a different third line, fo diamair re hed dobi: this is preferable, as the prose legend and the poem on p. 146 say that the Tree was hidden until the birth of Conn Cét-chathach. Its discovery is not mentioned, however, among the marvels attending Conn's birth which are described in Airne Fingein.

EO MUGNA.

6. I read comged for comed of the Ms. mile 'a thousand cubits,' not men.

10. Translate ' and fifty hundreds to boot'; the total number intended is 7000.

12. 'The poet Ninine cast it down': Rev. Celt. xv. 420.

EO ROSSA, etc.

The corresponding prose version is edited in Rev. Celt. xvi. 277.

9. sogor is the opposite to dogar (dogur), Wi. Translate 'joyous.'

12. úar-thress: see note on p. 324, 7.

BELACH CONGLAIS.

Now Baltinglass in the south of Co. Wicklow.

Between the prose version edited by Stokes and the poem there is a composition beginning Cain treith tadbanar, which I cannot translate.

merg, properly 'rust' (meirg Wi.), means also 'decay, decrepitude' etc.:
 of. Metr. Ds. i. 48, 49; ii. 22, 58.

mibal is the opposite of bal 'brightness' (?): cf. p. 224, 22.

- 4. The grandsons of Dond Désa, Conaire's foster-brothers, play a part in Bruden Da Derga.
  - 10. For sorthan see Ir. T. iv. index, and p. 220, 55 supra. saigluind seems to be written metri gratia for saeglonnu.
- 11. tréith is probably metaphorical, and means the chieftains who joined in the hunt, not the boars who were the quarry.
- 14. Dreibrenn (or Derbriu) was daughter of Eochu Feidlech, and sister to Medb; see Táin Bó Cúalnge, ed. Wi. 15, and compare p. 386, 10 supra. Her red swine are mentioned again in ds. of Duma Selga, Loch Néill, and Ceis Coraind. They were men and women who had lost their proper shape: see ds. of Duma Selga, p. 386.

ATH FADAT I.

Ath Fadat is now Ahade on the Slaney in Co. Carlow; see O'Curry, MC. iii. 404, where there is a translation of this poem. But the prose account says that the fight between Etain and Fadat was caused by a dispute as to the produce of the river Barrow. In the LL. copy of the prose Lind Doé is said to be 'on the Barrow.' Besides O'Curry's translation of the poem, it has been edited by Stokes, Rev. Celt. xv. 422, and in Poems from the Dindsenchas (Todd Lect. vii). It was evidently not written for the Dindsenchas collection.

Metre- Ocht-foclach mor (Meyer, Ir. Metr. 72).

5. Loch Lurgan: see note on Belach Gabran.

1-2. -tathaig: bláthaig is an imperfect rhyme. So too 21-2 thathlaib: mbráthair.

15. amsaig, an abstract noun, acc. sing. Meyer, Contrib. quotes gen. amsaige.

23. Perhaps 'it shall reach your mother,' i.e. she (Caichne?) also shall fall.

25. O'Cl. quotes this line s.v. é, explaining as truagh do dhiol.

38. athaig. O'R. has athaidh 'a period': cf. Moirthimehell Eirenn (ed. Hogan) 17, 3 athaid 'for a while.' But the usual form is athach, and it is better to rea ni gébat frim athaig, and translate with Stokes 'giants will not prevail against me.'

ATH FADAT II.

FADAT is here a woman: in the last poem he was a man.

The prose version refers to the mirabilia duorum Sincellorum, as authority for the legend; but this document, so far as I know, is no longer extant.

BELACH GABRÁN.

This is perhaps the pass leading to Gowran in Kilkenny, south of Sliab Mairge: so Hogan, Onom.; Stokes, Rennes Ds.; Orpen in Journ. R.S.A.I. xxxvi. 30. There was, however, another Belach Gabráin in Maistiu, Co. Kildare (see Onom.), and this would be more naturally connected with Almu (the Hill of Allen in Kildare). Loch Lurgan where the pig disappeared was according to the prose version in the Bog of Allen; authorities quoted by Hogan, Onom., place it near the Slieve Bloom mountains, to the west of Maryborough.

- rontétlai cf. rotetlaidhsid, TBC (Wi.) index, and etlaim, Wi. At p. 194, 17 supra most texts have tetlais.
  - 9. iar seis glé (sic leg.) 'after glorious toil 'cf. p. 134. 17.
  - 10. fo mur: does this mean 'under the rampart of Almu'?

17-20. This stanza, which is found in three Mss. only, is accidentally displaced in the text; it should follow line 8. It does not agree with the story, which says the pig escaped, whereas line 20 seems to assert that it was killed (at Loch Lurgan) in the bog of Allen. Line 18 probably refers to the baying of the hound, not to the cries of the hunters: translate 'whose mouth made furious music.' The semicolon after anrachta should be deleted; robith is relative, and refers to Lurgan.

SLIAB MAIRGE I.

THE Slieve Margy hills extend from Queen's County southwards into Kilkenny, to the west of the Barrow.

For the legend, see the first poem on Bend Etair.

7. This line is hypermetric: read 'sin tsleib sin.

SLIAB MAIRGE II.

3. tuiscthe gen. of toschid.

- 4. Eochu Muniste ri Galian is mentioned in the prose legend printed above under Bend Etair I.
- 8. golach may be for galach or (more probably) may mean 'causer of weeping.' Cf. p. 338, 14, Gdith golaig.

9. rosamlad 'was thought appropriate,' 'was estimated.'

11. gress may here have the meaning 'injury' as in digail greisse cinéoil and other phrases in the Laws.

deóra dagfir: perhaps 'valiant stranger,' dag-fir being merely a descriptive genitive: cf. note on 128, 9 in fomaire fir.

ARD LEMNACHT.

In the territory of Ui Cennselaig, in Wexford (Onom.).

Crimthann Sciath-bél is mentioned by FM. a.m. 3502. The story of his battle with the Tuath Fidga is told in LL 15 a 22, where they are said to be a British tribe: cf. BB 43 a y; fr. Nenn. ed. Todd ch. xxvii, ch. xxx, and p. lxv seq.: Keating's History, cd. Dinneen, ii. 111.

This poem was edited in Todd Lect. vii. 30.

- 7. birda baill 'pointed tools,' dangerous to handle: cf. ball urlainn, ball acra, Dinneen's Dict.
- 11. Read with LB ind ail: ef. SG. ii. 473, 7: the word means 'insult' not 'injury.'
- The Fidga and Fochmaind are mentioned together in the poem on Druim nDairbrech, Metr. Ds. ii. 46, 17. Túath Fidga and Tuath Ochmaine are two of the three sections of the Gaileóin. MacNeill, Population Groups, pp. 90-1 (Proc. R.I.A., April 1911).
- 22. cleth-núi. cleth 'stake,' &c., is often used metaphorically of a chieftain: see Meyer, Contrib. núi = Cormac's noe.i. duine; cf. O'Day. 1291.
- 24. Translate 'the way to overcome them is to behead them': so also the prose.
- 27.  $\delta$  ág arm. The reading of L dáig na n-arm seems to have arisen from reading  $\delta$  as d.
- 33. in each deg-amm: this is probably a phrase like eech than. When vacant land was wanted for the people (draimm = dreim), it could be had in the former territory of the Fidga and Fochmaind. Translate, then, 'there was found on every occasion for the people,' &c.

LOCH GARMAN.

This is the Irish name of Wexford Harbour.

There is a deep-rooted confusion as to the date of Cathair Mór and his sons. According to FM he was king of Ireland, A.D. 120-122, and was slain by Cond Cét-chathach and the Luagni of Temair. Tigernach, Rev. C. xvii. 7, gives the same account of his death at a somewhat later date. Authorities vary as to the length of his reign: the annalistic document LL 24 a 11 says: Cathair mor mac Feidlimthe coica (nó tri) bliadna, co torchair la fein Luagni i Temraig: see also the poems of Gilla Coemáin LL 129 b 9, and Fland Mainistrech LL 132 a 19. Again in the Leinster pedigrees at LL 315 b 42, In Cathair mar-sa...l. bliadna do ir-rige hErenn i Temraig.... Comamser dano don Chathair-seo 7 do Chund chet-chathach sist máir. In the tale of Cath Cnucha (ed. Windisch, Grammar 121), Cathair is connected with Conn and with Cumall, father of Finn. These notices make it necessary to place him in the second century. Now this same Cathair Mor, son of Feidlimid Ferurglais, is father of a number of sons, one of whom is Fiachu Ba Aiccid, LL 315 b 50, LL 313 b 12-20. So in Leabhar na gCeart, 203-5, Catháir Mór, father of Fiachu Ba Aicid, was killed by the fian of Luaigne. And Fiachu Ba Aicid is father of Bresal Bélach (AU 483, 604; FM 435; LL 315 cl. 5). With Bresal Bélach we are on historical ground: he died in 435 (FM) or 436 (AU), and his successor Enda Cennselach is mentioned in the Book of Armagh (Thes. Pal. ii. 240). If then Catháir Mór was really grandfather of Bresal Bélach, his birth-date cannot be put much earlier than 350 or so. O'Donovan, L.na gCeart 208 note g, speaks of Enna Cennselach as "fourth in descent from Catháir, monarch of Ireland and king of Laighin or Leinster about the year 358," but does not mention how he arrived at this date, nor notice the discrepancy with the annalistic account. Assuming that Catháir was born about 350, he might have lived to see the advent of Christianity. Lines 199-200 of Eochaid Eólach's poem seem to imply that Catháir became a convert after attaining the position of Ard-Rí. This, however, is probably quite unhistorical, the explanation of the chronological difficulties being that there is a hiatus of 200 years or so in the pedigree between Fiachu Ba Aicid and Bresal Bélach. See also note on p. 130, 41 sq.

The poem has already been edited by O'Beirne Crowe in the Journal of the Kilkenny Archæological Association, Jan., 1872.

Eochaid Eolach O'Ceirin, to whom the authorship is ascribed in the Book of Leinster, flourished in the eleventh century (see O'Curry MC ii. 113, 153). The style and metre of the poem are unusually simple. Internal rhymes are absent from more than half the stanzas.

- 11. ria thadall simply means 'frequented.'
- 14. mad dia: a strengthened form of dia; cf. mad dia lamaid, p. 286, 2, crit. note, and p. 454, 65 mad dia tuca.
- 26. This line means perhaps 'as to mentioning them, it is no dishonour' = quos honoris causa nomino.
- 29-36. Gilla Coemain (LL 127a 28-31), followed by Keating (Ir. Text. Soc. i. 194), gives as the three landing-places Inber Sláine (Wexford Harbour), Irrus Domnann (Erris in Mayo), and Tracht Rudraige (Dundrum Bay). Keating also mentions that some authorities substitute Inber Domnann (Malahide Bay) for Irrus Domnann.

Hogan, Onom., suggests three different identifications of Inber Dubglaisse.

- 51. dognithi should be taken as relative, the antecedent being recht is riagla.
- 52. allib: is this for uillib? or should we read aillib (alaind)?
- 59. dimór daig: this may mean the blaze of light at the feast, or it may be metaph. for 'the mighty warrior,' i.e. Catháir.
- 67. or arand must mean something like 'gold as compensation'; but I have no authority for arand, unless it be a sentence in Laws i. 300, 3 aithgin gatu arann, which I cannot translate. Should we write a rand?
  - 73. the: see note on p. 58, 55.
- 73-76 Render, 'when he happened to be in the house etc. . . . to steal the coronet was no right deed '&c.
  - 83. nafairthet; a middle-Irish development of arrethim.
  - 115. soeb rather means 'paradoxical.'

- 119. cuirit gleic = cuirit gliaid in the prose version § 5.
- 127. fer ndomain ' of the men of all the world.'
- 131. a fir = 'O sir!' a common tag.
- 147. ailt: perhaps dat. of alt = aircetal O'Day. 6.
- 151. it chri: see note on p. 450, 19.
- 169. cind: I take this to be the imper. of cinnim, 'I determine,' etc., used as a cheville. Cf. pp. 274, 63; 336, 29; 344, 95, and perhaps also p. 18, 219, ante. The word may, however, be an adjective.
- 204. adnad: for this metaphorical use of adannaim see Contrib., and add rohadnad a cluiche cáinte, Rev. C. xxiv. 184; adnad saerberrtha, p. 334, 8, supra.

LOCH DACHAECH.

This is the old name of Waterford Harbour.

The unusual metre (Dá trian randaigechta móire, Ir. T. iii, 155, no. 48) has troubled the scribes, and the text has needed a somewhat eclectic treatment.

- 4. Cicul is called in the prose Glicer-glun, 'knock-knee': in LL 5 a 21 he is Cichol Gricenchos of the Fomóraig; at LL 137 a 36 his name is corruptly written Ceochur glice gel glun. Keating (Ir. Texts Soc. i. 162) calls him Ciochal mac Nil from Sliab Ughmóir.
- 29. cor thach: for this irregular preterite of tuitim cf. Rev. Celt. xiv. 69, rothacth, and supra, p. 376, 12, var. lect.
- 30. After a  $br\dot{u}$  most texts have simply óen ingin, which gives a defective line.  $S_3$  supplies the gap by writing an aoin inghin: M has anaengin. I suppose rue to have fallen out after  $br\dot{u}$ .
  - 39. bán-gábud: ef. bán-martra, bán-maidm, Contrib.
  - 41. musling: see Wi. immling.
- 44. I have adopted the reading of LeS: the corrupt readings of the other copies have given rise to the ghost-word manama (O'Cl., O'R., Dinneen): see Hermathena for 1909, p. 394.
- 53. rothoimsech: I take this to be an adjective derived from tomus, and meaning something like 'abundant': cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 34, 94,

PORT LAIRGE.

Now Waterford.

- According to Dinneen gniomh is 'a division of land equal to the twelfth part of a ploughland,' so that srib-gnim may be the streaming furrows of the sea.
- 7. taur = tor 'tower, chieftain'; testa: g.s. of teist 'testimony.' The phrase means 'the chieftain to whose valour all lands bore witness.'
  - 14. magur: properly 'bait': on the evolution of this word see Eriu iii. 190.
- 17. O'R. has suire 'sea-nymphs, mermaids.' Highland Soc. Diet. suire, suireadh 'a maid, a nymph.'

- 18. The metre is in favour of regarding 'duine-deilb as a compound; but duine may be gen, dependent on deilb.
  - 28. muraig: Coneys has munac (g. munarge) = murex. So O'R munac (sic).
- 31. cen grés ria nguide; cf. Fél. Oeng. Epil. 226 rommain gress a nguide 'let urgency in beseeching them protect me,' Stokes (first edition; in the second he reads ronnain gréss a nguide, and renders 'may the work of their prayer protect us'); but the quantity and meaning of gress are alike doubtful.
- 35. This line seems corrupt; the grammar is faulty, and there is no internal rhyme with 36.
  - 39. ôs bund: perhaps 'above the bottom of the sea'; bond = fond.
- 43. dáine is dían: if this is right, one must suppose that the original sense of dáine as an abstract noun was still felt when the poem was written.

ar gurt: L (the only authority for this stanza) reads ara gurt, which will n t scan. Gort may here be 'field of battle.'

MAG RAIGNE.

MAG RAIGNE is a plain in the barony of Kells, Co. Kilkenny (FM index).

- 3. serc-blaid: this compound occurs also at pp. 16, 192; 218, 30; 282, 71.
- 6. srdb: O'R. explains this word by 'much, plenty, diffusion, stream, rivulet'; in SnR 6780 it means 'stream'; here it perhaps means 'the common people.' At p. 404, 12, it is used of a drove of pigs.
- 7. tarthud úire. Cf. LL 6 b 18 tardúth uire: BB 405 a 47 ag tárrud eise: tarradh, tarrudh 'a drawing' O'R. The prose legend has uir do tarrad. We should perhaps read tarthad (: tascrad). S3 has tarrúdh, the other texts tarthud, tarrud, tarrad, &c.
  - 14. dodáil: cf. p. 286, 7; Tec. Corm., p. 22, 39 (adj. ?).
- 20. Most texts read tue leis baice is tue rámann, &c; but the prose has bae 7 rama 7 túag lais: cf. p. 198, 8: bace is túag is trom-ráma.
  - 21-2. Cf. p. 354: Tair a forud na Fótla . cen robud cen ríg-fócra.
  - 24. menmnach = 'haughty' rather than 'cheerful.'

MAG FEMIN, MAG FERA, MAG FEA.

THE Dindsenchas now leaves Leinster for Munster. Mag Fea indeed is said by O'Donovan tolbe 'a plain in the barony of Forth, Co. Carlow'; but Mag Femin is in Co. Tipperary: its exact position and extent are discussed by Hogan, Onom.

Femin, Fera, and Fea are mentioned among the slaves of Cland Miled BB 39 a 7. A different account of Mag Fea is given in LL 5 a 18.

I.L being the only authority for the poem, its text is reproduced without alteration, except as noted on p. 199.

10. eirémud: corrupt; a trisyllable is required alliterating with bace and rhyming with trén-mud.

12. For ruamor 'digging' see Rev. C. xiii. 123: it also means 'rowing' just as ruma means both 'oar' and 'spade.'

15. ní dela do deir: this perhaps means something like 'no suitable lot for a girl'; i.e. it requires a warrior to live and thrive there. Cf. Silv. Gad. 346, 20, Alainn in tír i tanac, mochen rí dámad dela: which is equivalent to álainn an tír-se, ocus mochen damad betha bhunaid beith innti, 'I could give him joy whose natural lot in life it were to dwell on in the same!' (O'Grady): LL 394, 45 dá fion-fuil, fa deala dhaibh; Hy Fiach. 187 (quoted in Contrib.) deig-mhéin as deala don druing.

17. The emendation proposed for this line is suggested by the prose version: focsirded cach Maidib dia chéliu clachlid ernnaid.

26. Cormac's Glossary s.v. Femen gives the names of the two oxen: they are also mentioned in Lebor Gabála, LL 9 b 35, in the account of the Tuatha Dé Danann. They are there called di rig-damraide i. Fea 7 Femen. See also the following poem, 53-56.

MAG FEMIN II.

THE prose Dindsenchas of Mag Femin corresponds to the first poem (although this only exists in L); it has no relation to the second, which is found in all texts of the Dindsenchas. There are also late copies of this poem in RIA 23 E 26, p. 33, and 23 G 22, p. 11, where it is included in a notice of Lugaid Lámderg. In L there is the heading Cummine 7 Mac Da Cherda cecinerunt, in cet leth-rand la Cummini, leth-rand tanaise la Mac Da Cherda. As to these two persons see O'Curry MC 11 204; Rev. Celt. xxix, 219; Eriu v. 18. The poem is chiefly concerned with the exploits of Lugaid Menn, also called Lugaid Lám-derg (28), son of Oengus Tirech; in FM 267 he is mentioned as Lugaid Mend mac Aongusa d'Ultoib. Cf. Aided mac nEchach (ed. O'Grady, Silv. Gad. i. 335, from L. Breac; Stokes, Rev. Celt. xxiv. 186, from YBL) Lugaid mend mac Aengusa tirig meic Firchorp is é rogab ar eicin ferann Tuadmuman ar tris, ocus is desin raidter gairb-ferann claidim Luigdech láim-deirg, &c., cf. lines 27-8. The same paragraph is found with an addition in H 3. 17, p. 749 b: Lugaid mend mac Ængusa tírig maio Firchuirp maio Moga Corp maio Cormaio maio Cais is e rodselaig 7 rosgab tír ar eigin. inde dicitur garb-ferana claidim Luigdech lam-deirg. ní deachaid a n-arem rainde o feraib Muman do dal Cais in tír sin. ní dlig rig Erenn giall na comindasa [sic] bes don tir sin acht rig dal Cuis a aenur.

2. násad 'place of assembly.'

2-4. L's text of these lines differs from all other copies. If we adopt fobith neich in 2, there is no verb in the first leth-rand, while in 3 ba meite nochiad frossa is hypermetric, besides being difficult to construe: tar éis in 4 also gives a hypermetric line.

- 7. Read ba with all Mss. except L.
- 8. enech for enig, to make a rhyme.
- 10. Mac Dá Cherda was son of Maclochtair, king of the southern Dési. I do not know what or where Tibre may be: L reads Tidle, which may be right: see Hogan, Onom., Tidil, Tedel, Cell Tidil, Dál Tidil.
- 14. Read perhaps with R a tecnad 'from which he would gain martial fame': for tecnaim see Lism. Lives, index, teicenaid. The reading ademad may be referred to addamim. L's adfeided (adfiadaim) means 'which would declare': the end of the line is illegible in L; perhaps miad mileth (= miled).
- 17. The battle of Luchat must have been one of the seven encounters in which Lugaid Menn defeated the men of Connaught, Keating iii. 71. Luchad is now Lowhid in Clare, O'Don. FM 1564.
  - 21. Hogan identifies Lodan with Ludden, near Sixmilebridge in Co. Clare.
- As to the carn with a stone for each man, see p. 118, ante, and Stokes' note, Rev. Celt. xv. 331.
  - 30. The reading and meaning are doubtful, but alliteration is in favour of rold.
  - 32. Femen-mag = Mag Femin.
- 33. Lugaid Menn's descent from Ailill Olomm is given in O'Curry's MS. Mat. 209.
- 37-44. L is the sole authority for these stanzas. I can make nothing of taichnefaid in 39.
- 43. Rasisset in-nem (read nim) tr. 'may they sit in Heaven'! Cf. slán seiss, Meyer, Hail Brigit, 12.
- 44. As to Fingen of Cashel and his wife Mór, see O'Nolan's 'Mór of Munster' in Proc. RIA, Aug. 1912. Aed Bennán's death is recorded in FM 614, AU 618; that of his daughter Mór in AU 631. Aed and Fingen are both mentioned in a poem on the kings of Cashel, LL 150 b 2, 3.
- 45. d'andrib: this is an emendation of L's domdreib, which is otherwise unaccountable: the other texts have do bantracht, &c.
- 47. inná: so L: all other texts have Fodla, &c., except H. r. 7, which reads oldas. Perhaps this was the original reading which has been altered in L and corrupted in the other copies.
- 48. immarédi: cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 10, 4, cech rig immotrét (tr. 'of every king that drives about thee').
- 49. cacha de bruig: cf. Wi. s.v. cacha, and add Liadain and Curithir ed. Meyer, 24, 18, cacha ndénainn.
- 53. tuargaibset cend: for this idiom cf. Wb. 26 d 11: also téchaim cend, Wi.; Irish Æneid, 1194.
- 60. After this line four MSS. add the stanza Femen Fera, &c., printed by Stokes in Rev. Celt. xv. 436 (where for deg-Datha the other texts have Deatha).

TOND CHLIDNA I.

O'Curry, MS. Mat. 306, places Tond Clidna in or near Clonakilty Bay, Co. Cork, but according to O'Donovan it is to be sought somewhat further west in Glandore Bay: see his note FM v. 1548.

The story of Clidna and Ciaban is told in Acallam na Senórach, where this poem is introduced; it is translated in Silv. Gad. ii. 201. For the readings of the Laud and Lismore texts of the Acallam I have relied on Stokes (Ir. Text iv. 109 with notes): Mr. Plummer has kindly supplied me with a collation of the copy in Rawlinson B 487.

- 5. the: see note on p. 58, 65 ante: in the present instance the texts vary between de and te.
  - 8. Ciabán: the prose story calls him Iuchna Ciab-faindech.
- 21. Teite, daughter of Ragamain, and the Strand called after her, are mentioned in the Acallam story.
  - 31. do neoch: this usage is illustrated by Atkinson, Pass. and Hom. 817 a.
- 33. Ildathach and his two sons are not referred to in the prose Dindsenchas; but in the Acallam the son of the King of India and the son of the King of Greece share Ciaban's adventure: these are, no doubt, the same persons in a later dress.

37-40. These ships must have pursued Clidna when she eloped from the Land of Promise.

39. chongaib seems to be put metri gratia for congab, which may mean either 'seizure' or 'assembly.' The line may perhaps mean 'that was not a gathering without a spear,' i.e. they were well armed.

TOND CHLIDNA II.

- torum: this word is often used in SnR in chevilles; but I do not know its meaning.
- 5. forrach is the verbal noun of forrgim 'I crush, strike, &c': cf. p. 72, 92; ZCP ii. 471.
- 11. erctha raind: cf. Metr. Ds. i. 46, 7; ibid. ii. 20, 46, erctha gaith (sic leg.) which Meyer renders (ZCP vi. 247) 'wise men declare it.' There is another ercaim = 'I fill': see Ir. T. iii, 2 index; SnR index.
- 17, 18. tiag-sa, biur-sa are 1 sg. imper.: cf. Kuhn's Zts. xxxviii 467, Thurn, Hdb. 350.
- 23. Sid nEna should perhaps be Sid Nena from nen ,i. cumal ACL iii. 143; but the glosses there quoted are of little or no value.
- 26. dosfuartha: pret. passive of tuargim; one would expect dufuarta (< to-fo-orta), but the form may have been influenced by dofuarthaim. BH have dusfuarta, dusfoarta, but these texts habitually omit the signs of aspiration, so that their evidence does not count.

- 30. fuaitges: this verb is specially used of forcible abduction, as when Midir carries off Etáin, Ir. Text, i. 128: cf. Laws, Glossary, fuatach, fuataigim. The construction is, I think, cía fuaitges, i nathgabáil bertis Ciabán: 'if anyone carries off a woman, her friends would seize in reprisal the person of the abductor, videlicet Ciabán.'
- 36. arafesur seems to be an anomalous fut. rel. of adfiadaim, influenced by rofesur; but reading and meaning are both open to doubt.
  - 43. sess, properly 'thwart,' 'oarbench,' is here put for the whole boat.
- Mogénair (sic leg.) = mad-genair, Wi. s.v. mad: cf. Ir. T. ii. 190, note 1, 213 (63).
  - 51. rochlóschlói deinn = she died : see Contrib. conimchlóim.
- 54. Read cid ar' éracht? 'why has it risen?' (for cid ara n-éracht). For the quantity of tracht ef. note on p. 104, 8.

CARN UI NEIT.

Hogan places this Carn near Mizen Head in south-west Cork. According to Stokes it is said to be the Old Head of Kinsale, but he does not name his authority.

The extremely complicated metre has the usual effect of making the poem difficult to construe. It is written in Rindaird (the metre of Félire Oengusso), and there is a lavish profusion of rhyme. Besides the obligatory couplet-rhyme (2 and 4 of each stanza), there is regularly one internal rhyme, sometimes two, between 1 and 2, and also between 3 and 4. The end-words of 1 and 3 also assonate with the couplet-rhymes, except when they themselves rhyme with a word in the following line. Alliteration is general, but not quite regular.

The personages mentioned belong to the Tuatha De Danann; their names occur e.g. in Cath Maige Tured: see Rev. Celt. xii. 63, etc. The subject is a trial of strength in magic arts between Bress and Lug mac Ethlenn, in which Bress gets the worst of it: the geiss which he has laid upon the men of Ireland, as stated in the prose story, is turned against himself, and he dies of the results. It is an example of the comic grotesquerie which takes the place of humour in the older legends of Ireland. The story is referred to by Fland Mainistrech in his poem on the Tuatha Dé, LL 11 a 39-40.

1-2. bùada . . . gessi are written for búadaib . . . gessib, to mark the rhyme: so 35, for ratha.

With gessi grada cp. ba geis tria ngrad ngentlidi, p. 70, 48.

5. This pedigree is given also in BB 34 a 55 (and 23). Neit mac Indai maic Alldai maic Thaid maic Tabairnd. Hence I restore ba hAlldai; for the construction of. sciath ba Daire, p. 122, 29. In 7 read with all texts except L is maic Tabuirn: of. p. 140, 6; p. 338, 22, where the Mss. have mc itha 7 mc Bregoin (mc itha et m breoguin H), also LL 205 b 41, 42, 44, 45.

rablai: this is a conjecture, to give a rhyme with Alldai. I take bla to be a shorter form of blad: thus rot-bla LL 10 b 25, Metr. Ds. ii. 26, 5 = rót-blad, p. 410, 8, supra; lin-bla, pp. 258, 35 and 260, 7, supra.

9-10. The Mss. have Baad, raad without marks of length; but I can make nothing of raad unless it is imperf. of raaim.

iarna rethaib is conjectural: rethaib is demanded by rhyme and alliteration: tarna (so most Mss.) may be right; but cf. iar sétaib, p. 104, 26, and Ir. T. ii¹ 133.

14. bireoil, g. of birél, which may = bir.

- 31. forrig. The reading of RS<sub>3</sub> fa ri gives a simple text, but does not explain the readings of other Mss. I have assumed the existence of a compound for-ri like airri; but possibly we should read forrig (forrgim).
  - 32. bith-dúil: cf. O'Dav. 667 duil i. sluinned.
  - 33. cach bails tr. 'in every part.'
- 33-36. These lines and 45-48 are quoted in a glossary printed in Arch. Celt. Lex. iii. 146.
  - 40. fritha fatha perhaps means 'expedients were discovered,' but what is cosa?
- 43. O'Cl. quotes these lines s.v. gor, explaining i. Lugh dorinne gairidheacht no maith isin am-soin.
  - 44. rostimsaig perhaps 'put them together, compegit.'
  - 46. sir-traite is the reading of B only.
  - 48. rodasurmaid: from airmaidim 'I hit, attain.'
- 51. cheó ngó, literally 'a deceptive mist' such as druids had power to diffuse; it made the wooden cows seem alive.
  - 54. lár n-achaid is perhaps a place-name.
- 60. tirgnom is B's reading = turgnam: the other texts have various forms, unintelligible to me.

deg-rún: see note on p. 113, 23.

- 61. opa for opad (obbad), for the sake of the assonance. The grammar is somewhat irregular: 'to refuse them, any feat, &c.': the plural possessive refers to any sort of cless in general. Meyer, Contrib., gives cless as masc.; but it is neuter in Old Irish (Stories from Tain, index).
- 68. Wi. gives ruamdae 'very great, magnificent' on O'R.'s authority; but of. ruam 'red dye' C. Ad. The prose has cét duib-sesra do rodo ruad mona. We must, however, read rodub to rhyme with omun.
- 69-72. The meaning seems to be that the grave of Bress is not held in honour on account of his failure to fulfil his geiss.
- 69. uisse 'propriety, proper respect,' an abstract noun corresponding to uisse 'fitting.'
- 70. scaichsin: cf. SnR 2904 (of Isaac in old age) iar scaichsin a chétfaide 'after his senses had failed him.'
  - 71. gráid is gen. after cen dlecht cen deisse.

CROTTA CLIACH.

O'Donovan (Topogr. Poems, lxxxiii), followed by Hogan, Onom., says that this is an old name for the Galtee Mountains.

The legend of Cliach and Bodb's daughter is told in Leabhar Breac 2425, where it is followed by two other legends, accounting for two names of the lake which burst forth when the ground opened under Cliach (see O'Curry, MS. Mat. 426). These two legends are not in any other way connected with the fairy harper: the author of our poem has tried to supply a connexion with one of them in lines 17-20.

- The phrase fri gorm-greis ngrinde is obscure. I withdraw the rendering offered, but cannot suggest any probable explanation.
- 8. I should now prefer to render this line 'the smart of womanly desire was burning', or 'was constraining (the maiden).' For brig applied to the physical appetites, cf. anbhaindi na brigi tochlaigthi, quoted in Contrib.
- Sid fer Femon = here, as constantly elsewhere, the Mss. vary between sid ar F. and sid fer F.
- 11. fuired: the meaning is doubtful: O'R. has fuireadh 'preparation, feast,' of. gléire glan-fuirid, p. 288, 44; dobadh fuireadh Eachmarcach obuir Eirinn fhulang (corrupt?) Misc. Celt. Soc. 1849, p. 412, 15 tr. 'E. was ready.' But in these instances we probably have to do with filired (= filr) verbal noun of filirin (prototonic of fosirin).
- 14. slógaib: the poet seems to conceive Cliach as attended by followers from his own sid, cf. 5, 7. In the LBr. version of the story he is not a fer side at all but the harper of a human king, Smirdub mac Smail, and he seems to go on his adventure alone.
  - i sir-chacht, i.e. they were benumbed with fear.
- 15. bág n-uide: that is, it was worth making a journey to be able to talk of such sights.

amra brigaib 'more wonderful than deeds of might,' a variation on amra brig or amra brige (see Contrib.).

- 16. sam-chuire, either 'an indolent band' or = sam-chairi 'ease-loving.'
- 22. cen meirbe: rather, 'without feebleness.'
- 23. triath trethain: this should be predicate to Cliach tr. 'when Cliach was a mighty lord of the sea eastward.'

CEND FEBRAT.

This name is often written Cend Abrat. It belonged to a part of Sliab Riach, now Slieve Reagh, lying to the south-east of Kilmallock, on the confines of Limerick and Cork: O'Donovan FM 186: Suppl. to O'R. s.v. ceann abpat; Ir. T. iv. index: see further Wars of G. and G., exxxvii n., clx n. Of the herees mentioned in this poem, some (if not all) belong to the Clann Dedad or Erainn of Munster. Febra, according to the prose version, was brother of Deda mac Sin, and was slain by Cáin mac Deirg (25), who was killed in turn by Garbán son of Deda (33). Lugaid Laigde (40) was one of the sons of Dáire Doimthech (or Sirchrechtach) (42), ancestor of the Dairfine: for his pedigree see the Genealogy of Corcu Lai[g]de in Misc. Celt. Soc. (1849), pp. 25, 57: Fianaigecht, 28; LL 325 & 56 sq. As to Dáire's sons, see LL as above; Cóir Anm. § 68; Misc. Celt. Soc. 25; ds. of Carn Máil ibid. 67 sq. Dodera (46) is the jester of Lugaid mac Con, who was killed in the battle of Cenn Febrat (Rev. Celt. xiii. 441, cf. Fianaig. 35).

9-12. I would now translate these lines somewhat differently. 'The sound of the wind lulled me to sleep with vacant mind; and there I met with pure poetic lore among the hands of warriors': (literally, 'it was a meeting with purity of wisdom'). A contrast is intended between the war-stained warriors and the pure visions which are revealed to the poet 'in a wise passiveness.' With the whole passage compare the opening of Cuirt an Mheadhón-Oidhche.

18. Cathgus is perhaps a proper name, as in ZCP viii. 297, 10.

28. Perhaps 'it was a cause of strife (something worth fighting for) lying neglected.'

31. leccain, literally 'cheek': so gruad, p. 2, 16: Lecco enters into many place-names.

- 41. na tri mban: but four are mentioned: perhaps we should render 42 'round the wife of Dáire': or possibly im mnái should be tri mná 'the three wives of Dáire, viz. Eithne, Maer, and Mugain,' but I have not been able to find elsewhere any mention of his wives. There are several women bearing these names.
  - 50. cen chicas: i.e. it sprang up naturally, without digging.
- 51, in lúain: Metr. Gl. and O'Cl. have lúan i. cú: perhaps then lúan is intended to suggest Lugaid mac Con.
- 54. dd thairm: it is worth noting that three MSS, LLcS, mark the aspiration of the gen. dual.
- 59. ra haiss rodisithaig: does this mean 'has loaded on himself, has undertaken'? cf. gabhas rem ais 'I undertook,' Dinneen, s.v. ais.
- 63. déin-breth, if right, must be put for dian-breth, but it gives a faulty rhyme with glé-meth. Possibly we should restore dé-breth 'divine judgment,' an artificial compound analogous to dé-bréth the supposed original form of (mu)debroth. There is also a genuine compound déserc > dérc 'love of God, charity.'
  - 67. i fat ' by far,' modern a bhfad.
- 68. in chroeb i Cind Febrat: is this a hall like the famous Croeb Rúad? or is it a complimentary description of a person, perhaps the poet's patron, or possibly the poet himself?
- 69-71. As to Cend Cuirrig, see the next poem. Cend Claire is 'a hill east of Knocklong in Co. Limerick,' Onom. Cend Aife has not been identified.
- 73. Who is 'the son of Fland'? Presumably the author himself. His name is given in the superscription of L as Mac Raith úa Paain. Nothing further is known of him under that name; but Meyer, Primer of Metrics, quotes the name of a poet Mac Raith mac Flaind mac Echthigern, from BB 182 b 32, where it occurs in a genealogical account of Dal Cais: the passage runs thus: Da mac dec uero ag Ceindetigh, côic maio dib aga fuil sil i. Brian otait sil mBriain etc., 7 Echthigern otait hui Echtigern . is do rob ua Mac Raith fili .i. Mac Raith maio Floind maic Echthigern. This poet therefore belongs to the end of the tenth or first half of the eleventh century. He may be identical with the author of our poem:

however the strange 'úa Paain' is to be explained, it is not a genuine Irish patronymic.

75. techta: plural of techtad, verbal noun of techtain. Cf. p. 366, 19, for triun tellaig is techta (: óen-fechta); Mesc. Ul. 8 topar tuli 7 techta; BB 296 b 23 topur techta; LL 295 b 29 techta in talman. The 'possessions' must be the mounds where the heads are buried.

It is also possible that ria (re) techta may mean 'before going (vanishing in death),' techta being a plural form of techt, as dula of dul.

CEND CUIRRIG [CURRECH LIFE].

The title of this poem is wrongly given in the text: it is the dindsenchas of Cend Cuirrig, which is, according to O'Donovan, Suppl. O'R., "a townland on the south side of the Suir, in Co. Waterford, about one quarter mile from Killaloan old church, in the barony of Iffa and Offa east." See also the authorities quoted in Onom. It is therefore distinct from Cuirrech Life, the Curragh of Kildare. It is associated both in the prose and in our poem with Badammair (Bodamair) or Rath Badamrach, which is said to be near Cahir in Co. Tipperary: see O'Don. Suppl., Onom., and Rev. Celt. xv 444. The origin of Finn's feud with Currech and his family is set forth in the prose, and also, more fully, in the tale Bruiden Atha, ed. Meyer, Rev. Celt. xiv 242, where the slaying of Teite and her husband Find mac Regamna is also narrated.

1-4. This stanza is quoted Ir. T. iii 32, as an example of dian airseng. t is there ascribed to Cailte.

2. rodamain. This is a conjectural reading, intended as verbal noun of damnaim 'I subdue' with intensive ro-. But the rodamair of SS<sub>3</sub>H should be kept: it is a prototonic form of rodamair (damin), with the accent on the first syllable. Translate 'there are few kings to whom he yielded.'

 bán-bidbad, i.e. Badammair, Finn's mistress, whom Cuirrech slew. Grief for her death made her friends guther for revenge, but t was a single hero, Finn, that killed Currech.

bidba here means 'culprit' or 'victim' rather than 'enemy.'

10. For cliath 'phalanx' see Contrib.; but here I think it means the wicker-work shield, whose sharp edges or corners dripped with blood.

13-14. Fothad Cananne was Currech's half-brother (see the prose), and would be expected to avenge him. I cannot explain roselt. The form occurs in the following passages: ZCP vi 269 roselt of gasith 7 gréin 'sheltered from wind and sun' (?): supra, p. 428, 39, selt for slúag railgech in réise mor-ainm &c., 'settled upon' (?): Metr. Ds. ii. 4, 44, roselt for slúag (so L): LL 316, 2, Fe firt a demuin romselt (gl. .i. nommarb), LU 89 b 38 rosélt ar borg mbúredach.

- 15. rothochair from tochurim = pono, Wi. Cf. p. 292, 14 dochuiret 'drop their fruit.'
- 17. The prose says that Teite daughter of Mac Niad had the same mother as Currech and Fothad, and that her husband was Find mac Ragamna. In the prose ds. of Lumman Tige Srafain, LL 193 b (omitted by Stokes) another complication is added to the relationships. Bái cath-milid in tan sin, 7 ba faid 7 ba fili é .i. Fer Bern mac Regamna, brathair do Find mac Regamna. Et oca-saide bòi Teite ingen Maic Nia a quo Oenach Teite nominatur. Inund mathair (in margin .i. Fainchi trechichech ingen Airmora do Aradaib Cliach) la Currech mac Cathbad (?) 7 la Fothad Cananne 7 la Teiti la muái Find maic Regamna 7 inund athair la Fer Bern 7 la Find mac Regamna. 'There was a warrior at this time, and he was a prophet and a poet, namely Fer Bern mac Regamna, brother to Find mac Regamna. And they had (in common) Teite daughter of Mac Nia, from whom Oenach Teite is named. Currech mac Cathbad (?), Fothad Cananne and Find mac Regamna had the same mother (namely, Fainche Tri-chichech of Arada Cliach), and Fer Bern and Find mac Regamna had the same father.'
- 20. ferad: so L: all other Mss. read feraid, and perhaps the verb may be used here in a passive sense. Cf. Cathréim Cong. Clar. 42, ferfaid fuil 'it will rain blood.'
  - 22. féice: a metaphorical use of the word which properly means 'ridge-pole.'
- 23. robthaig: cf. robda (rodba) 'aggressive' Ir. T. iii. 443: robdaim 'I wound,' and robdach s.v. ropach, Laws Glossary.

TEMAIR LÚACHRA.

This place was somewhere near Castleisland in Co. Kerry, Onom.: cf. O'Donovan at FM p. 1731. Line 40 says that Loch Léin (the lakes of Killarney) sprang up 'over Luachair,' so that this district must have extended along the shores of the lake, which is about fifteen miles due south of Castleisland. It was part of the region occupied by the Clann Dedaid, or Erainn of Munster, when driven back by the increasing power of the Eoganachta. The Mss ascribe the poem to the legendary Fintan mac Bochra, who names himself in 41. One of the poems on Tara is attributed to him, Metr. Ds. i. 4, 41.

- 2. Read damsat cuman 'if thou rememberest.'
- 4. ruathair for ruathar, to give a rhyme.
- 6. toga túachail, i.e. a place such as a knowing man would choose for his home.
  - 7. róchlóschlói gné : i.e. when it was flooded by the outburst of Loch Léin.
- 10. RB read núad núachair, making núad a disyllable, as in Old Irish. Can núachair mean 'a newly wedded hero? 'cf. ács núachair, p. 4, 38.
- 16. Read nofoilgtis (folaigim), 'they used to hide its clover-flowers' with their numbers.
  - 19. 'moa tig: dat. for acc., for the sake of the rhyme.

21. As to Tea, daughter of Lugaid mac Itha, see Metr. Ds. i. 4, 31: 6, 3. Here she is treated as belonging to the des side.

22, 24. ar thôchim . . . ar brogad, 'in return for, as a reward for ' leaving the Land under the Sea to join in the colonization of Erin. Cach forba ar thlus may mean 'the best of every kind of live-stock,' given as her tochra; in Metr. Ds. i. 6, 15, it is said that Erimon granted his wife everything she asked for.

27. The rendering given in the text will not do; it would require a mbói di anaib. Probably ana = ane, 'then, therefore,' Contrib. Delete the semicolon, and translate ' and when she was here thereafter, it is from her that T. L. is named.'

29. The wonders attending the birth of Conn Cét-chathach are enumerated in Airne Fingein: see Anecd. from Irish Mss, ii. 5 sq.

38. ronassa might be pret. pass. of nigim, but why plural?

46. This line is conjecturally restored. 1 suppose rochivir to be an artificial form, abstracted from arrochisir; but it would be simpler to read docer, which may have been corrupted to dochuir (as in Rev. Celt. x. 78, 14), and then to rochuir.

47. Dun Tulcha: Fintan died there, LU 120 b 33.

SLIAB MISS.

This is still the name of a mountain in Kerry, between Tralee and Killarney, anglice Slieve Mish.

The story of the Children of Mairid is told in Aided Echach maic Maireda:

see ds. of Loch Rí, p. 450.

 congnaide may be a derivative of congniu = 'helper'; more probably from congna, 'horns' : ef. Ir. T. iv. 4451 in congnach cruaid (of a stag).

15. fo thath: see note on ds. Carmun, 298, p. 24.

17. daire is sometimes used metaphorically for 'troops,' as at p. 304, 20; FM, p. 2060 y.

1. fosnaidm : see Laws, Glossary.

TIPRA SENGARMNA.

This well must be one of the sources of the river Féil or Féile (see line 96). There were two rivers of the name in Kerry, according to O'Donovan, note on FM i. 37; they are confused in Onom. s. v. Aba Féile. We are concerned with the northern Feale, which flows past Abbeyfeale and Listowel in north Kerry, and discharges into the sea a little south of Ballybunion. It is fed principally from the mountains north of Castleisland, so that the Well of Sengarman must be somewhere on their northern slopes.

The story is a continuation of the feud between Find mac Cumaill and Currech Lifi, which forms the subject of the legend of Cend Currig.

The poem is attributed in most MSS to Fergus Fin-bél, a poet of the Fianna (see Ir. T. iv index).

- fo a snas: this refers to the shavings which Oisin used as a signal (89-96): they are called in the prose snas, snas-chur.
  - 11. riglach: cf. note on p. 18, 219.
- 14. crúach-bás, a killing where the dead were piled like stacks of corn: not from crúach 'bloody' which is disyllabic.

athbach 'a second reaping' continues the metaphor.

- 19. co fraig may mean 'armed with a shield' (for co fraigid): but the phrase seems sometimes to mean 'completely, utterly' (literally 'to the wall'): cf. p. 434, 27; LL 18 a 49 ba flaith Fáil co fraig.
- 20, 28. nóid: 24 in-Nóid D. Cf. p. 408, 20 ba nód feidle: O'Dav. 1282 nodh nó noudh i. teghdhais no durthech. Noiddruim is, however, found as a spelling of Nóendruimm, Onom. In 28 nóid does not give a good rhyme with Dub Róit, and R reads ina nóit, but the metre is apt to be lax where proper names are concerned.
- 24. There is a Druim Berthach, now Burt in Inishowen, Co. Donegal (Onom.); but this must be a different place.
- 30. sniset: see Metr. Ds. ii. 99 (note on Ochan 39), and add p. 404, 12, supra: O'Cl. snisiot .i. dorighneadar cosnamh no cathughadh: cf. Sarauw, Irske Studier 73 (86). See also note on line 136.
- 42. Read cen cháin-scís, for alliteration, and translate 'they wrought without spears or fair toil of fighting': i.e. they did not fight fair, but used black arts: clethu is for cletha (cleth).
  - 45-6. a rad don chethrur: rather 'that it should be said of the four,'
  - 54. uar-abann is of course genitive.
- 63. dia mur immach: this may mean 'out from the rampart they were raising', (but a wall is hardly necessary if you live underground;) or else 'out of the miry soil': for mur = 'mire' see ZCP iii. 470; cp. Windisch, TBC p. 63, note 6; ibid. p. 378, note 5.
  - 64. grenach: cf. Death Tales, index: LU 81 b 34.
- 74. taihde is used of the decease of kings in BB 53 b 16 ger truag a taidbi; BB 56 a 32 a taidbe thall, robo throm; BB 45 a 4 nertsus beannacht, bág taithbi, Pátraic, &c., translate 'Patrick strengthened them with a blessing, a word at parting' (?). Here the word seems to mean the dissolution, dispersal, of solitude.
  - 75. Note that here and in 103 atchiat is a disyllable.
- 86. In ad-nar the prefix is apparently intensive 'very modest,' whereas in ad-mall it must be negative.
  - 87-88. docair . . . . rosfocail give a rhyme: for doccair see Lism. Lives index.
  - 89. foa choimm i.e. hiding it in the bosom of his dress.
- 92. Reading 'mach ar topur (or tondaib) na tiprat, we should have alliteration, but no internal rhyme: besides I am doubtful whether the prodelision of immach is legitimate: cf. however p. 308, 67.
  - 98. ba móite see Wi. s. v. mó.
- 103. fotholl: this word is used also in the prose: it occurs in FM vi 1956, 26 i fotholl talman.

105-8. dosberat, focherdat (musnagat most mss), fuaprait. The mss retain the conjunct endings in the deuterotonic forms, but discard them in the prototonic.

113. sernais usually means 'spread, extended'; here 'held on his way.'

119. ri fian: rather 'king of the Fianna.'

rangell seems to mean 'held him as a pledge,' or 'exacted a pledge from him': so in the prose ds. of Findglais, Rev. Celt. xv. 448, Isi rogell Coinculainn 'she it was that exacted a promise from C.' (?).

123. sedlais co sóeb: a verb sedlaim is found also in Rev. Celt. xvi. 44 (ds. of Mag Coba): Metr. Ds. ii. 68, 45, but its meaning is uncertain. It seems necessary to assume that Find is subject to the verbs sedlais. . dobert. . atnaig. According to the prose version Crimthand alone got clear away, whereas the poem says that Sengarman's son Slechtaire was the only survivor.

126. nírbo chéim cert, i.e. it was a ticklish business getting the old witch out of the hole.

127. i ruth gait: ruth is dat. of roth 'a wheel, a circle,' here a noose. A gad was commonly used in Ireland for hanging, instead of a rope. Cf. Dinneen s.v. gad, Oxford Dict. 'gad.' O'Cl.'s ruth ghaid i. rathán gadraigh comes no doubt from this source. O'R. has puċ 'a chain, a link.'

135-6. If L's reading is adopted, we must write don islait, and translate fuaigset 'they bound.' The other mss. read fogniset gait 'they committed robbery' and sniset 'they tormented.'

FINDGLAIS.

This is the name of a stream flowing down from the Sliab Miss range, a little south of Tralee, among which stood Cathair Chonrói. The story of Curió's death by the treachery of Blathnat is told in Aided Conrói ed. Best, Ériu ii, 20, from YBL (quoted as Y on pp. 254-5). See also Brinna Firchertne, ed. Meyer, ZCP iii. 40. The first two stanzas of our poem are introduced into these compositions.

- 1. Roort: it is perhaps better to take this as passive 'Blathnat was killed in the fighting.' Brinna Firch. (st. 8) has romert.
- 2. This Airget-Glenn must be a valley among the Slieve Mish mountains: it is not in Hogan's Onom.
- 4. rodasmidir: is this intended as dep. pret. of asmidiur? Brinna Firch., stanza 8, reads ddig ba maith donderuidir.
  - 5. imscar: cf. note on 134, 22. Aid. Con. and Br. F. (st. 33) read comrac.
- 8. In Br. F. 'hi Laind Chind Bera assin Rind.' In Keating's version of the story (ii. 222-6), Blathuat is carried off to Ulster, after the death of Curói, and Rind Cind Bera would consequently be somewhere in the North: but the old tale makes her death take place during the fighting at Cathair Conrói. (The three entries in Onom. under Rind Cind Bera all relate to our tale.)
- Fer Brecach is called Fer Becrach, Curói's charioteer, in Aid. Con. § 9, Senfiacail is mentioned ibid. § 7, and in Br. F. st. 13, Fergaire in Br. F. st. 14.

SRUB BRAIN.

This is Srub Brain in West Kerry, not the place of the same name in Donegal: see Onom. and Aided Conrói, § 4, where the story is briefly told.

- 9. téite means properly 'a fair, a gathering,' Triads index.
- 10. scith-méite, i.e. so big that you would get tired in trying to count them.
- 18. Literally 'it was enough to make all the world sorry.'
- 15. Meyer Contrib. has dergnaid 'common, ordinary;' but in SnR 8317 the devils are called drong dergnaide: ibid. 948, Satan is discir, doescair, dergnaide, so that some stronger word is evidently wanted.
  - 20. euilehe, 'cloak, cassock,' is aptly used of the ravens' plumage.
  - 22. mbossa = mbassaib.
  - 27. ranac: literally 'I reached, I found.'
- 32. Ramand and Redgach are place-names, as in prose: trans. 'as far as Ramand and Redgach.'
  - 35. ngaibél: cf. gobél, 'a strait of the sea,' Tec. Corm. index.
- 39. roúaig: cf. Fél. Oeng. Jan. 20, án cethrur consiagu; supra, p. 338, 2, dia n-siaigim sós senchassa.
  - 40. So a victorious warrior laid the head of his foe on some conspicuous rock.

LOCH LÉIN.

This is the Irish name for the Lakes of Killarney.

- 2. athehomare i.e. an inquiry as to the origin of the name.
- 5-8. The breaking-forth of the lake is mentioned in Airne Fingein as one of the events that happened on the night when Conn Cétchathach was born (Aneed. from Ir. Mss ii. 5). Lén and his craftsmanship are also mentioned, ibid. p. 4.
  - 5. fiad: cf. note on p. 136, 34.
  - 7. rath-lind: cf. os rath-lind Charmain, p. 22, 275 ante.
- 10. The pedigree of Faithlend son of Aed Damán is given in Rawl. B 502, p. 151 a 4. His uncle Aed Bennán died A.D. 614 FM: see note on p. 202, 46.
  - 13-24. These lines are translated in MC iii. 203.
  - col-lin uird = uird col-lin : uird is nom. pl. of ord.
  - 14. brüch dat. of brüäch, Contrib.
- tiam-gestal: cf. glan-gestul, p. 348, 20. tiam I have not found elsewhere: tiamda = 'timid' O'Dav. 1571.
- 28. Indesin na nDése: the name is said to survive in Mullaghnoney near Clonmel, Onom.
- 28. co n-óibligi: I take óiblige to be an abstract noun, corresponding to óiblech 'sparkling,' óebligud 'glittering' ZCP iii. 223, §8. Stokes divides co noeb-ligi 'to the holy grave' (Rev. Celt. xv. 452), and this is how the prose compiler understood it, as he writes: Iar seur a cipre each n-oidhchi foceirded uad a hindeoin sair co hIndeoin na nDeisi cusin fert. But I cannot help thinking that he has been led astray by misinterpreting the verse.

31. fedma is gen. of feidm used as an adjective.

33. co nglé-raind: literally 'with bright share,' viz. one of the three showers. Cf. p. 462, 43.

36. némna for némanna.

37. laga = loga g.s. of lug .i. laoch O'Dav.

41. Loch Léin must have been included by some authorities among the lakes which burst forth in the reign of Erimon: it is not one of those mentioned in L1. 15 a 47, FM i. 33, Keating ii. 108.

51. bretti must, I think, be partic. necess. of berim: one would expect *brethi (cf. Thurn. Hdb. §718). For the phrase berim buids cf. LL 13 α 23, ZCP iii. 222, 13.

CARN FERADAIG.

THE exact situation of this Carn has not been determined, but it was somewhere not far from the town of Limerick (Onom.).

co húain: other instances of this phrase are p. 372, 81 Rolen co huain in gairm glan 'the name stuck perpetually': p. 378. 1 Atbér frib co húain: BB 398 a 16 findat na druidi co huain: Archiv iii. 232, ar do maith co mór, ar do flaith cen lén, co hopunn co huain tuc dam topur dér Silv. Gad. i. 105. 10, ar laich ar ngadair co huain ag fagail umman cæmchluain. In this last instance O'Grady renders 'at their discretion,' Stokes (Ir. T. iv. index) 'leisurely,' which would be co n-úain. The meaning suggested by a comparison of the above passages is 'to the end, completely.' Perhaps uain, verbal noun of oidim, which means properly 'loan,' and secondarily 'leisure,' 'delay,' may have also developed the sense of 'the term when a loan falls due,' 'échéance,' and hence generally 'a fixed term or date.'

5. rothuilg: see Wi. toile 'pride,' tolgda 'haughty': but more probably the meaning is 'breach' (made in a fight): see Windisch, note Ir. T. iii. 533.

7. gol-gdith is perhaps the name of Gollan's weapon.

- 8. Conmact was the only son of Eber, who left issue ZCP viii. 302, LL 319 a 4.
- 9. temraig tire: cf. Wi. s.v. temair: Metr. Ds. i. 10, 69, and note ibid. p. 61.
- 19. mairn, verbal noun of mairnin 'I betray,' seems to mean sometimes 'destruction' without any idea of treachery, cf. p. 408, 23; 450, 19; Metr. Ds. ii. 68, 43: so perhaps tond mairnech, Fled. Br. 52.
- 24. This line is obscure. Rotraig is properly 'had ebbed': cocert 'adjustment, etc.: here 'time arranged': cairdiu for cairde to give a rhyme.
  - 26. libernmas is perhaps a compound, lib-ernmas: but then what is lib?
  - 28. tue mér congal: tr. 'fought many a combat.'

LUIMNECH.

THE name survives in the town and county of Limerick; but it originally denoted the whole estuary of the Shannon (Onom.: FM 661). In this poem it is applied both to the town (9-16) and to the river (47, 64). The poem is founded on the tale Cophur in dá Muccida. Rind and Faebur are the two swine herds Friuch and Rucht, in one of their transformations: see Windisch's edition, Ir. T. iii. 243 and 245. The encounter of the two in the Shannon is briefly described in the Egerton text, ibid. p. 237.

- 2. nos has perhaps here the sense of 'fame (famous place or legend)' suggested in Ir. T. iv. index: cf. Wi. TBC index; O'Dav. 423, where a nos fer nErenn = int urdarcugud sin im fearaib Ereand.
- 3. druit lat. I have not found any parallel to the construction of this passage. In modern Irish druidim le means 'I approach,' the objective being indicated by the preposition.
- rosrethad may apply in a concrete sense to the river; but cf. ainm rosrethad sith, p. 366, 11: co fail depends on labrad, rosrethad.
  - 7. cen tairbirt may mean 'unsubdued' or 'unsurpassed.'
  - 11. sattail seems = sotal, ' proud.'
  - 14. na loingse, 'o the fleet.'
  - 17. cóiced nEchach, i.e. Munster, cf. Ir. T. iii. 288, MC ii. 9.
- 15, 16. Read fofuair L. and translate 'from the gathering, which was productive of sound, L. got its name.' For tuillmech, see note on 68.
- 23. fill may be either gen. or acc. of fell, which is both masc. (Wi.) and fem. (Three Shafts, index: line 39 of this poem).
- 26. What may be the precise meaning of glé-chuirr is not easy to say: corr is applied to anything pointed or prominent: render perhaps ' of the bright spear-point.'
  - 27. fri ferga fige: cf. p. 84, 4, fer figed feirg.
- 30. I cannot translate beó-dédail. Meyer, Contrib. explains dédail doubtfully as = de-fedil; but here and at p. 298, 11 it is a substantive.
  - 35. suil: a mid. Ir. form for the older (re)siu ro.

adralsat: is this the signatic pres. subj. of adsligim (in the sense 'I attempt') with ro? More probably it is for adrelsat, from adellim.

- 42. The rhyme demands sochlid: is it = sochlid 'fame,' O'R.?
- 44. druimne is used of the surface of the sea, SnR 4046, Br. Dâ D. § 44 (v.l.). demnigthe is the imper. of demnigim (deponent), used as a cheville.
- 45. If lungair is a noun, I can throw no light on its meaning, unless it = O'R.'s longpain, 'a ship's crew.' All texts but L have mar lungair (longair), which must be a verb. In RC xi 129, we have langaim (longaim) 'I betray': can mar lungair = 'ut traditur'?
  - 47. Rosnacht is apparently pret. of agim.
- 48. Munnig is fir Olnecmacht: these words are in loose apposition to cach lácch in 45.

- 50. Hogan, Onom., identifies Tul Tuinne with Tounthinna in County Tipperary, 3 miles N.E. of Killaloe; but this is too far inland, as the Shannon is tidal only a few miles above Limerick.
- 55. samlait: this verb means properly 'liken, compare': hence infer by comparison, here 'etymologize': cf. p. 462, 26.
- 61. scenbda: cf. Ir. T. i. 108, 31, dar sciath scenb: and see note on p. 390, 55.
  62. fo nach tréith, &c., for foa nach tréith, &c., literally 'under which every chieftain is not weak.'
- 68. tuillmech is a derivative of tuillem 'earning' or 'wages': the adjective means 'able to earn, productive, profitable.' The sense here is that the warriors, having lost their shields, are no longer worth their wages. Wi. gives for tuillem the meaning 'Hinzufügen' (as well as 'Verdienen, Lohn'): Stokes' Ir. T. iv, glossary, has tuillmech 'bountiful,' and in Mart. Oeng. gloss. translates tuillem by 'enhancement, addition.' Meyer, Tec. Corm. gloss. has tuillmech 'adding, increasing.' I think these meanings belong rather to tuilled, and its derivative tuilltech (Metr. Ds. i. 6, 17). In Fél. Oeng. Prol. 55, I would translate ar firthuillem buide 'in reward for fair earning of thanks,' and in Tec. Corm., p. 30, 51, tuillmecha augrai 'fit to earn (nothing but) strife.'

SLIGE DALA.

As to this and the other roads enumerated in lines 41-8, see O'Donovan, Introd. to L. na gCeart lviii. According to him Slige Dâla was the great south-western road of Ireland, which extended from the south-western side of Tara in the direction of Ossory. Slige Assail was a western road extending from the hill of Tara in the direction of Loch Uair (Lough Owel) near Mullingar. Slige Midluachra was the northern road frequently mentioned in Tain B6 Cualnge. Slige Cualann extended from Tara in the direction of Dublin and Bray. Slige Mor was the great western road, the lie of which is defined by the Escir Riada, a line of gravel hills extending from Dublin to Medraige, near Galway. See also FM 123.

The prose version edited by Stokes refers to Airne Fingein; and the particulars it gives about the roads are taken from that authority; see the text in Anecd. ii. 4. Some of these are details omitted from the poem and from the prose version in LL (ed. in Silv. Gad. ii. 477).

- 4. mandir can hardly be referred to mandar 'dissolution,' which belongs either to the o-decl. or u-decl., see O'Dav. 1255: cf. cen mannur LL 163 a 5, BB 53 a 45. It is probably mainder 'enclosure,' properly 'pen for sheep or cattle,' used metaphorically: cf. Three Shafts 75, 17, i mainnir mhiothaomaigh an domhain-se; 209, 14, i mainnir na mimhéine. crò in the same way means either 'a cattle-pen' or 'a ring of fighters.'
- Dalo. Lgives the nom. as Dalo here and in 13, the gen. as Dala in 2, 25, 43, 84. The other Mss. vary. In 17 (which is not in L) four Mss. have Dala, three Dalo.

- 16. maige is found as adj. in Cath Catharda, where it is applied to Pompey.
- 18. immchimm: on this word see Laws, Glossary. O'Dav. 1116 explains it by sarugh[ud]; but it is doubtful whether it could bear this sense unless defined by a dependent genitive. Here it probably means 'wandering, flight.'
- 19. Cid fóen a airm: perhaps 'though powerless are his weapons': the predicative adjective is sometimes indeclinable even in early Middle Irish; see Strachan, Mid. Ir. Declension, p. 18.
- 24. Ele was a district covering a large part of the modern Tipperary and King's County: it included Thurles, Roscrea, and Birr.
- 22. Is Cannán the same as Gannán who was slain by Sengarmain a caislib Gannain, Rev. Celt. xv. 447?
  - 28. icon russ: i.e. at Ross Cré, now Roscrea in King's Co.
  - 31. Dún Cairin = Dunkerron near Roscrea.
  - cét costud perhaps 'of an hundred quarrels.'
- 35. munigud: Dinneen gives mumuaao, 'act of hoping or confiding in' = 0, Ir. munigin.
- 37. With tathum = est mihi, we ought to have buiden: so perhaps the true reading is tathaim 'I conjoin, compose.'
- 38. chuirib; is this d. pl. of cor 'a tune'? With choem-srethaib compare immas sois co srethaib, p. 288, 47. But perhaps these words denote the audience; and we should render 'for companies and gentle ranks (of listeners).'
- 58. co trên-chostud: It would perhaps be better to translate this 'by strict custom,' and to remove the semicolon, regarding line 59 as parenthetical.

gledrach occurs in Ir. T. iv as an epithet for water. Two mss read glegrach; ep. LL 133 b 30, rogab in mbith nglesach nglegrach, and LL 146 b 26 a ngol nglechrach ngary.

- 61. Aidche Samna: the Feast of Tara lasted from three days before Samain (Nov. 1) to three days after: others allow a longer period: see Joyce, Soc Hist, ii 436.
  - 62. nós: perhaps 'fame, story': cf. note on p. 270, 2.
- 67. L's reading herind doblais arose, no doubt, from a wrong expansion of the symbol .h. = úa.
- 71. serc-blaid: this compound seems to mean 'loved fame' rather than 'fame for love.' Cf. note on p. 194, 3.
  - Instead of L's sain the other copies have saig etc., which I do not understand.
- 73. balb, literally 'stammering,' is used to describe the noise of water: cf. Metr. Ds. ii. 62, 1 In Berba, bùan a bailbe.
- 75. ná furad: the rendering offered is not likely to be right. There is indeed a verb fiuraim 'I satiate' (see Ir. T. iii. 279) which is also written furaim (firaim? cf. Ir. T. ii. 2, 31 line 3), but 'na furad might mean 'in his stronghold': cf. forad Fótla, p. 194, 21. The Mss. all have na, not ná.
- 79. irdubad: the rendering 'obscurity' is a guess. O'R. has urdhubhu 'blackening.'

- 81. rempu: the prose version (R etc.) says: Slige Dalo, fosfuair Setna Secederg mac D. ria ndruidib hIrmuman oc saighidh Temra. In the same way Asal is said to have found Slige Asail rendibergachaib Mide, and line 65 of the poem shows that the dibergaig was pursuing Asal: therefore in our passage rempu means 'flying from them.'
  - 83. oo saigid oc, i.e. he was trying to join friends who would defend him.
- 89. Sab rainne: cf. FM 123 Slige Mór tra as iside Esccir Riada .i. sabh ronna Ereann a dó etir Chonn 7 Eoghan Mór.
  - 94. Crich Umaill, now the Owles, Co. Mayo (Onom.).

SINANN I.

This legend of the Shannon traces its origin to the Well of Segais in the Land of Promise. This is the fountain from which the Boyne also is supposed to spring: see p. 26, 9. The legends are very similar. References to the mystic hazels and the salmon of knowledge will be found in Rev. Celt. xv. 457: see also Ir. T. iii, 195 § 35.

- 2. lom-thúr: for túr 'searching' see O'Dav. 1585.
- 8. láech-luchair, tr. 'warlike-radiant': he is called Lodan Luchair-glan at p. 294, 32 and prose: so in 12 tr. 'daughter of Luchair-glan.'
- 14. The Land of Promise is called selb Chondlai in memory of Condla Coem's adventure: see Thurneysen, Sagen aus dem alten Irland, 73-76. At p. 292, 9 the well is called tipra Chondlai.
- 17. co mbara buaine: either 'with permanence of sorrow' (see Contrib. bare) or 'with perpetual motion' (Contrib. bara, 3).
- 25. Stokes Metr. Gl. p. 111 gives sopor 'a well,' but the word does not occur in the glossary to which he refers. He quotes, however, sopor somma .i. am topur con-immad colais, LL 187 a 5 (copied by O'Cl.). The rendering 'spray' is a guess.
- 27-8. As to the hazels of Crinmond see Cormac s.v. caill Crinmon. At p. 292, 13 supra they are called cuill Chrimaill. See also Contrib. s.v. crimann. In the present instance L reads Crinmond... rig-brond; R has Crinmond, Le S Crimaill, B Crimoind, MS3H Crimainn etc. The prose has i n-ben-frois defuitet forsin tiprait, co tuarcaib rig-broind chorcarda fuirri, which seems due to a misunder-standing of the verse.
  - 32. Translate: 'to everyone the sight is not unlovely': cf. p. 292, 5.
  - 38. secht srotha: cf. p. 292, 11-12.
- 39. the: see note on p. 58, 55. None of the Mss reads the, which would be a singularly inappropriate epithet.
- 44. For gléire 'the choice' of anything cf. Rev. Celt. xxiv, 69; p. 398, 25, supra; gleire maitheasa, i. iomad maitheasa, O'Cl.

glan-fuirid: see note on p. 224, 11.

46. sáel-find: in this compound find probably means 'hair,' but what is sáel?

- 47. co srethaib, i.e, strings of names or verses, such as would be used in an ineantation.
  - 48. gnim nois may mean 'famous practice': see note on p. 270, 2.
  - 53. sruthair for sruthar, to rhyme with Luchair.
  - 54. Read ben luchair ' the radiant woman.'
- 58. Read rotraiged. This verb is usually intransitive, but see Ir. T. iv. index, and ZCP i. 73.
  - 59. baidb must be for baidbe, an unusual licence.

SINANN II.

This poem is ascribed in Le to Cuán úa Locháin. It has recently been edited in the Miscellany presented to K. Meyer, 193.

- 14. dochuiret: see note on p. 234, 15.
- 15. For dolb (dalb) 'sorcery' see Cath Finntr. glossary.
- 23. immarlethat = immforlethat 'they spread about.'
- 35. da hindus seems to mean 'for her attempting': cf. Stories from Tain, glossary, indass,
  - 51. maras dise: literally, 'which remains from her.'
- 58. This etymology (more absurd than usual) refers to 'Morann's Collar,' as to which see Ir. T. iii. 188.
- 59. si in moirenn: I do not understand this: Dinneen gives muneann 'a weight, load (of hair, &c.)': a family, considered as a burden or charge.'

SLIAB N-ECHTGA I.

WE now pass from Munster into Connaught. Slieve Aughty is a range of hills extending westward from Lough Derg.

The metre of this poem is Rindaird: see introductory note to ds. Carn úi Neit, p. 216. As often happens, the complicated metrical system is responsible for various irregularities in grammar.

11. dédail: see note on p. 272, 30.

daig is a conjecture. I do not understand L's ddig, and the reading of the other MSS sacrifices alliteration.

- 13. a lenmus = asa noidendacht in the prose. O'R. has leanbar 'childishness.'
- 15. Sid Nenta is well known in Irish legend as the home of Midir: its terrestrial locality is uncertain.
  - 16. rogelta is required by the rhyme, so guide must be regarded as plural.
  - 20. Cf. LL 203 b z: rádid fír 7 fegaid.
  - 22. dodrim is not a good rhyme for the disyllabic dálim.

dag-dáin: the Mss show deg-dan, and in 24 samnair (L samnar). But in order to assonate with dind-móir in 23, the rhyme-words must have a long palatal diphthong in the second syllable. I have therefore written dag-dáin, although the regular plural would be dag-dáin; and sam-náir, which I take to be a compound similar to sam-there at p. 22, 279.

- 26. Alliteration is wanting : read perhaps co ndil-deb.
- 27. dia glan-fir: this conjecture gives a satisfactory assonance; the glanuir, &c., of the MSS do not, and are unintelligible to me. For the phrase compare Metr. Ds. ii 48, 39, maith dia fir in lá labraim 'good in sooth is the day,' &c.
- 29. filte, literally 'folded, twisted': O'R. has pillee 'treacherous.' The word occurs in LL 201 a 15, no teora fogla filte; Laws iv 290, 14 ata fodeiliugud filti for fini na foduer (tr. 'manifold'), BB 407 a 20 Is desin adbearar forainm fegar filte.
- 30. do serb-lus. The best MSS (LRB) read threb-lus, but this does not give alliteration. The phrase may mean 'for bitter increase of his greed'; but Mr. Purton suggests that do lus may be used like al-los 'on account of,' by the help of.'
  - 31. tuilte: gen, of tuilled used adjectivally.
  - 35. thoirthe for thoirthib, to rhyme with coibche.
  - 47. foirb dáer means, I take it, land cultivated by serfs.
- 49. airle ndualais: cf. p. 284, 100, a ndualus a ndind-senchas; LL 213 a 50, a haided can dualus ndil. The form dualgus is commoner: see glossaries to Laws, Pass. and Hom., Three Shafts, Ir. T. iv. dual is 'what is according to kith or kind' (Dinneen), so that airle dualais would be 'such counsel as might be expected from him.' But perhaps it simply means 'lawful counsel.'

aailbe may be 'affection' (so Contrib.) or 'deceitfulness.'

- 53. feis is the verbal noun 'sleeping with.'
- 54. ergnus: see Contrib. airgnas.
- As to fuithir, see Stokes' note, Rev. Celt. xv 458.
- 62. dúasu: cf. Ir. T. ii. 2. 250 note.
- 66. As Echtga is the name of a mountain, it is better to regard trebar as an adj. 'strong' (Airl. M. C. glossary) rather than a compound substantive treb-ar,
  - 67. trom-glas, literally 'a heavy lock.' Cf. p. 292, 3, ather cen snaidm.

SLIAB N-ECHTGA II.

Or this poem there are two copies, one in the Book of Leinster, the other in the Yellow Book of Lecan. In the latter manuscript it occurs in a part of the volume which has otherwise nothing to do with the Dindsenchas, and is introduced by a tale which explains the heading of the LL copy, Fland macLonain post mortem suam cecinit. An abstract of this story will be found in MC ii 99, 100, where lines 93-108 of the poem are translated. As O'Curry suggests, the real author of the poem is very likely Mac Liag († 1016), to whom MacLonain is supposed to recite it. Mac Liag's patron, Brian Boroime, is addressed by name in line 109.

The textual problems involved are very difficult. There are continual points of disagreement, more or less serious, between the two copies; the order of the stanzas is different; L has four lines, 67-70, which are not in Y, and Y has fourteen stanzas, 45-56, 81-120, 133-136, which do not occur in L. A further complication is introduced by the list of names entitled dindsencas Echtga in LL 170a; this is based on a text of lines 1-72 which must have been closely similar to (but not identical with) that of L. I have not found it possible to follow either L or Y throughout.

The introductory tale in Y (col. 916 = facs. 195) runs as follows:-

Tri hollamain Chondacht .i. mae Liace 7 mae Coisi 7 Fland mae Lonain .i. mae De 7 mac duine 7 mac deamain. 'There were three learned poets of Connaught, Mac Liae and Mac Coise and Fland mac Lonain, that is, the son of God, the son of Man, and the son of the Demon. Fland mac Lonain was called the son of the Demon, for his covetousness and surliness; for he never entered a house without causing loss therein. But Mac Liae was called the son of Man for the good cheer of his house and for the goodness of the man himself. Mac Coise again was called the son of God for the greatness of his charity, and he died on a pilgrimage.

Now, the name of Mac Liac's harper was Ilbrechtach (infra, 114); he had formerly been harper to Mac Lonain, and after Mac Lonain's death he served Mac Liac. Mac Liac went to visit Brian and converse with him, and Ilbrechtach went with him. He would often go from Loughrea southward across Slieve Aughty to Limerick, carrying with him twelve bottles and suitable victuals thereto. For there are twelve points of view in Slieve Aughty, and he used to drink a bottle at each of them. Once upon a time they went southwards and sat them down on a certain hill named Cend Crochain, and Mac Liac said: 'There be many hills and lakes and notable places, and 'twere great knowledge to know them all.' 'If Mac Lonain were here,' said Ilbrechtach, 'he would know the story of every spot we see.' Said Mac Liac, 'Let some one take this fellow and hang him!' Ilbrechtach begged a respite until morning, and it was granted to him; and he fasted all that night until the soul of Fland mac Lonain came to his aid. When they rose early next morning, they saw Mac Lonain approaching, and he said to them: 'Let the prisoner go, and I will tell you the story of every notable place here in Slieve Aughty.' So the harper was set free and escaped hanging at Mac Liac's hands, and then Mac Lonain uttered this lay.''

- 3-4. The dindsenchas in L 170 has Fond Maitae maie sn . . o diupla . ig usnic; unfortunately the MS is partly illegible at this point. Cf. Contrib. diupla shelter.
  - 6. L's reading of this line is preferable.
- 12. Echtach was apparently sister to Sinann, daughter of Lodan Luchairglan; see p. 286, 8.
- 15-16. The meaning of L's reading seems to be that the mountain was properly named after Echtach, not after Echtge. Y calls both women Echta, in 10, 11, and reads in 16 is ainm don t[s]liab sliab Echtgi.
- 17. Etarba occurs as a personal name at p. 88, 7. This line and the next two are partly illegible in L.
- 19-20. conart . . . darrib: metaphorical terms for soldiery. Cf. FM p. 2060 y, ina ndoiredhaibh dluithe doscaoilte.
- 27-28. Both lines are hypermetrical in L. Y reads dorochair ri Dolb mac nDail ruc a coscur sa comaid: and L 170 a 5 has isé dorochair fri Dolb mac Dail; but 1 do not understand comaid, whereas commáidem is the special term for exultation over the head of a fallen foe.
- 33. In this list of names I have followed Y where it differs from L, but it would need the researches of a local topographer to decide between the two authorities. The notes in L 170 agree with the L text of the poem, and omit the names in lines 45-56, which are only found in Y.

Clockar nGuill. In LL 50, 45 Goll Clockair is mentioned as castle-builder to [Oengus] son of Natfroech: (cf. MS Mat. 222, 578); this is perhaps the place from which he derived the name.

- 34. L 170 has here Dedruim nDicuill cona charraib 'the double hill of Dicoll with its peaks.' In Y, is is added by a corrector.
  - 35. For Druim Cairn L 198 (the poem) has Druim Criad, L 170 Druim Criaich.
- 36. Hogan identifies Druim Bainb with Drumbonniv in the barony of Upper Bunratty.
- 37. L 170 has Loch Grene i. Grian ingen Find nosfothraiced ann. It is still called Loch Graney (Onom.).
  - 41. Here L 170 agrees with Y in giving Loch Cipp.
  - 43. Y's reading is clearly wrong.
- 50. adamdorus seems corrupt, but possibly Damdorus may be the name of a place.

53-56. These lines have been inadvertently displaced in printing and should

57. Ath ind Escrai: Hogan suggests that this may be the same as Ath Escrach, now Ahascragh, a little to the N.W. of Ballinasloe.

For Ath nUidir L 170 has Ath Airthir.

59. L 170 agrees with Y in reading Ath in Meirage.

62. crech átha Callainn: I do not understand this: L 170 has Ath crichi Collain: Y's reading is not fully legible.

72. Caille . . . Lugdach lám-deirg: this name was given in honour of Lugaid Menn, also called Lugaid Lám-derg, son of Oengus Tírech: see introductory note to the poem on Mag Femin, p. 512.

73-76. This stanza seems to refer to some encounter between the men of Munster and the men of Connaught; but I have not been able to discover the historical clue, without which it is hardly possible to determine the correct reading or to explain the meaning with certainty.

73. I take rige to be the verbal noun of rigin, 'I extend': see glossaries to Laws and Triads.

74. Find is probably Find mac Cumaill, not Find mac Rossa, who belongs to Leinster.

83. caiscid is perhaps for caistid 'hearken!' inserted parenthetically: 'casket' is a mere guess.

- 90. tir Mane: the country of Ui Maine comprised parts of Roscommon, Galway, Clare, and King's County: see the map in O'Donovan's Hy Many: Mag Find is there marked between the Shannon and the Suck, S.W. of Lough Rec.
  - 91. i faichill: cf. Laws' Glossary, s.v. foichell.

bliadain mbuic: cf. secht mbliadna bocca biadmara toirthecha (quoted in Contrib.), where bocc means 'soft' in the Irish sense, i.e. 'moist' (and therefore fertile). Here it is a merely ornamental epithet.

96. This line is obscure and perhaps corrupt. The meaning may be that the wayfarer had enough shrewdness (twaichle) to like to hear poetry gratis. But the construction is very awkward, and cennaiges does not rhyme with roclos. Grés is applied to any sort of work of art.

- 98. O'Curry, MC ii 100, renders this line 'nor then did he show aught of loth'; but perhaps it rather means 'there befell him no misfortune therein,' i.e., 'he was in luck's way.' Coneys, followed by Dinneen, gives diombiaidh 'misfortune, defeat' (fem.); diombiaidh, 'indignation, displeasure,' (masc.).
- 99. This idiomatic use of do neoch is illustrated in Atkinson's glossary to Pass. and Hom. 817 a.
- 104. cach cethraman 'for every quarter of his own cow,' O'Curry; but it may mean 'for every quarter of land': cethrama is the quarter of a townland (baile biatach): see Joyce, Names of Places i 235.
  - 108. 'ca n-anáibniuss: it is also possible to divide can a n-áibniuss.
- 119. On this line there is a gloss in Y: .i. Cuil Forta a n-aib Fiachrach Aidne, is ann romarbad mac Coscraig: that is, 'Mac Coscraig was killed at Cul Forta in Ui Fiachrach of Aidne.' There was a Coscrach brother to Cennetig, father of Brian Boroime: Rawl. B 502, facs. p. 152 b 29.

121. Flann's murder is mentioned FM 891: Flann mac Londin, Virgit shit Scota, primh-file Gaoidheal uile, file as deach bdi i nErinn ina aimsir, do mharbhadh [la mharbhadh added by mistake] la macaibh Cuirbhuidhe (do Uibh Fothaith iatsen) hi nduine-taidhe hio Loch Dáchaoch i nDeisibh Mumhan. It is recorded a second time in almost the same words FM 918. The event is briefly noted in AU 895 (896). In Chron. Scot. 896, and Ann. Inisf. 896, ap. O'Reilly, Irish Writers lix, the murder is ascribed to the Ui Cuirrbuide. There is thus a preponderance of testimony, so far as the annalists are concerned, in favour of a date before the end of the ninth century; and O'Donovan assumes that the entry in 918 is an error. On the other hand, O'Curry, MC ii 102, quotes an elegy on Ednechán mac Dálaig, chief of Cinél Conaill, who died in 901 FM (905 AU), which is ascribed to Flann. This ascription, however, rests, so far as I know, on the sole authority of a seventeenth-century manuscript belonging to The O'Conor Don (see MC ii, xiii).

In view of the annalistic notices, Y's reading of 122 should be adopted, mac Cuirr Buidi, Cend-Gécán. There would then be two murderers named, Tade mac Faeláin and Cend-Gécán mac Cuirr Buidi. The death of Tade mac Faeláin, king of Ui Cennselaig, is mentioned in AU 921 (922). Cend Gécáin was a king of Cashel; the list in LL 150 b 15 equates him with Fedlimid, who is next in succession after Cormac mac Culennáin; but according to AU 900 he is identical with Finnguine who was deposed by Cormac in that year, Cend Gécáin being merely a nickname. The Glossary attributed to Cormac, s.v. Rer, quotes a poem in which Mac Lonáin and Cend Gécáin are referred to. O'Donovan's note ad loc. (Corm. Transl., p. 145) describes Mac Lonáin as Cend Gécáin's poet, but this seems to be a hasty inference. I should rather suppose the lines to be a citation from a satire made by Flann upon Finnguine under his nickname of Cend Gécáin: this may have been the provocation which led to the poet's murder.

123. The meaning seems to be that the murderers made themselves responsible for the sins of their victim when they cut him off 'unhouseled, disappointed, unaneled.'

136. Cf. Atlantis vii 130 : A ghiolla dar' ghiall gach céard.

ATH CLIATH MEDRAIGE.

The name Medraige survives in Maaree, a peninsula five miles south of Galway. Ath Cliath Medraige is identified with Clarinbridge, at the mouth of the little river which flows down past Athenry to Galway Bay.

The story is connected with Tain Bo Dartada (cf. line 19), but nothing is said in the extant versions of that tale as to the fight at the ford or the palisade.

3. fri fecht fátha: 'with subject-matter of battles': fátha is acc. pl. of fáth, which is used (like adbar) for the subject-matter of poetry. Or possibly fecht may be the verbal noun of figim 'weave,' and fecht fátha = 'weaving of poetry': cf. p. 338, 2 dia n-úagim sós senchassa.

 cliath is perhaps used in a metaphorical sense 'hattalions'; or else 'wicker shields': see note on p. 234, 10.

15. sernim means 'I draw up (battle, &c.)': (1) transitive: rosern in eath Ir. T. ii. 1. 53, 3; rosernsat sreith slait, p. 370, 51 supra; rosernsat sreith SnR 2143; rosernad ceeh sluag iar sreith SnR 1385; (2) intransitive: tancatar na Troidnaig asin chathraig 7 rosearnatar fon chath, 7 rocernsat Grécaig dun leith eli BB 438 b 14: also 'I draw out, extend': roserntar in mag TBC (Wi.) 5605; sernais .... conair, p. 250, 113-4 supra. Here the verb is intransitive.

16. Rather 'with their cantred of kernes,' i.e. 'with the kernes of their cantred.'

22. cen airdde: this refers to Eochu's cognomen Bec.

23. Cuillend is called Dún Cuillne in Táin Bó Dartada: it is in the barony of Clanwilliam in Co. Tipperary: see Ir. T. ii. 2. 185.

25. tairir: I have no other example of tairer (or taired).

MEDRAIGE.

LUGAID MAC CON was defeated by Eogan son of Ailill Olomm in the battle of Cenn Febrat, and took refuge in Scotland. He returned to Ireland supported by the King of Scotland and other allies from the country of the Saxons and Britons to fight the battle of Mag Mucrime: see the tale edited by Stokes in Rev. Celt. xiii 449. Our poem enumerates the names of some of those who fought with him on this occasion.

- 4. Spain is thought of as an island: tr. 'from a western island-Spain.'
- 15. buide: this may mean either 'flaming yellow' or 'yellow with heat': ef. mi buide as a name for August, Contrib.
  - 35, 43. cride (gen. sing.) is used adjectivally: cf. is mise Oisín cride, Contrib.
  - 40. Gaillem = Galway.
  - 57. Read isin chath 'after being wounded in the battle.'
- 64. Bairinn: this is presumably the district in North Clare still known as the Burren.

LOCH RIACH.

Now Lough Rea in Galway. The bursting forth of the lake is mentioned in Airne Fingein among the wonders which attended the birth of Conn Cétchathach (Anecd. ii. 5. z). The personages of the legend belong to the fir side. The text of the poem depends principally on L, as the other three copies belong to the least trustworthy Mss. of the Dindsenchas. M is here worthless, and the scribe of S has evidently taken great liberties with his original.

The reading is uncertain, but there is no doubt an allusion to the property of the lake described in lines 49 sq.

- 7. úar 'cruel': ef. lines 10, 26, and onchú úar BB 51 a 42; úar-thress, p. 148, 12 supra.
  - 22. idnach 'armed with weapons': ef. Metr. Gl. idna; LL 21 a 6, BB 36 b 53.
- 31. railbech 'huge as a mountain' from railbe. O'R. has poilbeach 'hilly': breac-railbheach, Life of Hugh Roe 282, 16; Breifne rádhach, railbheach Hardiman ii. 302, 9.
- 38. The reading of this line is doubtful. Nem is used of other mysterious dangers besides poison.
  - 40. anacht is pret. of angim 'I protect.'
  - 49. fail: read bail.
  - 61. Mag Fót, according to Hogan, is now Moyode townland, near Loughrea.

MAG N-AIDNI.

MAG N-AIDNI, according to O'Donovan, note on FM 3727, is a level district comprised in the diocese of Kilmacduagh, Co. Galway; see map of Dioceses in Onom. Aidne is mentioned in LL 12 c 9 = BB 39a 4 as one of the twenty-four serfs whom Clann Miled brought with them to Ireland. Ai from whom Mag n-Ai was called, Femen, Fea, and Fera from whom Mag Femin, Mag Fea, and Mag Fera are named, were also among the number.

S has an introductory stanza, not found in any other copy.

Aidhne fer in mhaighe moir . mac Allguba maic Etheoir é noadaidh tenidh treabh . re macsaibh mora Míledh.

This ms preserves only this and one more stanza; a folio is lost which contained the rest of the poem and the dindsenchas of Moenmag and part of Loch Dergdeire.

- co muriur mag = mag co muriur 'a populous plain': murer means 'a burden,' especially the burden of a family.
- 7. as no threbthus: compare the openings of the poem on Mag Luirg, p. 396, is edd dam im threbthus to, and of that on Inber n-Ailbine, Metr. Ds. ii. 26, 3 raidfed frib im threbthus to.
- It would be better to remove the colon after ria committeeht, and punctuate after Miled.
  - 12. graimm = greimm. See note on p. 90, 31.
- 15. sercaid. This seems to be an imperative used as a cheville. Dinneen gives peapeaim 'I love.'
- 17. amilingad: I can only guess at the meaning of this word; it may be a derivation of ding i. accobar.
- 21. co fonnaib: Dinneen has bonn 'stump of a tree': bonn and fonn are interchangeable forms.
- 23. fognid: the verb fogni was sometimes used in a passive sense 'is employed:' see Monastery of Tallaght, note on p. 127, 16. But it is also used = '1 make,' 'I construct,' as in fogni fulucht, LL 199 b 30: Archiv i. 272, 1 is a fidnemedaib fognitis filid a ngressa; translate then 'he used to make fire,' etc. As to te see note on p. 58, 55: here it may = 'hot.'

trom-thuirt: a compound of toirt (tort?) 'mass': the word is especially used of fires: cf. toirt teinneadh Oss. iii. 76, 2: tene 'na throm-thuirt (of the tropics) LL 135 a 33.

- 24. longphort and longes are properly applied to the invading forces of Clann Miled.
- 25. Snigtis tenid: in the same way the fingers of the saints often gave light or fire: see Vit. Set. Hib. i. exxxviii. Plummer regards this as evidence of solar origin; but it has to be remembered that lighting fires with the aid of a flint is a difficult feat which borders on the miraculous.
  - 31. slaind = sloind 'name' Pass. and Hom.: or imper. of sloindim.
- 35-36. The best Mss have dramm and chland, but dremm is fem. (in Middle Irish at all events; cf. p. 166, 33 supra: Cath Catharda 5673) and fil requires the accusative.
  - 38. Segais, i.e. the source of poetic lore: cp. p. 287, 21.

MOENMAG.

This plain lies east of Mag n-Aidne, round Loughrea: see Onom. Moen was son of Allguba and therefore brother to Aidne, but he is not mentioned among the twenty-four serfs of Clann Miled in LL 12  $\sigma$  7.

- 7. Labraid, which is R's reading, is a blunder: it should be labrad, which is the reading of BM: Le has ladrad (a mere error), HS<sub>3</sub> labr. The line is parenthetical: render: 'Moen, powerful hero—a splendid boast that fades not—began the lasting use of shaving.'
- 11. belaig is gen, dependent on berrtha, and seems here to mean the part left bare by the razor. The phrase implies that a fringe is left in front, which points to the Roman corona rather than the characteristic native tonsure; see Rhŷs, Celtic Britain, 3, p. 73; Bury, St. Patrick, 239 seq.
  - 12. maige also depends on berrtha, an instance of zeugma.
- 24. dáig bad bladaig: the singular verb is used with a plural subject because a verb following dáig is treated as relative: see Atkinson's statement of the practice in modern Irish, Proc. R.I.A. ser. iii, i. 430.

bith-naire is gen. 'in point of generosity.'

- 26. noco tennad: rather 'he was not mangled for want of science': Moen was a skilful barber. Cf. O'Dav. 1542 tenn .i. letrad. Stokes quotes LL 116 b 19 rosteind cona scin.
- 27. sellad. O'R has penllnö 'a sight, prospect,' verbal noun of sellaim.
  Forbarr was no doubt 'a sight' after his first shave.
  - 29. ciian-bla: either 'place of troops' or 'fame of troops.'
  - 30. tria is written for tri, as frequently.

- 31. baisech: cf. p. 426, 3 in blad bassech: perhaps from bass 'palm': if so, it may mean 'lamentable,' as the clapping of palms, bass-gaire, was an expression of grief.
  - 33. co mbilada for co mbiladaib, to rhyme with atchilala.
- samail is here a noun 'likeness (of name), etymology': cf. note on p. 274, 55.
  - 44. The rhyme shows that Moenaib sin should be written separately.

LOCH DERGDEIRC.

This story of the naming of Loch Derg is told in the beginning of Talland Etair; see Rev. Celt. viii. 48. The importunate poet is there called Athirne, whereas in our poem he is Ferchertne mac Athgló. Stokes, Rev. Celt. xxvi. 6, mentions three other poets named Ferchertne; but they all seem to be different from the son of Athgló. Another incident from Talland Etair is referred to in the first poem on Bend Etair, p. 106, 53, supra, and there also the poet is called Athirne.

In preparing my collation I accidentally overlooked the copy in S, which wants the first four stanzas, owing to the loss of a folio. Its readings are unimportant.

- 3. The meaning assigned to sam-dul is conjectural.
- 6. In Talland Etair Eochaid is called King of Descert Connacht; in Cath Ruis na Ríg, however, ed. Hogan, § 16-17, he is King of the Clanna Dedad (in Kerry). His 'Judgments' are mentioned in the Senchas Mór (Laws i. 18, 23).
- 15. cluine is perhaps to be regarded as a subjunctive-imperative after the model of cuire: see Thurn. Hdb, § 586.
- 19. giallaim: literally 'I lash': cf. fo chosmailius tairb dásachtaig da ngialland a gal II. 243 b 4: so BB 435 a 35, 477 a 10.
  - 20. I have not elsewhere found riagail in this sense.
  - 22. ocus maic; see note on p. 216, 7.
  - 25. Echach: so all the Mss.: it should be Echdach.
- 27. erenach. Cf. airenach in chatha, Ir. T. ii. 2. 16, 1; airenach in tige, Ir. T. iv. gloss.; i n-airenach ph\(\tilde{e}\)ine, Fel. Oeng. Prol. 118.
- 31. ddel dolaid. The black chafer is regarded by the Irish with the same superstitious horror as attaches in other countries to creatures equally inoffensive, the blind-worm, shrew-mouse, salamander, &c. See O'R. Ogol, 'a bug, beetle, chafer: a fierce animal.' Dinneen, Ogol, 'a beetle, &c., figuratively, a devil.' Hence the names Dubthach Dael-tengthach, Dubthach Dóel Ulad, Ir. T. iii. 399, where the compiler remarks is adhibath le cach nduine in bhéist dara comainm in diel d'faicsin. The word is used metaphorically of a warrior mac Ingoir, doel nar dingned, ds. of Cloenloch, 2 (Rennes MS 123 a).
- 32. In FM 1157 it is recorded that the head of Bochaid mac Luchta was found in that year at Findchora: 'it was larger than a great cauldron: the largest goose would pass through the hole of his eye and through the hole of the spinal marrow.'

O'Donovan ad loc. identifies Findehora with Corofin in Clare. The battle fought there is mentioned among famous encounters in Keating's preface (i. 80): see also Cath Ruis na Ríg, p. 58: Mag Rath, p. 210.

35-6. Or because, as I have heard, there was none in Erin who would say him nay.'

As to gléire see note on p. 288, 44.

- 39. brath-gnó. The rendering offered supposes gnó to be the modern 5n6 'business.' But there is evidence for gnó 'mockery,' see O'Dav. 1028 and Metr. Gloss.; Dinneen has o'don-5n6 'for a joke': so perhaps we should translate 'traitorous mockery.'
- 42. dognas cf. dognas, 'ill-breeding.' Triads: sognais 'sociable,' Tec. Corm-doréir I have not seen elsewhere.
- 51. The meaning of gió is uncertain. Stokes (Celt. Decl. 21) renders it by 'ball.' It may be the first element in gló-béim, Cath Ruis na Ríg 114; gló-lethar, Cath Catharda, glo-snáthe 'model,' Ir. T. iii² gloss.: Pass. and Hom.: (see KZ xxx. 557).
- 56. gress with a short vowel means (1) protection, (2) insult, injury, attack. The latter sense is required in such phrases as digal greisse cenitiil, which occurs five times in the Laws: ef. locud mo greisi cenil, O'Dav. 581 (where Stokes writes gréise); digaltach greisse, Mag Rath 310, 18. So here dil gresse may mean 'satisfaction for insult': Ferchertne may have had some grudge against Eochaid. Translate then 'thy one eye of a pair is satisfaction for my wrong.'
  - 58. reim rodessil literally 'road of a right-hand turn.'
- 62. For glan-étrocht L has grdb nétrocht, but this is probably a mere scribal error.
  - 63. fri sét síd ' with peace of ways,'
  - 69. rigi may perhaps be gen. of rige 'stretching.'
- 71. Is dúise an abstract noun = dúis 'treasure' ? or should we read fri dúise dil 'for payment of treasure,' and in 72 a glanfir 'in pure truth.'
- 80. I suppose this line means that it was dangerous for an imprudent intruder to visit the spring: compare the legend of Boand, pp. 28-30, lines 41-64. Boand approached the magic well imprudently, co n-étéachli, and lost her eye: Eochaid was not imprudent, nirb étéachail (74) and regained his sight. As to the virtues of such fountains see Plummer, Vit. Sct. Hib. i. exlviii, sq.
- 84. rogerg is an imperfect rhyme for chró-derg. O'Clery has an entry which is evidently founded on this passage: gearg i. garg. d'fuil riogh roghearg i. rogharg. This, like many of his other glosses founded on the Dindsenchas, is a misunderstanding (see Hermathena, 1907, p. 469). ríg is singular, and rogerg cannot agree with it. gerg is the name of a bird, perhaps the grouse: cf. Duanaire Finn, 84 y ní chodail in gerg: it is mentioned in a poem Silv. Gad. i 365 z, along with woodcocks and wild geese. Here it is applied metaphorically to a king.
- 85. na fert féile 'of the miracles of generosity': in O.Ir. firt is of the u-deel.
  g. pl ferte, Wb. 12 b 15.
  - 87. Read fo riin 'mysteriously,' like fo chleith, &c.

raga = roga: roimse 'abundance': cf. p. 248, 9 co romsib, p. 408, 21 dia roimsib retha: Bruden Da Derga § 100 a, and O'Dav. 1399, roimse robortae; Triads, 202, roimse inna flaith.

89. Assal seems to be a proper name: Assal and Druim n-Assail are in Co-Limerick according to Hogan, Onom.

93. togairm tocha: ef. ba tairm tacha, p. 458, 108: tocha (toiche), from toich

' proper, suitable, acceptable.'

- 97. logaim 'I forgive,' means also 'I forget': cf. ds. of Mag Lena 7 (Rennes Ms. 122 d) dith luath Lina cen logud: Metr. Ds. ii. 58. 3 nír dáig luaige co logud. I can find no satisfactory evidence for Wi.'s logaim (1) 'I rot.'
  - 100. fatha = fotha 'subject-matter.'
- 101-4. This stanza is full of difficulties. gress (quantity uncertain) seems to mean sometimes 'continuance' or 'urgeney' in prayer: see Fél. Oeng. Feb. 11 maith leis gress dia garmaim, Epil. 226 rommain (ronnain) gress a nguide. Stokes marks the vowel long in Mart. Oeng., but there is no mark of length in either passage in the three texts printed in his original edition. In any case I doubt whether gress alone could mean 'supplication,' and the adj. glé-maith points rather to the meaning 'poetic composition.' Translate, then, 'For the King who suffered (i.e. Christ) let not my clear noble poem be curtailed '(i.e. let me not end without a pious reflection). Consequently the rendering of mo flaith in 103 must be altered: does it mean 'my Prince' = Christ, as distinguished from the 'King of the Winds' = God the Father? In 104 na lamaig is a crux: no manuscript has a mark of length on either word; but ná lámaig seems to be intended: this would be for ná lámaigi (cf. nolessaig Pass. and Hom. Gloss.); but the meaning of the line remains a puzzle. lámaigim means 'I handle, treat.' Three Shafts, Gloss: cf. BB 237 a 25, 430 b 44.

RATH CRUACHAN.

This is the legend of Ratheroghan, the famous home of Aiiill and Medb. A group of raths is still to be seen by the roadside about three miles west of Tulsk, Co. Roscommon. The prose follows closely the Egerton version of Tochmarc Etaine, §§ 15-16, Ir.T. i. 128.

- 2. dumu cach dug-nuachair: so Temair Luachra is called adba niad is nuachair of the p. 236, 10.
- 3. This means, I suppose, that laws were made at the gatherings held at Rath Cruachan as they were at Carmun and at Tara.
- i.e. all Erin was bound to pay to the kings of Connacht dues of various kinds, such as are enumerated in Leabhar na gCeart.
- 10. sil såer-Briain: most kings of Connaught traced their descent either to Brian, eldest son of Eochaid Muigmedon, or to his brother Fiachra.

- 13-16. This is an elaborate way of saying 'if we stay to enumerate all the glories of Ratheroghan, we shall never get to our story.' nos cech nirt: so LBr. 124 b 6, cu nos nirt.
- 15. chaite: perhaps from catut (cotut) 'hard': cf. coitte O'Dav. 1004; co morchaitte, p. 454, 50, supra.
  - 16. ac' nach = ica nárb': literally 'which had not the hostility of a few.'
- 17. snaitte 'polished' 'smooth hewn': cf. lecht do chlochaibh snaitte FM iii. 312, 10; Isaiah ix. 10; Dinneen, pnoifice.
- 19. tescul: this is O'R.'s teapfal, tapfal 'a storm, a great wave': tessgal Rev. Celt. xiv. 448: cf. p. 458, 104; 460, 3, supra.
- 23. rochównaig: O'R. has caoinaitim 'I complete' Coneys, caoinait 'cherish, protect, save, defend, keep, perfect.' This line is quoted by O'Cl. s.v.
- 24. Cf. Tochm. Et. § 15 (Ir. T. i. 128). Ech-thress (according to Stokes, Rev. Celt. ix. 473 n.) means a 'horse-fight,' not 'horse-race.'
  - 26. cridfer: this is the reading of most Mss: cf. Contrib. cridserc.
  - 27. d'fuatuch, ef. Tochm. Et. 15, fuaitgid leiss hi.
- 29. Ba dothfer in fer: cf. Tochm. Et. 15, ba doithfir in dealb i tanic Mider chuccu. O'Cl. has doithir i. doidhealbh. ba doithir an fear i. ba doidhealbhdha.
- 35. co síd Sinche: cf. T. Et. 16 dochúatar iar tain co sith Sínighe Crúachan . . . ocus robatar co cenn nómidi ann (cf. 37).
  - 39. greiss here 'attack, raid.'
  - 41-52. This dialogue follows closely T. Et. 15.
- 66. The rendering offered is very doubtful. sreth is used of soldiers' quarters: it is Spenser's 'shrah': as to the use of for, cf. beith for usein ocus bargin.
- 68. mor-chorach may mean 'great at throwing the spear'; of. Cormac corach, p. 338, 15. Most of the Mss have mor-glondaig, etc., which is translated.
  - 70. The meaning given for rúi is a mere guess.
- Cf. Tochm. Et. 19, rotirmaiss écaine ocus mor olce ocus immiuth duit bith i n-ingnaiss do mná.
  - 73-4. Cf. p. 194, 21-2.
- 78. I do not understand cen dil séna: it seems to be connected with the legal phrase cen dil cen séna, for dil ocus séna, of uncertain meaning: see Laws, Glossary, dil (2).
- 81. Is tossach. The tale Tochmare Etáine as we possess it is fragmentary; the later fortunes of Etain and the ultimate fate of Eochu Airem are known only by brief allusions.
- 87. If scem is right, it gives a rhyme to sel: the word means 'yelp, snarl,' Ir. T. iv, and might possibly here mean 'backbiting, reproach'; but probably we should read fo scéim glé 'in bright beauty.'

CARN FRAICH.

Now called Carnfree; it is in the townland of Carns, in the barony and county of Roscommon, 3 miles S.E. of Rath Croghan: see O'Donovan's note in FM iii, 221.

8. This line is corrupt: it wants a syllable.

15. co sen: cf. Wb 4 b 29 hó siun co núis.

22. Conall Cernach spent his last days at Rath Cruachan: see the tale Goire Conaill ZCP 1, 102.

lébend is used of the raised terraces by which a rath built on a large scale (prim-dún) is approached: see LBr. 109a 58, 60 (quoted in Aisl. M.C. glossary).

25. I do not understand mear, and suggest mur, which is often used metaphorically: see glossary to Fél. Oeng.

28. Airer Umaill, now the Owles in Mayo, a territory including the baronies of Borrishoole and Murrisk, Hy Fiach. 181, 303.

33. The war between Conn and Eogan Taidlech (also called Mog Núadat) is the subject of Cath Maige Léna: cf. Keating ii 263.

44. As cruisech is fem., it is perhaps gen. pl., and dedlaid is a nomen agentis, crand-scem cannot be a compound of scem 'scream,' which has a short vowel: read fri crand-sceim, and translate the line 'divider of lances, with glory of spears.'

56. seolad should belong to the u-decl., but even in O.-Ir. the o-decl. and u-decl. are confused: Thurn. Hbd. § 308. Dinneen has peolad 'act of driving, leading (as cattle).'

- 62. oilmeadaig. O'R. has oillmead 'a balance,' but 'even-balanced' is a very inappropriate epithet for an impetuous fighter. Perhaps it is for oil-medaig 'great at drinking mead' from mid g.s. meda. In line 102 the same word is applied to a place, meaning, perhaps, 'abounding in mead.' In the Laws oilmedach is a measure of capacity, see Glossary s.v. ól.
- 64. trén-seólta: Dinneen gives 'educated, instructed' among the meanings of peolog. Perhaps 'of the strong expedition.'

66. na n-óic-feraib 'in their young manhood.'

71. tegar år: cf. Silv. Gad. i. 37, 1 teagar år forra 'carnage is inflicted on them,' O'Grady. The prose legend says that the Munstermen were finally defeated and deprived of their booty.

75. The reading suggested would mean that the victory had cold comfort, having lost their best man.

- 87. nar cruaid: this means that he was as ready to give away cattle as to-
  - 88. sludig: nom. for acc., metri gratia.
- 89. This legend belongs to Fraech mac Fidaig (or Idaid), whose death is recounted in Táin Bố Cúalnge. Medb set him on to fight Cuchulainn.

- 92. dominaig: cf. Three Shafts mionuizim 'I pulverize.' Ir. T. iv 1816 domhinaigh in eath ar Lir (where O'Grady renders 'dwindled'): LL 386 b 51 rominaig gach eath; TBC (Wi.) 5138 raminaig beirn . . isin chath.
- 102. No Cath Omna is mentioned in the Tain; but just before the fight with Fraech Cuchulainn set up an oak-trunk (omnai) with an ogam thereon, forbidding anyone to pass it unless he came alone. And just after the fight is over there is added: lingid Fergus darsin omnai inna charput. So that the duel may have been known as Cath Omnai. Read, then, on p. 363 'Fight of the Oak.'
  - 104. ar mi-chéill 'out of mere mischief.'
- 108. If mi-emain is right, emain must mean 'a pair of combatants.' But this seems unlikely. midemain would be a slight change, but would not give a satisfactory meaning; it is used in FM v 1766, 21; 1864, 4 for 'reconnoitring, examining.'
  - 111. leagaid for léicit.
- 113-120. This amplifies a sentence in the Tain (LU 63 b 26) Conaccatar banchuri in inaraib úanib for colaind Fráich maic Idaid. Focessat úadib issa síd).
- 123. ara sith, etc: rather 'the loss of the warrior fell upon his Sid' (for a sid).

ATH LUAIN.

The story of the naming of Athlone is told in the final section of Tain Bo Cualnge (LL recension): see Windisch's edition, p. 905.

1-2. A poem in Rawl. B. 502, p. 165 a 36 begins with almost the same lines:

A fir theit i mag Medba . do soéla bat south-mebra.

Compare also the opening of the poem on Mag n-Ai, p. 380.

- 2. lán-mebra, adjectival genitive of lán-mebuir.
- 3. im thuaim thaiss (sic leg.): cf. note on p. 330, 7.

taiss means literally 'moist' as at p. 456, 81; hence 'weak, feeble,' p. 260, 15. Here perhaps the meaning is 'in my moist (and therefore fertile) homestead.' It is also possible that the phrase may mean 'concerning the moist demesne,' viz. Athlone.

- 5. asa lecht: literally 'whose grave it is.'
- 7. maetnud: the readings maitnud, maothtnud, and the rhyme with caemchilid point to taking this as a compound, maeth-tnuth: tnuth, which usually means 'envy'or 'jealousy,' may be used of other strong feelings, anger, longing, hope.
  - 13. don-úaig = donn-úaig, so written to rhyme with roruaid.
- 15. brisc. This epithet describes the lime-stone formation characteristic of the Burren of Clare and the Arran Islands.
  - 19. techta: I take this to be gen. of techtad: cf. note on p. 232, 75.
- 20. ellaig is pl. of ellach 'union, connection.' The three women were honourable wedded wives, and as such had their men in due subjection.

- 21. nirb ingácth: Ailill was the model of complaisant husbands.
- As to Macha Mong-ruad and her treatment of Cimbaeth, and the building of Emain Macha, see FM A.M. 4532.
  - 23. Literally 'Art without spear-craft under blame.'
- 29-32. Medb Leth-derg, daughter of Conan of Cualu, was wife first of Cuchorb, grandson of Conchobar Abratrad: he was killed by Fedlimid Rechtmar, who thereupon took Medb to wife: LL 44 b 42-46. Her poetical lament over Cuchorb is edited by O'Curry MS Mat. 480, from LL 44 b. We are told in the same locus that she poisoned Lugaid Laigse at Temair (LL 44 b 48): this is no doubt the incident referred to in our poem. The same authority goes on to say that she split up the Laigsi and Fothairt into seven divisions, to prevent their uniting and to weaken their resistance to the king of Leinster. A Kilbride ms quoted in Silv. Gad. ii. 486 (xv. ii.) makes her wife of Art, the son of Connand grandson of Fedlimid Rechtmar.
  - 27. selaib: properly 'spells of work.'
- 31. thairniam: is this for tairnem 'lowering' (tairndim), so written to thyme with Gailian?
- 34. Ednech is according to Hogan the present Inagh in Co. Clare, nine miles west of Ennis.
- 35. The reading is uncertain: ní ria would give a rhyme to lia, but would require ben in 36.

éc airbe 'fence of the dead' = 'the tomb.'

- 39. rostub : cf. rothub ina agaid 'threw in his teeth,' Ir. T. iv.: tuba, Wi.
- 41. Cf. LL 200 b 45 acht each fria charus ó thaig (cách a cúdus, other mss).
- 44. Nothing is heard of Conall Cernach's wife in any version of the Tain, so far as I know: perhaps Conall is here confounded with Celtchar, whose wife Findmor was carried off by Medb from Dun Sobairche; TBC (Eriu) 1351. The LL version (Wi. 2048) says Medb killed her.
- 51. What is the construction of this line? slat is fem. (Pass. and Hom.), so slait must be dat, or acc. sreith must also be dat, or acc. Should we read sreth slait, making sreth gen. pl. after slait? This is not easy to understand. Or sreth-slait? The metre is against this. Or finally is sreith an instrumental dative?
- 53. 'mon bress: this refers to Cuchulainn, who kept the army of Ailill and Medb in check (roscacht) for three months. Cf. TBC (Wi.) 2472 on hian resamain sainriuth (Nov. 1) cossin cétáin iar n-imbulc (Feb. 1) ní rachotail Cúchulaind. So TBC 2900.
- 55. gris is generally used of anything red-hot: here of the searing caused by fetters. gemlig from gemel: cf. SnR 5591 co cath gér geimlech.
  - 60. buille 'blow, disaster.'

briachda literally 'having wide banks': hence 'wide-spread, spacious,' &c.; cf. 99 and p. 98, 26.

- 65, unibre is an adjectival genitive.
- 67. sadba = soadba, ef. LL 187 c 12; FM i 524, 12.

- 68. I have found tial only in Laws i 140, 22, where it is said to mean 'the upper stone of a mill.'
- 73. Hogan's third entry under Tarbga refers to our passage, but he is mistaken in supposing that Tarbga was in Ulster. It was a hill in MagnAi (Roscommon): see Windisch TBC, p. 898, note 7, co comarnic fri Findbeannach hi Tarbga hi Maig Aii. It must have been near Rath Croghan, where the people of Connacht gathered to see the fight: TBC, p. 891.
  - 74. co mbeó-búaid: perhaps 'of living excellence.'
  - 81. co húain: see note on p. 266, 3.
- 82. lestar: cf. léech-lestar 'a warrior ship,' Aisl. Maic C. leaptup 'a small boat,' Dinneen.
- 88. maigne: cf. in muice maigne, p. 408, 11: no doubt cognate to maignech, an epithet of horses, Wi.

I should be inclined to read Muinchind rather than Mucefind or Muccind, if it were better supported: there is a river Muinchind (now Munhin) in Erris, Onom.

- 89. Dún Cromm: Stokes reads Dun Croin in the prose, but R has (as I read the photograph) Dun Crom in the prose, Dún Croin in the verse; the latter is evidently a mere scribal error.
- 91. chóel-druimm: 'the small of the back, the shine,' cf. Contrib. s.v. cóil (qu. cóil-druimm, cáel-droma).
- 93. ria or: Cormac derives biror from bir [.i.] tipra no sruth, and hor.i. mong; but this may be an etymologising coinage.
  - 92. Render 'to noble Drong Assail Abrat.'
- 98. If emain can be used in the sense of 'a pair of fighters,' 'a match' (see note on p. 362, 108), then borb-emna may be an adjectival genitive; but is emain ever fem.?
  - 99. briachda 'spreading': see note on 60.
  - 100. i rengaib: the meaning suggested is a mere guess.

TURLOCH SILINDE.

This lake is identified by Stokes with Lough Sheelin, at the meeting-point of the counties of Cavan, Westmeath, Meath, and Longford. But it is a long way to the east of the places treated of in this part of the Dindsenchas. Besides, the prose account implies that the name Turloch Silinde was superseded by another name, given by the intruder Blonac. Now one manuscript, S (Stowe, D ii. 2), has a prose account of Loch mBlonac (sic) which is not included in Stokes' edition.

Loch mBlonac, cid diatá? ninsa. Blonac ingen Tái roaitreb ann, 7 ba banbriugaid amra isidhe; conidh a n-inadh lias a gamhna rofásastair in loch. Silend ingen Machair meic Duthain meic Rúin is sí robái isinn inadh sin ria mBlonaic, 7 ba hole re Silind [a] gabail di fuirri co rimgaib hi 7 co forgaib (read fargaib) an tir lé co Cuil Silinde a Muigh 'Ai, conid naidhe raiter loch Silinde fri loch Cairrgin 7 Cúil Silinde frisinn inadh atá. "Loch Blonac, whence its name? not hard to say. Blonac daughter of Tai dwelt there, and she was a famous landowner; and it was on the site of her calf-pen that the lake spread forth. Silend daughter of Machar son of Duthain son of Run had lived on that spot before Blonac came, and she was vexed at Blonac's taking it from her. So she shunned her and left the land to her [and went] to Cuil Silinde in Mag Ai. So Loch Cairrgin is called Loch Silinde from her, and the spot where she abides is called Cúil Silinde." It seems then that Turloch Silinde = Loch Blonac, and the Loch Silinde (Silend) mentioned in the prose account = Loch Cairgin. This is supported by two glosses in LU 56 a and b, printed in Archiv i. 21: Cuil Sibrinne (= Cul Silinne in LL) i. Loch Carcin 7 o Silind ingin Madchair roainmniged; and below: hi Cúil Sibrinne i. áit hi fil Loch Carrein indiu. According to Hogan Loch Cairgin is near Tulsk in Roscommon, south of Elphin. Loch mBlonac is mentioned BB 102 a 35, and seems to be near Corcaraige Feda Manach. Fid Manach was between Dunmore and Ballymoe to the north-east of Tuam (Onom.).

9-16. The tenses are future in L, historic in all other Mss.

12. tur: Wi. has tur 'a journey,' on O'Donovan's authority, and this might be the meaning here and in 20, but in 16 it gives no sense. I take the word to be tur 'dry,' here 'a dry place.' Cf. TBC ('Eriu) 1344 Badb ina thur.

12-16. Translate: "Silend shall search east and west over every mountain till she reach her outlet: Silend, that shall not be a summer stream, visits a dwelling whose threshold shall never be dry." Here Silend seems to be the name of a river: bun means 'a river-mouth': there probably was a place called Bun Silinde.

samda (which rhymes with adba) is most likely derived from sam 'summer.' tetha: cf. doeth TBC ('Eriu) 1126, adethim Contrib: it is a future-present.

bu in 15 and 16 is future.

Lines 15, 19, and also, no doubt, 3 are octosyllabic, with disyllabic endrhymes (Tuï, crúï, &c.). So at p. 380, lines 15, 17, 21, 23.

18. fo dócr-ban dul: cf. Ml 101 c 6-7 fun dul-so 'according to this way (of

18. fo doer-ban aut: cf. Mi 101 c 6-7 Jun dut-so 'according to this way (of interpreting)'; Wb 10 b 20 fon dut toisech 'according to the first way (of interpreting).'

19. cia rolensat. This means that the lakes faithfully preserved the names of the women: lenim is constantly used of a name clinging to a place. Literally though the waters of the heroic women held fast [to them].'

20. Literally, 'it was the toil of one doomed, by reason of her dry place.'

FIND-LOCH CERA.

This is Lough Carra near Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo. The story of the forty days spent by Patrick on the top of Cruachan Aigli, and of his angelic visitors, is told in V. Trip. i. 114. Ciid iarum Patraic combo fliuch a agaid 7 a chassal ara beloib... Luid in t-angel iarum do chomdidnad Patraic 7 glanais in casail 7 dobert énlaithi gela immon Cruachán 7 nocantais ceula bindi dó. Doberau-sa a lin ucut, ol in t-angel, de anmannaib a péin. Cf. V. Trip. ii. 476.

- 1. co huain iar n-an. This is a crux. There is no variety among the mss except that Le reads co fuain and M co huan. O'R. gives 'year' among the meanings assigned for an, and it may very well be a loan from annus; but I have no other instance. As to co huain see note on p. 266, 3. I assume that the words are to be construed after mar fuair, and signify literally 'to a term after a year,' meaning 'an indefinite period.'
  - 7. sáethar is often used of the labour of prayer: qui orat laborat.
  - 8. For 'protecting' substitute 'to the protector of.'
- 12. To mark the rhyme one should write cain-apad: this is the reading of M: caemapad LcS; caimabad H; cainabbad LB; cainabaid R. apad is usually a legal term 'notice, warning.'

One might read clóir cháin-apad and translate 'they sang—the gentle abbot's choir.' But (1) the sg. nom. clóir (for cliar) after the plural verb is awkward; (2) no ms has cháin- (or chóen-) with the aspirate; (3) a cognate accusative is needed after nochantis.

19. nach té: literally, 'which was not warm.'

MAG N-ÁI.

As to the exact extent of Mag n. 'Ai, which occupies a large part of Roseemmon, see O'Donovan's notes, FM i p. 301, iii p. 87.

'Ai was brother to Aidne mae Allguba; see introductory note to ds. of Mag Aidne, p. 330. A different derivation of the name is given in ds. of Loch Néill, p. 404, 17.

- 2. rosúa for rosúad, to make a rhyme.
- 8. Read with the Mss roloise and translate 'he burnt (the trees) root and top.'
- 10. tóir: see SnR glossary.
- 15. saidbre: perhaps 'more numerous'; cf. ZCP vi 264, 8 co ndéraib saidbrib 'copious.'
  - 22. If dichil is for dichill (dichell 'neglect'), it is not a good rhyme to richid.

MAG MUCRIME.

This is a plain lying west of Athenry.

The story is told rather more fully in Cath Maige Mucrime: ed. Stokes, Rev. Celt. xiii 448.

- 5. réid amréid ' undulating.'
- 13. I can make nothing of the 'ms readings recrenta, redechta, redlechta: I suggest noclechta 'it was frequented,' impf. pass. of clechtaim 'I practise'; cf. p. 54, 20 'san chnoc-sa rechleachtastair 'she was went to dwell.'

The Cave of Cruachu is mentioned in Echtra Nerai, Rev. Celt. x 216. It is a small fissure in the limestone formation near Ratherogham.

- 19. bette is past subj. pass, of the substantive verb.
- 20. Literally 'each would not find them of the like number [as the rest]."
- 23. Over meiss there is in L the gloss i. donus, and over cheiss is written i. do-blath. O'Cl. quotes this line s.v. meis, and explains i. nach biodh achd ole 7 ceasacht.
  - 26. gainmig seems to be dat. of gainmech in the sense 'sandy ground.'
- 32. For enach 'marsh' see Ir. T. iv; Fél. Oeng.; and p. 428, 43. But perhaps ar enach is written metri gratia for ar enech 'face to face.' S has ar eneach.
  - 35. fri ethad n-áig: is ethad verbal noun of ethaim 'I go'?
  - 37. fiata is related to fiad as grata to grad.
  - 39. ní sear 'it severs not.'

DUMA SELGA.

This place is now 'a green most to the east of Carnfree' (Carn Fraich) in Mag 'Ai: FM iii 221, note. These bewitched swine must surely be somehow connected with the 'enchanted herd' of the last poem. They have already appeared in the ds. of Belach Conglais: see the note on p. 506.

- 2. The 'Ui Muiredaig or Sil Muiredaig were one of the chief tribes of Connaught, including several great families such as 'the O'Conors, MacDermots, Geraghtys, &c., of Roscommon' (Onom. Sil Muireadaigh). They descended from Muiredach Muillethan, who died in 700 (Hy Many, 73). O'Donovan, Hy Many 138 note, quotes a passage from the Annals of Clonmacnois describing how in the fourteenth century a MacDermot 'was invested King of Connaught by the twelve chieftains of Silemorrie (Sil Muredaig), twelve coworbs and other spirituals,' at Carn Fraich.
  - 3. iar ndula 'after (their) departure ' = dia n-éis.
  - 9. fo dreich = 'sub specie.'
  - 17. Literally 'I do not make a marvel of anything.'
  - 26. dubadach: I have not met this word elsewhere.
- R and Lc treat chnô-chaille as a compound; it would be more natural to read chnô caille.
- 41. As to Buichet the 'hospitaller of Leinster,' as he is called in the prose, see Esnada Tige Buchat, ed. Stokes, Rev. Celt. xxv 18.
  - 55. gráin is used of a spear-point, Ir. T. iv: shields are called scenbda 'spiky,'
  - . 274, 61. Or co ngráin may mean 'horrible,' 'dreadful,'
    - 66. anfolaid: the regular plural of anfola is anfolta.
- 70. Tarbga: cf. note on p. 372, 73; but here it seems to be the name of a river.
  - 72. Inber Umaill: probably one of the arms of Clew Bay.
- 74. Glascharn: there is a townland so named, north-west of Mullingar (Onom.). But in ds. of Loch Néill, p. 404, 11, it appears that the swine took refuge with Drebriu in Sid Collomrach in Meath.

- 77. dus: perhaps = doss 'a bush,' which is used metaphorically of a champion or protector; cf. Ir. T. ii. 1. 39, 2, doss a nditen; BB 405 a 19, in dun didna degrach dos.
- 83. The rendering offered can hardly be right: perhaps the meaning is 'Medbwas by good luck on M.M.'
- 94. Ess Rúaid, at Ballyshannon, in Donegal; Uisnech, in Westmeath; Inis Bé-Finde (Inisboffin), an island off Renvyle Point in Connemara.
- 99. muce is nom.; translate therefore 'the amount (number) that each swine killed was loss enough for the men of Erin.'
  - 106. Céis Choraind = Keshcorran in Sligo; cf. p. 438.
- 107. Mag Trega is a plain in Co. Longford which includes Newtownforbes (Onom.).
- 108. Cúallacht: a singular form of Cúallachta, the name of O'Dubgin's lands in Co. Clare (Onom.).
- 109. Mag Find is a plain lying south-west of Lough Ree; see map to Hy Many.
- 110. mortha dind: perhaps 'strongholds magnify it,' if the termination -that is indeed used for 3 pl. + affix. pron., as Meyer assumes, ZCP vi 247 (erethat gáith).

MAG LUIRG.

The full name is Mag Luirg in Dagda: "it was the name of the plains of Boyle that is, of the level part of the present barony of Boyle (in Roscommon) lying south of the river Boyle," Hy Fiach. 77 note. The legend is taken from Aided Ailella 7 Conaill Cernuig, ed. Meyer, ZCP i. 102.

- 3. The precise meaning of cuird is uncertain: cf. Metr. Ds. i. 6, 23; BB 273 b 28; Silv. Gad. i. 409, 12; supra, p. 438, 10, and p. 464, 1.
  - caisse may be referred to cass 'curled, tangled,' or cass 'swift.'
- Rath Crúachan did not lie in the territory of Cera. Is Cera here a name for the Dagda? see Cormac s.v., and cf. fo Chruaich Cera, p. 464, 65.
  - 13. risin scél, i.e. at Medb's words: see ZCP i. 104, 17.
- 14. ba hairde étrén: perhaps 'it was nobleness robbed of strength': Conall was too old and weak to face his enemies.
- 15. cen écht mbréithre may mean 'without a crime worth words'; cf. ní da bladh breithri aderim sin, Ir. T. iv 903.
- 16. Mag Slecht is a plain in the barony of Tullyhaw, in the north-west corner of Cavan: FM i 43, note. The territory of Breine included the modern counties of Cavan and Leitrim (Onom.). Neither echt nor Slecht has a mark of length in any of the Mss.
- 19. buanna is the reading of L: it does not give a good rhyme, but I can make nothing of the alternative brianna.
- 20. Ath na Mianna has not been identified; but we learn from Aided Ailella ZCP i 105, 8-10) that Conall was killed at a ford where miners were washing ore.

The iron-mines of Sliab in Iarainn, just to the east of Lough Allen in Leitrim, were close to Mag Slecht: one would therefore look for Ath na Mianna on the upper Shannon to the north of Lough Allen.

21. Martin. The usual form is Mairtine, which stands here in L, but this reading will not scan. The rhyme with bale-brig shows that the second syllable is treated here as long. The Mairtine belonged to the Erainn of Munster; hence their desire to avenge Curûi, the hero of the Erainn: see ZCP iii. 41, note 5. They were settled in Limerick and Tipperary (Onom.); in ZCP i. 105, 11, they are called the Mairtine of Fermoy (in Cork): the reference to Crich Bérre in 26 looks as if they were also established south of the Kenmare River. Conall Cernach was Cuchulainn's foster-brother (Ir. T. i. 142, 18), and as such was involved in the blood-feud between Cuchulainn and Curûi.

25. glére: cf. note on p. 288, 44.

31. Goire Conaill is the name given to the tale which introduces Aided Ailella: see ZCP i. 102.

LOCH CÉ.

Now Lough Key, in the barony of Boyle, in the north of Roscommon. Three different prose versions of the legend are found, one in Lc, another in S, and a third in S<sub>3</sub>H. The Lecan copy and the poem are printed and translated by Hennessy in his introduction to the Annals of Loch Cé, xxxvi seq. This prose version supposes that the battle referred to in the poem is the first battle of Mag Tured, known as Cath Maige Tured Conga. But this is plainly an error. This first battle was fought close to Cong on the northern shore of Lough Corrib, fifty miles to the south-west of Lough Key: so that the druid would never have got to the Curlew Mountains, as the prose compiler makes him do, by flying in a south-easterly direction from the scene of battle. The Book of Lecan also differs from the other prose copies in making the lake drown Cé in his sleep.

The prose in H is founded directly on the poem. Here the battle is rightly understood to be the second battle of Mag Tured, known as Cath Maige Tured na Fomórach. It was fought in the parish of Kilmactranny, in Tir Aileila, at a spot somewhere to the east of Lough Arrow, and a few miles to the north-east of Lough Key: see Onom. Mag Tuired na Fomorach: D'Arbois, Catalogue 80: Rev. Celt. xii 52. This version will be found in Stokes' Edinburgh Dindsenchas: it is not included in his supplement to the Rennes Dindsenchas.

The version in S consists of a few lines only, and gives no fresh details.

- 8. imar' forbair: tr. 'round whom it spread.'
- 20. Chuirrslèibe: this is the Irish name of the Curlew mountains. The cairn must have been one of the remarkable stone-heaps which are scattered over Carrowkeel mountain, though this is not now counted as one of the Curlew group. See the paper by R. Ll. Praeger and R. A. S. Macalister in R.I.A. Proc., January, 1912.
  - 27. Translate: 'when he was laid in the cairn of stones.'

LOCH NEILL.

This was the name of a lake somewhere in Mag n'Ai (Onom.).

We have already met the red swine of Drebriu in ds. of Belach Conglais, and of Duma Selga. This poem seems to be founded on a somewhat different form of the legend. The events of ds. Belach Conglais take place in the time of Conaire and in ds. Duma Selga Medb appears, who is Conaire's contemporary: whereas here we have to do with the son of Enna Aignech, who was king of Ireland from A.M. 4888 to 4907 (FM), about 200 years earlier than Conaire according to the chronology of the Four Masters. In the beginning of Tochmare Etaine (Ir. T. i. 117), Enna Aignech is eight generations earlier than Eochaid Airem, who was Conaire's great-grandfather.

Besides the swine are differently represented. In ds. Duma Selga they are persecuted first by a witch-stepmother, and then by the wife of Buichet: they are harmless and amiable creatures. Here they are mischievous and aggressive.

But as to the main points of the legend all three poems and that on Ceis Choraind are in agreement. The swine are men and women transformed by a witch: they are under the protection of Oengus mac ind 'Oc: they take refuge with Buichet of Leinster: they escape from his wife and hide with Drebriu in Sid Collomrach: after the lapse of a year they go westward by direction of Oengus to the Oak-tree of Tarbga in Roscommon: they are chased by the hounds of Medb, and killed at various points in north Connaught.

- 5. selgga sláin: the gender is puzzling: selg so far as I know is always feminine: was it originally neuter? The prose calls Nél tóisech dibergach 'Erenn.
- Conall Crom-derg must = Conall Collomrach (i.e. Conall of Collomair) who reigned A.M. 4876 to 4880 (FM): he was slain by Nia Sedamain, who was killed in turn by Enna Aignech.
  - 12. sráb, cf. note on p. 194, 6.
- rosní: this is perhaps to be compared with sniid uain (see note on p. 90, 24), which seems to mean 'be gone from us!'
  - 22. daire Tharbgai: ef. p. 390, 70.
- 25. ba hord watha: this should be taken as parenthetic; translate 'Nél, who was a sledge of terror, followed their track': cf. ord essoirgne (of a warrior), TBC (Wi.).
- 27. fo thráig, cf. cen taissi cen tráig, Metr. Ds. i. 12. tráig = (1) 'ebb-tide'; (2) 'exhaustion, misery.'
  - 29. aire: put for airech, to make a rhyme.

LOCH CON.

This is a large lake in Co. Mayo, to the south-west of Ballina.

The metre is Rindaird : see introductory note to ds. Carn úi Néit.

- 2. Literally 'which shall not have the peaceful name (sound).'
- 4. ro chriathair, pret. of criathraim, 'I sift,' 'I riddle,' 'I devastate,' Contrib. Cf. French cribler.
- 5. Insi Mod are the islands of Clew Bay, muirech is gen. of muire, 'a chieftain'; cf. Çain Adamnain ed Meyer, p. 46. Mod is the owner of the pack (see prose). Why then is the genitive not Muid? LI. 167 a 40 has cuanart Muid, but the islands are always called insi Mod. Probably Mod is really a gen. pl., and the eponymous Mod is an afterthought.
- 6. co ngibsib: cf. LL 167 a 41 (a stanza at end of prose ds. of Loch Con) rosmudaig muov Mod dia gibis. O'R. has gibhis 'a glen, valley': the original meaning seems to have been fauces.
  - 8. dia n-ilach 'to their lamentation, to the dirge for their death.'
  - 10. tomalt seems to be used in the sense 'ground, crushed': cf. conmelim.
  - 11. maigne: see note on p. 372, 88.
- 14. tenntu: cf. FM vi 2030, 18 Robái tra an gobernóir cona slóg i ttennta 7 i n-iomchumga móir, and Three Shafts, glossary.
  - 15. áirmit: I cannot explain this form: it is presumably a dative after mó.
  - 20. nód feidle: cf. note on p. 242, 20.
  - in fatha, perhaps 'the subject of my poem': cf. p. 346, 100.
  - 21. roimsib: ef. note on p. 344, 87.
  - 23. mairn: cf. note on p. 266, 19.
  - co mucha: i.e. early in life.

LOCH DECHET.

LOCH DECHET is now Lough Gara on the confines of Sligo and Roscommon.

- 4. in sond slechtaide: cf. am sond slaide cach socraid qu. Wi. s. v. sond.
- 5. cuir: perhaps gen. of cor 'covenant.' The word occurs as an adjective (or adjectival genitive) in Mag Rath 162, 13 (of an army) a fidach cuir condlitha translated 'its well-shaped thick-set wood'; also in R.I.A. 23 F 16, p. 92, 35, sa tig dinaid claid-réid chuir: in these passages it perhaps means 'well-knit' (gen. of cor 'plait,' etc.)
  - 8. rot-blad < rofot-blad, ef. Metr. Ds. ii. 26, 5 fri rot-bla 'far-famed.'
- 11. ramuirn: muirn is said to mean (1) 'clamour,' Tog-Trói index: (2) 'high spirit,' etc. Aisl. M. C.: gloss.: Ir. Æneid 1085.
- 12. Aed Ruad mac Baduirn: from him according to one account, Ess Ruaid (Assaroe, near Ballyshannon) is named: see ds. of Ess Rúaid, Rev. Celt. xvi 31.

- 14. Rúad úa Mane Milscothi: in the ds. of Ess Rúaid we have a Rúad ingen Maine Milscoith.
  - 16. riaid-essa = Essa Ruaid.
- 17. Cland Ailella = Ui Ailella, to whom belonged Tir Ailella. But they must have extended much further north than the boundaries of the present barony of Tirerrill if Ess Rúaid fell within their territory.
  - 19. ní rom: literally 'not too soon.'
  - 28. dál: perhaps quite vaguely 'the affair.'

doirthe is pl. of doraid used as an abstract noun: cf. Ir. T. iii. 279.

34. Mag Lunga, 'now Lung, near Ballaghaderreen,' on the eastern edge of Mayo: Hy Fiach. 494.

ARD NA RIAG.

This is now the Castle Hill beside Ardnarea, a village on the Moy, opposite Ballina: see Hy Fiach, p. 34, note, where the text refers to the murder of Cellach. The story is fully told in the Life of Cellach, O'Grady, Silv. Gad. i 49.

- 2. Read ma féta a fir-thomus.
- 4. Read cid mar tharla for tengthaib? but this gives a bad rhyme.
- 7. na gne is probably corrupt.
- 8. Perhaps rather 'since it (the name) has come to be diffused (commonly known).'
- 13. Cellach's father was called Eogan Bél: Eoga does not rhyme, and is no doubt corrupt.
  - 20. roclaen ar; cf. TBC (Wi.) 2354, and note.
- 24. dichennaig is anticipatory, as in Keats' 'So the two brothers and their murdered man Rode past fair Florence.' Cf. LU 100 b 37 bid cia cen chend inti doraga dia chosnum frim.
  - 29. dodair (= fofuair) arach 'found means to bind.'
- 30. This line wants a syllable: possibly we should read dairech, as daire is used metaphorically of a squadron: see note on p. 304, 20, and cf. slúag railgech, p. 428, 39.
- 32. nochor ges: i.e. the treachery of the foster-brothers had released him from all obligations to them: Cuchoingelt was brother to Cellach.
- 34. na hiuidail: nom. pl. for acc. As to iudal 'idolater, heathen,' see KZ xxxvii 252.
  - 36. sochar = so-chor 'a fair bargain.'
- sir-chechrad: cf. Contrib. cechrad 'splashing with mud': here perhaps metaphorically of aspersions cast on their memory.
  - 37. na deadaich = ina degaid.

INBER MBUADA.

As the legend shows, this name should really be Inber Muada (or Muade), the mouth of the river Moy in Killala Bay. The true form is given in the last line of the prose, where Stokes has obscured the meaning by interpolating a B.

8. I can make nothing of damonis: the syllable is gives a rhyme to fis, and alliterates with ainmebair; but I do not know of such a noun.

13. Parthalon is said to have landed first at Inber Sceine in Kerry (LL 5 α 9, Keating i. 158); but the first place where he dwelt was Inis Saimér near the Erne (Keating, ibid.).

15. dam ochtair, i.e. Parthalon and his wife, his three sons and their wives (Keating, i. 158).

is traig = isin traig.

- 17-24. The meaning of these stanzas is not very clear; and I have not found light in the annalistic story. It would seem that Parthalon's followers under pressure of hunger were wandering about, looking for food, and had ceased to obey orders (20), when at last fish were found in Inber Muaide.
  - 19. Cf. roscáich each cert co grian, Metr. Ds. i 28, 6.
- 20. In this line tere and sissaig are probably right, since they rhyme and alliterate: car must then be a noun; is it for cor 'a visit' (Dinneen)? They could find no neighbours to give them food.

22. The singular dar creid (dia rochreit) with plural subject is strange; there may be corruption.

CARN AMALGAID.

O'Donovan, Hy Fiach. 443, finds the site of this carn on Mullaghearn, half a mile from Killala, where there are still the remains of "an earthen fort with round stones of great size placed in a circle on its border." This circle "commands a most extensive view of the country in every direction, also of Killala Bay and of a great extent of the sea": cf. lines 17, 18.

2. don aird-réim should perhaps be construed with Amalgaid; 'A. of the noble line."

Fiachra Ealgach son of Dathi is so called in a genealogical table, Hy Fiach.
 Stokes (Rev. Celt. xvi, 142) wrongly makes 'Elgaid' a separate person.

15. nár' fill ar: this idiom is still in use: Dinneen gives d'reall ré opm 'it failed me.' Cf. clóenaim ar, note on p. 414, 20.

16. ler bind: perhaps for le'rbo bind 'to whom they were sweet.'

20. If slaitni (= slaitne) in the preceding line is right, we should probably read adlaicthe.

27. na foind-fear ' men of the soil, Territorials.'

- 33. O'Donovan, Hy Fiach. 9, identifies Fersat Treise with Fearsad Raith Bhrain 'just under the abbey of Rafran,' which stands about two miles to the north-west of Killala.
- 40. trilis. Cf. Aisl. M. C. 45, 21 cacha tigo ocus cacha trillsi where Meyer translates 'every fold'; trilis 'tress of hair' may have developed a secondary meaning 'wattled fence,'
  - 39. inis: i.e. Inis Amalgaid in Loch Con: see the prose version.
- 43. The name of Mag mBroin survives according to O'Donovan, Hy Fiach. 236, in the townland of Killybrone.
  - 48. is treorach sinn, i.e. 'I am first in the field.'

MAG MUIREISCE.

This was the name of a plain in the barony of Tireragh (anciently Tir Fhiachrach) to the east of the river Moy. Its extent is accurately defined by O'Donovan, Hy Fiach, 257. Muiresc is sometimes treated as masculine, sometimes as feminine: in the poem it must be fem. in lines 8, 24; but seems to be masc. in 37 (if the reading is correct).

- taed-bale: Dinneen has taod 'impulse, wilfulness': ef. taodach 'sudden, inconstant': taodaim 'I revolt,' O'R. Or is the word akin to tôiden 'radiance'? see O'Dav. 1578.
  - 3. bassech, perhaps 'lamentable': see note on p. 336, 31.
  - 5. dóis, g. of dós = dofis, as sós = sofis.
- 9. maigreeh is adj. to maigre 'salmon': as magar = 'fry, spawn,' 1 suppose that maigre means properly the young fish; the 'peel.' Cf. 'san Mumain maigrid, Miss Brooke's Reliques, 270, 1.
- 14. tár-gnó: this seems to be a compound of tár 'disgrace,' and gnóe (gnó) 'beauty' (but the Mss. have no mark of length on tar). O'Cl. has targnó i. tár nó tarcaisne ar ghné.
  - 15. Translate: 'the king of every hue (i.e. God) bestowed it of his bounty.'
- 16. turchur: turchar 'riches' O'R. torchar 'riches, abundance,' Dinneen. The reign of a righteous king was always blessed with plenty: see V. Trip. ii. 507 note.
- 17. rosmairn: here and in 43 mairnim seems to mean 'I inform on, give information about': our 'betray' shows the same evolution of meaning.
- 30. brocc-lomm: I take this to be = brocc-loimm: cf. scéid iterum in loimm sin súas, Cormac s.v. Coire Brecáin. Meyer, Contrib. would read brocc-slamm.
  - 36. Read milaib.
  - 37. Mar thue, so S3: all other texts have ma thuc (ma tug, &c.)
  - 39. The meaning of selt is uncertain: see note on p. 234, 13. railgeeh = 'oak-like,' from rail, ralach: cf. Ir. T. iv. index.
  - 41. cen chur de 'without moving thence.'
  - 45. cid ail, i.e. it was a scandal that its men should be ruled by a woman.

47. 6s mine medaig = 6s mine meda 'smoother than mead.'

M has another poem on this legend, which it did not seem worth while to print in the text.

Muiriase foceard in mhuir mhor . diamadh [dianad] ainm Rosualt romhor : ba hangmaidh in gnim co ngle . dia tairngair Colum Cille.

Tolo mairb-eisc tuili te . re lind Gairbeisc Glunraighe: fobrucht in muir milib elann . fo ceithri hairdib Erenn.

No 'si Muireasc ciar creachach . ingen dia ua deidh-Eachach: ba buaidh a bladh gan cuir cuir . fofuair in magh co mor-muir.

In SS3H the first of these stanzas is interpolated in the longer poem after line 28.

MAG TIBRA.

From the prose version it appears that this was a plain near the mouth of the river Moy; it extended from Borrach to the shore (line 46, below), and the exact position of Borrach is fixed by O'Donovan, Hy Fiach. 262.

19. foill: this seems to be the word (adj. or subst.?) found usually in co foill:

it rhymes with broin.

24. Oenach Crúachan was the burying-place of the kings of Connaught: see Senchas na Relec in Petric's Eccl. Archit. p. 100; according to another document, however, the Tuatha Dé did not bury their dead there, but at Brug na Bóinde: ibid. 106-7.

27. co froig: see note on p. 242, 19.

28. Crích Breis. Mag Tibra is said to be the same as Mag Glass in Tír Breis mac Nealaidh (Nélaig?): see Onom.: so Crích Breis no doubt = Tír Breis; but I cannot find either name in Onom. or Hy Fiach. As the funeral train was moving eastward, it must be to the west of Borrach.

29. Tromaigis is impersonal.

35. cor' chuir: Dinneen gives 'I bury' as one meaning of cuinim. Cf. p. 456, 72, curfes trên-saithe. I do not know whether the verb can have that sense when used absolutely. If so, we must read bein in 36.

38. Literally 'she did not put the host in silence': or possibly 'the host did not bury her in silence.'

SLIAB GAM.

This is the Slieve Gamph range in Sligo.

- 1. The first and third lines of each stauza are octosyllabic, so we must read Eremoin moir for the corrupt Eireamanon, or else suppose a hiatus after gilla.
- 7. The prose has is he rosaraigsead nahamaidi no na maidi im a chenn, showing that the copyist was puzzled by his original.

dothocair (: obair) is perhaps for rothaccair, from taccraim, Wi.

CEIS CHORAIND.

Keshcorran is a hill in Sligo, a few miles west of Lough Arrow. As to the swine of Drebrenn (or Drebriu) see introductory note to Loch Néill.

- 8. ard-mesta: cf. Dinneen, meapon 'estimable,' part. necess. of messaim 'I measure, judge.' Or L's i n-ard-mesca may be right: the gift was made on a festive occasion.
  - 10. túath-chuird: see note on p. 396, 3.
  - 11. Read, I think: adba biged sona 'a happy hospitable dwelling.'
  - 20. timscarad: see note on imscar, p. 134, 22.

CARN CONAILL.

Stokes quotes from BB 30 a 22 sq. a version of this legend from which it appears that Clann Umóir were survivors of the Fir Bolg who had taken refuge in various islands off the coast of Ireland and also among the Cruithne (Picts) in Scotland. In this passage and also in the historical story Cath Cairn Chonaill (ed. Stokes, ZCP iii. 203) Carn Conaill is placed in the district of Aidne, as to which see introductory note to Mag Aidne. O'Donovan, FM i. 260, suggests that the name is now represented by Ballyconnell near Gort in the south of Galway (barony of Kiltartan). There is a copy of the poem in the BB 30 a 44 sq. which is not included in my collation. It differs from the copy in the BB Dindsenchas, and occasionally agrees with L against the other Mss. This text is printed with a translation by Connellan in Oss. Soc. v. 282.

14. Rath Chennaig = Rathkenny in the barony of Upper Slane, Co. Meath (Onom.).

Rath Chommair 'probably at the confluence of the river Boyne with four or five small rivers at Clonard, Meath' (near Navan, Onom.).

- 16. Cnogba Breg = Knowth: cf. ds. of Cnogba, p. 40. Brug mnå Elemair = Brug na Bóinde; cf. p. 36, 25 sq.
  - 17. Oenach Tailten = Teltown in Meath. Cermna, not yet identified.
- 18. Delete the comma after Tlachtga. Hogan gives na tri Findemna as a place-name; but it is really the designation of the three twin sons of Eochu Feidlech, Bres, Nar, and Lothar; Ir. T. iii. 333, Keating ii. 184.

Tlachtga is identified with the Hill of Ward in Meath.

- 19. Divide Ath Sige (Assey, near Tara), Slige Bri Dam (= Bri Dam Dile, now Geashill in King's Co., Onom.).
- 26. Render 'neither more nor less (than four)': the cethri rath in 27 are the same as the curu, and riss means 'to secure this': the prose has tucsat clann Umóir cethra curu fri sodhoin.
- 29. Cet mae Magach is the great Connaught hero. Mag Main = Moenmag: see p. 334.

30. Ross mac Dedad is a hero of the Erainn of Munster.

Druimm Cain: there are several places in Munster so called.

- 31, crúas fo thuind: does this mean that he was all hard muscle under the skin?
  - 41. Loch Cutra = Longh Cooter in Aidne, Co. Galway, Onom.
  - 42. Cimloch or Loch Cimme, now Lough Hacket in Galway.
- 43. Adar's home, according to the prose, was in Mag Adair, now Moyare between Ennis and Tulla in Clare, Onom.
- 44. atagar: tr. 'is planted': cf. Rev. Celt. xv. 481 (ds. of Loch Ri) Ataig Oengus tri prim-phlaga foraib 'inflicts.'

Muirbech = Kilmurvey in Aranmore Island, Onom.

- 45. Hogan s.v. Dael regards Dail as acc. of Dael = the river Deel in Tirawley.
  - 46. Tech Ennaig is not identified.
  - 47. Rind Bera = Cend Bera, now Kinvarra, near Galway.
- 48. Hogan places Modlind in Kiltartan, Co. Galway; but the prose says Modwent to Insi Mod, the islands in Clew Bay.
- 49. Cend Bairne (i.e. Head of Bairenn), identified with Black Head near Lisdoonvarna in the Burren (Bairenn), Co. Clare.
- 50. Iath Aigle is presumably the low country at the bottom of Cruachu Aigle.
- 51. L'aiglinne perhaps near Loch L'aiglinde in Ui mac Cuais (Moygoish in Westmeath): see Onom., Loch L'aiglinde and Ui mac Cuais.
  - 54. Inis Medóin, one of the Aran islands.
  - 55. Tulach Lathraig is not identified.
  - 56. Tomanrind = Rind Tamain = Towan Point, a little south of Galway.
- 60. Druim n-Asail is in the parish of Croom, ten miles south of Limerick. Hogan states that there is a place of the name 'in Ulaid and in Dal n-Araide,' but this is not supported by the passages which he refers to in Acallam na Senórach.
- 62. caible (L's reading) seems = coible 'hospitality': the other texts have caibne = coibne 'kinship,' except BB 30, which reads cia bha saibhre. The meaning is not very clear.
- 70. na dá cairpthech: i.e. Cuchulainn and Conall Cernach. But why not in dá?
  - 74. immerge means 'a horde on the move, a Volkswanderung.'
  - 104. After this line BB 30 interpolates a stanza:

Roadnacht in triar aile . a ndumachaib Findmaighe is de ita enocan na ceand . túas i Raith Umaill imtheand.

- 'The other three were buried in the mounds of Mag Find; hence is named. Cnocan na Cend, northward, in strong Rath Umaill.
- 106. I find no such place as Linn na n-Eices: perhaps the phrase is metaphorical, 'Mac Liae of the Pool of Poets.'
  - 107. I can only guess at the meaning of dothal.

LOCH RÍ.

The tale called Aided Echach maic Maireda tells how Eochaid, son of Mairid, king of Munster, eloped with his step-mother Ebliu, accompanied by his brother Rib (called in this poem Ri). The legend of Lough Ree is there briefly mentioned, and an exactly similar account is given of the origin of Lough Neagh. The story is edited and translated (with certain reserves) in Silv. Gad. i. 233, ii. 265. Our poem supplies details which are not found in Aided Echach. The tale also told in ds. of Tuag Inbir.

M contains a second poem on the same subject, which I have not thought it worth while to include in the text, but it may as well be given here:—

Loch Ri, cred ba fail in tainm . a eolcha Fail re fir-gairm? raidhid ce in Ri o fuil . a eolcha dana in domain.

Ri mac Muireada co mblaidh . do mhuigh Mighi meagar-glain dadaghab [read rogab] aitribh and re headh . a muig n-Airften na n-aingeal.

Gearran robo dedla dhe . damhun a haithli a eire:

darin tipra, ba glan glor . dan mhun mor ina mhedon.

Leathnais in tibra tren . tar mag nAirftean [na] n-ard-sgel: baithis Ri, bha dedla dhe . eidir each is innile.

On rig sin ba fortail feidhm . ainmnnichear he fo Erinn is uadha sin, sloind co moch . ata co dedla in dead-loch.

Loch Rí, whence comes its name, truly given, O ye learned of Inis Fail? Say who was Rí from whom it is called, ye learned poets in all the world!

Rf, son of famous Muirid, of the bright joyous plain of Meath, got a home there for a time in Mag Airbthen of the angels.

A gelding—the braver was he!—when loosed of his burden staled and made a spring—it was theme of talk—of the abundant flow in mid-plain.

The copious spring spread over Mag Airbthen famed in story; it drowned Ri the braver was he!—with his horse and all his cattle.

From that Ri—it was a masterful effort—the lake is named throughout Erin: from him—a title early won—bravely arose the noble lake.

- 3. This line is used also in ds. of Temair Luachra, p. 236, 11.
- 7. For rúamna 'blood-shed' see Metr. Ds. ii. 22, 61.
- búana gen. of búain 'reaping': cf. trí borta búana 'three reaped trusses,' Cath M. Léna 80, 3.
  - 11. trogaig: cf. trog. i. clann; trogais, i. tusmis, Wi.
- 13. Hogan says, referring to this passage, that Belach Liac was west of Loch Ri, but there is nothing here to support this statement. The travellers came up the Shannon in boats (12), and reached Belach Liac (or Belach Da Liac, Silv. Gad. i. 234, 6), where they parted, Eochaid going eastward to Meath, and Ri westward to Mag Finn (also called Tir n-Oenaig Midir), which O'Donovan (Hy Many, 77), identifies with Keogh's Country between Lough Ree and the River Suck.

- 19. romairn: cf. note on p. 266, 19.
- a chrotha cri = cri a chrotha: cri is, I think, really an alternative form of criaid: dat. or acc. of cre 'clay,' cf. sci in line 3, = sciaich dat. of sci. It is usually found in hi cri 'in clay,' i.e. 'in the mortal body,' a phrase of Christian origin.

20, Loch Lindmuine = Loch nEchach (Lough Neagh): see ds. of Tuag

Inbir, Rev. Celt. xvi. 152.

24. romascul: cf. muscul 'onset (?) 'Rev. Celt. xiii. 122.

26. The sense of co roenaib robreth is very doubtful.

28. I cannot explain the allusion. Oenach Oengussa is said by Hogan to be in Mag Find, but also to be near Fremainn, which is near Lough Owel, a long way to the east of Mag Find.

29-30. The construction is very awkward; it seems = in sluag sin do geilt a mbó.

32. tri trath: in the first and second hours their cattle and horses were destroyed: in the third they themselves would have perished if they had not taken warning.

33-4. Punctuate after gnáth, and delete colon after cét-tráth: a mbú, &c., is governed by romarb in 36.

- 41. brothlach is properly 'a cooking-pit': for the metaphor of, deach tonnaid.
- 47. Fuait: I take this to be a place-name, but it cannot well mean Sliab Fuait (the Fews mountains).
  - 48. libedain: O'Cl. explains this word .i. cruidh no clanna.

50. co mór-chaitte: see note on p. 348, 15.

55. O'Cl. has the gloss mual i. mullach, 'ar mual an mhaighe' i. ar mullach an mhaighe.

56. ergaire: cf. LU 58 b 37 ergaire mór-sistaig.

58. imchoss: I have not met this word elsewhere, but the meaning is determined by the context.

62. trachlad: Peter O'Connell's Dict. has trochladh i. sgaoileadh no truailleadh: cf. trochailte 'worn out,' Dinneen.

68. ón seems to be =  $\delta in$ ,  $\dot{u}ain$ : the word is written hzian in Ml. 28 d 12 (so Thurn. Hdb. p. 74).

77. cen rigne: perhaps 'without restraint.'

- 81. Royab fond fo thalmain = royab fotha fo thalmain in the prose.
- 82. fuargg: I keep L's reading, as it cannot well be a scribal error: it is more probably a rare word, for which the other copies have substituted the usual term fúal. I have not seen it elsewhere.
  - 93. cen raind 'without division,' i.e. Rí and every one in his house.
  - 95. fo thráig thái: a metaphorical expression for the silence of death.
  - 103. gestul means something like 'achievement': ef. p. 260, 15; p. 348, 20.
  - 106. ní sóch in sét: the same phrase is used at p. 8, 86.
- 108. ba tairm tacha means something like 'it was an appropriate name,' literally 'sound': cf. p. 344, 93 ba togairm tocha.

LOCH ERNE.

LINES 49 to end of this poem were edited and translated by O'Beirne Crowe in R.I.A. Irish MSS. Series, 1870, p. 186.

- 1. This line is quoted by O'Cl. s.v. oscar, with the gloss is ard lingeas sc.
- 4. find-luain: perhaps 'white-mooned,' but cf. 34.
- 5. Fiachu Labraind (usually Labrainde), king of Ireland, 3727 to 3751.
- 15. brath bacquil 'treachery that gets an opportunity': for bacquil in the sense of 'an opening, an unguarded moment, a chance to injure some one,' see Contrib.
  - 17. cen raind, i.e. over all Ireland.
- 23. ni rosmairn mesce: this seems to mean that, in spite of strong drink, the bard's memory has not betrayed him into confusing the names.
- 24-25. The river Flesk keeps it name; the Mand is now the Maine: both are in Kerry; so the Labrann may also be there: see FM 3751, note  $\alpha$ .
  - 26. samlam: ef. note on p. 274, 55.
  - 28. tairm dar trocha (cf. 75) literally 'a sound (fame) beyond short life.'
  - 29-36. As to these battles see FM A.M. 3751.
  - 31. Béirre = Berehaven, south of the Kenmare River.
- 35. rothatlaig: perhaps from *to-ad-tluchur, which would give Mid. Ir. tatlaigim, as *ad-tluchur becomes atlaigim. The same verb is used in a short poem on Fiachu's reign, LL 18 a 4 = Lec. p. 63 a 33 = H. 1. 15, p. 100.

Rothatlaig tria cheilg . i cath Gatlaig gairg mas Eochach inn airm . Mafemis, ainm n-airg.

O'Cl. has tathlaigh nó rothathlaigh i. docheannsaigh 'he tamed' (tatailcim), which would suit the line just quoted, but not our passage.

- 39. na rusdilgenn: this a strange form, but has much more authority than nachas dilgend.
- 40. It is not obvious why Fiaehu, who was styled King of Beirre in 31, should here be called lord of Fobar, which is in West Meath.
  - 49. chuird, see note on p. 396, 3.
- 51. sārgad is a contracted form of sārugud; cf. Silv. Gad. i. 73, 37; ibid. 361 y. The line seems to refer to the opprobrious name Būredach 'the Bellower' and to mean 'the name (sound) was an insult to the noble . . . ': I can make nothing of -thrin.
  - 53. cen nemain ' without venom,' cf. LL 213 b 21 tuc doib nemain ocus neim.
- 57. Translate 'She had in keeping to her credit': the prose calls her ban-chométaid do chiraib ; do chliórib Meidbe.
  - 64. doith 'sullen, forbidding': ef. dothfer, p. 350, 29.

65-8. taidbsin (for taidbsin) is nom, to rescaindre.

I cannot explain the form of gairbsin.

fo chair, literally 'under reproach.'

75. rothairg 'she (Erne) has acquired,' from taircim.
